Hutton & Co. Accused of Stock Issue Manipulation

European Holdings, Near 7 Billions, Feared as Exchange Threat.

By Robert C. Albright.

Government agencies commenced studies yesterday looking to possible control of the mounting investment of foreign money in the markets of this country, and at the same time moved against an American firm and a dozen individuals accused of stock market manipulation.

The foreign investments in the United States, now total about $7,000,000,000 and are an uncertain factor in stock and foreign exchange markets.

Possibility of legislation to control foreign influx of funds and investments, to prevent potential demoralizing effects on the currency and exchange of this and other nations, and to guard particularly against any sudden withdrawal, was suggested by the President.

This development closely coincided with Securities and Exchange Commission stock market vigilance, brought to light in a charge that the New York Stock Exchange firm, of W. E. Hutton & Co., its eleven members, and H. H. Michels, partner of the firm of William Cavalier & Co., manipulated stock in the Atlas Tack Corporation.

The alleged offenders were ordered to appear December 7 to show cause why they should not be expelled from 14 stock exchanges. It was the first SEC charge of manipulation involving a New York Stock Exchange firm.

SEC Obtains Order.

At the same time, the SEC obtained in Boston an ex-parte preliminary restraining order to prevent eight individuals from alleged manipulation of shares of Suburban Electric Securities Co. on the Boston Stock Exchange.

Uncertain effect of topheavy investments of foreign funds in the United States was emphasized by the President following recent conferences with Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, and Chairman James M. Landis of the Securities and Exchange Commission, both of which agencies are studying methods of controlling foreign purchases of domestic securities—by legislation, if necessary.

When Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., returns to Washington, he also will be asked to look into the matter of unrestricted foreign investments in this country, and the possible dangerous cumulative consequences should they be suddenly withdrawn.

Legislation in Doubt.

Whether legislation is deemed necessary, and what powers would be needed to control the magnitude and type of international capital movements, neither the President nor SEC, Federal Reserve or Treasury spokesmen would say. The only direct methods of control immediately suggesting themselves to observers were a possible unprecedented embargo on foreign gold coming here, or a capital levy on foreign investments. Neither course was even remotely hinted in official quarters here.

The President declined to comment on the current stock market boom, and said Eccles had not discussed with him what one questioning reporter called a "runaway" stock market. Following a call at the White House Thursday, Eccles pointed out recent stock market advances have not been accompanied by expansion of brokerage or bank credit, leaving the implication that the stock market is not going up because of these factors.

Foreign investments enter the "hot money" class, it is said when they reach a point where quantity withdrawal might adversely affect international currency and exchange. He intimated that his principal interest is to pursue the objective of the current tri-partite "gentlemen's agreement" in keeping

Mrs. Simpson Is Off to Country For Week-End at King's Estate

Special Dispatch to The Washington Post.

With Mrs. Simpson was her "Aunt Bessie"—Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, of Washington, D. C., who has just arrived to act as chaperon for her dashing brunette niece.

King Edward, who has been in Portland reviewing the British Navy, was expected to join Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. Merryman and other guests at a week-end party in Fort Belvedere.

While King Edward has seen Mrs. Simpson frequently since she was divorced from Ernest Aldrich Simpson, this will mark the first time the two have attended a formal week-end house party since the court proceedings.

The King's action in having her at Fort Belvedere has strengthened belief in well-informed circles that he plans to marry her.

The journey of Mrs. Merryman to London to be with Mrs. Simpson was forecast by The Post's correspondent. At first, they planned to join each other in Bermuda, but ten days ago Mrs. Simpson, apparently at the request of King Edward, decided to remain in England. Then she cabled Mrs. Merryman to join her here.

Mrs. Merryman arrived at Southampton three days ago aboard the Queen Mary. Mrs. Simpson greeted her warmly at Waterloo station, and they went to Mrs. Simpson's luxurious apartment in Cumberland Terrace, where the Washington woman will live during the winter.

After Mrs. Simpson was divorced recently from her second husband, her inclination was to get away from the fierce publicity, the crowds and the speculation about her marrying the King.

She was particularly upset about the manner in which the American newspapers were treating her, and she accused them of persecuting her.

King Edward, according to his intimates, refuses to become excited. He has no desire to conceal his friendship for Mrs. Simpson and indeed welcomes a free and frank discussion of his affection for the American woman.

He has made up his mind to marry her, these friends say, and wants his subjects to get used to the idea.

President Likes 'Tugwelltown,' Fishes and All

By Sidney Olson.

"Nice fishy-fishy," said President Roosevelt yesterday to four white-bellied, large-mouthed black bass reposing in a wash-tub.

And forthwith two men in gum-boots carried the fish down a rock slope and poured them gently into the shallow, muddy waters of Greenbelt Lake.

Thus figuratively throwing out the first fish, the President gave his benison to one of the most-criticized of all New Deal activities, the $9,000,000 suburban town being built in Greenbelt, Md., by Resettlement Administration to accommodate 1,000 families.

The President's visit to Greenbelt, originally scheduled for several months ago, but withheld because of campaign criticisms of Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, RA director, may be the key to the future of such projects.

Tugwell, who accompanied the President on the inspection tour yesterday, wants to start a number of such projects to accomplish the double-edged objectives of furnishing work for the unemployed and homes for the low-income groups.

President Enthusiastic.

The President, during a brief extemporaneous talk in front of the Demonstration House in the heart of the project, said yesterday:

"Although I have seen the blueprints of Greenbelt, the sight of the project far exceeds anything I dreamed of.

"I wish everyone in the country could see it. It's a splendid thing to have near both Baltimore and Washington. The project is an achievement that ought to be copied in every city in the Nation.

"It's a good thing to get people out into the country, but more than that, it benefits the low-income groups."

Although the project cost is $9,000,000, and although but 1,000 families incomes of which range from $1,200 to $2,000 yearly will be housed at Greenbelt, RA officials were quick to point out that this does not mean a cost of $9,000 per house.

A large and imposing school, a community center, a store center, a sewage disposal plant, a power plant and many other facilities also are being built, and the entire community is laid out to accommodate expansion by three times its present size.

President Roosevelt, with a fresh hair-cut and wearing a new welt-edge gray felt hat, was driven to the Capital Slayer Indicted in 2d Nearby Murder

Prison Clew Said to Point to 'Black Dillinger' Gang Member.

Solution of the murder more than four years ago of Horace D. Waters, aged Germantown, Md., storekeeper, was claimed yesterday by Montgomery County police as the county grand jury indicted Donald Parker, 27, colored, of Washington, for the slaying.

Parker, now serving life imprisonment in the Maryland Penitentiary at Baltimore for the murder of John T. Geary, jr., at Priest's Bridge, in Prince Georges County, was a member of the self-termed "Black Dillinger" gang which terrorized southern Maryland counties in the spring of 1934. His two companions in the slaying of Geary, a barbecue stand proprietor whom they tried to rob, were hanged for the murder last year. Gov. Nice commuted Parker's death sentence to life imprisonment.

Montgomery County police and Baltimore city detectives have been working on the Waters case since the storekeeper was murdered by two colored men who attempted to rob his store on January 20, 1932. They got their first clew several months ago through information which came from the penitentiary. Since then two of three witnesses to the murder have identified Parker as one of the men who shot Waters. The third witness has died.

Parker will be brought to Rockville Thursday for arraignment. He denies any connection with the slaying. Policemen who worked on the case are Chief J. W. Garrett and Sergts. James S. McAuliffe and Roy Bodmer, of Montgomery County, and Det. Sergt. Stewart Deal, of Baltimore.

Yacht Sunk by Blast; Captain, Cook Burned

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 13 (AP).—An explosion on the research yacht Scripps, critically burned Capt. Murdock G. Ross, 50, and Henry Ball, 60, cook, and sank the craft today.

The 60-foot vessel was anchored in the San Diego Yacht Club basin at La Jolla. Fire officials said they had not determined the cause of the blast.

Crew members of the Novia Del Mar, anchored nearby, boarded the blazing Scripps and carried Capt. Ross and Ball to safety. Physicians said their burns may be fatal.

The Novia Del Mar is owned by Robert Scripps, newspaper executive.

Living-Costs Pay Base Hit By Roosevelt

By William V. Neusly.

Proposals that wage boosts and reductions be made conditional upon changes in the cost of living received two setbacks here yesterday.

President Roosevelt, questioned at his press conference, expressed the view that living costs should not be permitted to operate to curb wage increases.

A few hours later, Secretary of Labor Perkins, in the specific case that stirred the controversy, held informally that employe representatives of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Co. had no authority to sign for their fellow employes a proposed wage agreement, one feature of which was the basing of pay cuts and boosts on living costs.

Mr. Roosevelt had said the cost of living should be considered as a factor only in fixing minimum wages, that it should not be the dominant factor where wages are very low.

Cleavage Widens.

The President's view was expressed as announcements came from various parts of the country of wage increases for thousands of employes in numerous fields of industry.

At the same time the bitter cleavage in the ranks of the American Federation of Labor became sharper with a vote by the Metal Trades Department of the federation to sponsor a resolution of expulsion against the 10 unions in John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization. William Green, president of the federation, predicted simultaneously the complete failure of the Lewis committee's drive.

The Metal Trades Department voted further pressure, in the nature of a boycott, against the C.I.O. unions. It adopted a resolution, the Associated Press reported, "to withhold any further support of those organizations, and not to demand their label until they comply with the laws of the A. F. of L."

The resolution also provided "that owing to the fact that Charles Howard, of the Typographical Union, is actively assisting the C.I.O., we refuse use of their label until his organization compels him to cease his destructive operations."

Secretary Perkins' informal ruling was made at the request of two employe representatives of the Carnegie-Illinois Company. The company had offered a 10 per cent wage increase, effective Monday, but attached a condition that during the coming year, wages would be increased or lowered, within a 5 per cent range, in line with the cost of living as shown by the Labor Department's index.

Finds No Authority.

The Secretary said that under the employe representation plan submitted to her, she found no authority for the employe representatives to sign a wage agreement for their fellows.

The workers' representatives, George A. Patterson, of South Chicago, and Elmer J. Maloy, of Duquesne, Pa., wanted to reject the agreement, leaving a flat 10 per cent increase for the workers.

Last night Maloy and Patterson told the Associated Press they were highly pleased with the Secretary's letter.

An official of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation declared at Pittsburgh that he was "amazed" at the statement of Labor Secretary Frances Perkins.

He said:

"The plan has been in successful operation for three years and during that time proposals initiated by both the management and employes have been negotiated satisfactorily.

"The opinion was especially surprising in view of the fact it would involve several million workers throughout American industry, outside those employed by the United States Steel Corporation."

Referring to the two men who

Chest's Fund Is Increased By $147,780

Many Agencies Reported as Having Reached or Passed Quotas.

Pressing steadily toward a $1,900,000 goal, the Washington Community Chest ended its second campaign day yesterday with an additional $147,780.

With more than 800 volunteer workers gathered at the daily luncheon meeting in the Willard Hotel, Chairman Coleman Jennings announced the chest had covered 30.38 per cent of its ultimate quota. Thus far, he said, 16,281 donors have contributed a total of $598,142.79.

"However, we are not moving ahead as fast as we should," Jennings added. "I hope week end efforts will bring us a grand report on Monday."

No Meeting Today.

There will be no meeting today and Saturday's results will not be announced until Monday, Jennings told the workers.

The special assignment unit continued to lead the drive. Mrs. Sidney F. Taliaferro, wife of the former District Commissioner and team captain, reported for the unit. Sixty-eight gifts, she said, totaled $57,843. The unit has now covered 73.81 per cent of its quota.

Group solicitation, 1,897 gifts, totaling $18,377.13.

Many Quotas Reached.

Reporting for the government unit, Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, chairman, announced the following agencies had reached or passed their quota:

Traffic Division, Police Department, Public Utilities Commission, Registrar of the Treasury's Office, Classification Committee, Veterans' Administration, Regional Agriculture Credit Bureau and the Farm Credit Administration.

Chairman Marcey L. Sperry, of the group solicitation unit, announced the following firms and organizations as 100 per cent complete:

D. J. Kaufman Co., Cameo Furniture Co., Council of Social Agencies, Family Service Association, Olds Motor Co., and the Walker Thomas Furniture Co.

Highlight of yesterday's meeting was the arraignment of "Crime"—one of the District's "four public enemies"—before the speaker's table. "Crime," portrayed by Maurice Jarvis, local actor, had his say and then he was indicted by Mrs. Harper Sibley, chairman of the women's committee, National Mobilization for Human Needs:

"Crime" revealed himself as the tempter of impoverished young men and women, who have no chance to better themselves legitimately.

"Stare at me and shudder," he said to Mrs. Sibley.

She assured "Crime" that the citizens of the United States and of Washington are aware of his dreadfulness. She concluded:

"Soon the adequate weapon of money will be in the hands of men and women who care, and who will fight you to the end."

Many Large Gifts.

Among the larger gifts reported yesterday were F. H. Kenworthy, $100; George L. Goodacre, $100; J. Frank White, $100; Col. and Mrs. Godwin Ordway, $100; Col. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, $100; Francis B. Sayre, $100; Rebekah Leiter and E. Lashmutt, $100; Edward L. Reed, $100; John H. Bartlett, $100; Dr. and Mrs. David R. Craig, $100; National Biscuit Co., $100; Wakefield Dairy, $100; Loomis, Sayles & Co., $100; Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, $100.

Associated Retail Credit Men of Washington, $100; Louis J. Wahl, $100; Mrs. Anna Perkins Stewart, $100; Mr. and Mrs. William L. Austin, $100; Mrs. Elsa L. Sandusky, $100; Francis H. Sillabee, $100; Arthur S. Browne, $100; Henry L. Foster, $100; Adam A. Weschler & Son, $100, and Mr. and Mrs. L. E. F. Prince, $100.

7 Fascist Ships Fall in Three Unsuccessful Sky Attacks.

Loyalists Capture 3 Foe Batteries

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Nov. 13.—Hard-fighting defenders of Madrid repulsed Fascist attacks in savage battles on land and in the air today.

Roof-top watchers in Madrid saw four airplanes—three of them Fascist—shot down in whining spins. Four additional insurgent planes, the government announced, were forced down behind their own lines.

Three spectacular air battles over Madrid's streets preceded a sudden infantry counter-offensive which the government said forced the enemy back three miles along the Talavera road, west of Madrid.

At dusk, an insurgent and a government plane crashed after a duel high over the capital. The pilot of the government ship parachuted down behind the Fascist lines. His plane roared down and struck behind a cathedral. The insurgent ship crashed in flames in the Casa de Campo, outside Madrid.

Six Rebel Ships Shot Down.

Earlier, six Fascist warplanes were shot to earth in the first insurgent aerial attack of the day, the government announced.

In swift retaliation, the insurgent bombers reloaded, darted back on Madrid and bombed the Montana Barracks, housing thousands of troops. Then they blasted a long line of [illegible].

Fourteen large bombs streaked to earth in this raid, five of them crashing through the barracks buildings.

Ten speedy government pursuit ships took to the air against the invaders—three bombers and six fighting ships—and drove them off after a spectacular dog fight.

The first aerial battle left the government leaders exultantly proclaiming they at last had "supremacy" in the air.

A dozen Fascist attacking planes, apparently intent on repeating previous deadly bombardments of Madrid proper, suddenly ran into a roaring formation of nine government ships.

City Watches Air Battle.

Throttles open, the opposing pilots dived, barrel-rolled, and fought it out thousands of feet over the heads of gaping Madrid citizens.

Clipping volleys from machine guns in the government ships brought down two Fascist planes in full view of the house-top watchers. Out of control, with motor still snarling, one of the Fascist planes crashed in flames in the courtyard of the government barracks.

The government announced that their pilots pursuing the fleeing Fascists dived on the tails of four other ships, and shot them down behind their own lines.

Officials in Madrid, hailing their pilots as saviors of the capital from another deadly bombardment, announced that 70 new and up-to-the minute fighting planes were in a secret airdrome near enough to Madrid to enable them to take off

Police Question Lila Lee, Son In Suicide Case

Gouverneur Morris, Wife Interrogated; Victim's Mother Doubts Report

By the United Press.

Manhattan Beach, Calif., Nov. 13. Police tonight questioned Lila Lee, former film star, and her 12-year-old son, James Kirkwood, as they revived an inquiry into the mysterious death of 28-year-old Reid Russell who was found with a fatal bullet wound in the head in front of the Gouverneur Morris estate here last September 25.

The boy told Capt. Clyde Plummer of the district attorney's investigation detail he found the body in a garden swing on the lawn of the Morris beach home.

Police uncovered two startling developments through questioning the boy and his mother: First, that there were no bloodstains on the garden swing, indicating the body may have been carried there; and second, that the swing has disappeared since the night the body was found. Russell's death was believed at first to be suicide, but because of several unexplained features, police have reopened the case.

Novelist Questioned.

Morris, noted novelist and great-grandson of the Revolutionary War statesman of the same name, also was questioned by Plummer.

He said young Russell, whose mother demanded reopening of the investigation, declaring she had evidence which "proved my son did not commit suicide," was an "acquaintance of the family."

Plummer also questioned Mrs. Ruth W. Morris.

Cleary Expects Gains in Private Jobs to Void Need for Dismissals.

Dismissals will cut District WPA rolls to 5,500 on January 1 if private industry has not absorbed about 800 workmen in the meanwhile, Commissioner George E. Allen, District WPA administrator, announced yesterday upon receipt of instructions from Harry L. Hopkins, national WPA chief.

Following up his prediction that WPA relief rolls will be reduced by 1,000,000 at the beginning of the next calendar year, Hopkins instructed Allen to cut the District quota from 6,500 to 5,500 and the monthly administrative expense from $17,000 to $15,000.

Actually there are only 6,300 on District WPA rolls at present because private employment has begun absorbing the unemployed. A similar number, however, is engaged on Federal WPA projects in Washington, and it is expected that these will be subject to the same proportional reduction.

Hopes to Avoid Cuts.

William C. Cleary, assistant deputy WPA administrator for the District, said he expects the relief roll to diminish to the 5,500 mark by the end of the year, thus obviating the necessity for any large scale dismissals.

He pointed out that the local WPA list last winter comprised approximately 7,500, with an equal number on Federal projects. Private industry apparently has been responsible for the reduction of some 1,200 in each division or a total of 2,400.

Offsetting anticipated re-employ-

'Brother Fidelis' a Year Ago Was Prosperous Arthur J. O'Rourke.

He is Brother Fidelis at Holy Name College here, who has found a happiness within the bare walls of a monastery which he never knew when he was a young man, of Manhattan.

Then he was Arthur J. O'Rourke, member of the New York Bar, and a prosperous real estate and probate attorney. Still hankering perhaps for the honors of his renounced profession, he asked Frederick A. Thuse to present him to the court and was admitted.

"I get up at 5 a. m.," he laughed yesterday, "about the time I used to be getting to bed. But after you've been with the order a while, those things lose their meaning. I don't miss the fun I used to have. This life is O. K. I've found something much more real."

Brother Fidelis said his decision to become a monk was the result

2 D. C. Residents Escape in Crash, But Land in Jail

Two Washington residents escaped death on the Beltsville grade crossing last night, and then landed in jail.

The men, Samuel Chase, 447 Second street southwest, and Wilbert Johnson, 1116 Fifth street southeast, both colored, were on their way to visit friends in Beltsville when their automobile stalled on the railroad tracks.

Death was rushing down on them in the form of a Baltimore & Ohio passenger train. The car wouldn't move. They jumped out and leaped to safety just as the train roared past.

They were surveying the remnants of the automobile a few minutes later when Corpl. J. F. Blackstone, of the Maryland State police, arrived. In response to his questions, Johnson identified himself as the owner of the automobile and Chase as the driver. Corpl. Blackstone asked to see Chase's driving permit. Chase didn't have one.

Corpl. Blackstone arrested Chase on a charge of driving without a permit and Johnson for allowing an unlicensed driver to operate his car. He took both to the Hyattsville jail.

"Well," philosophized the prisoners, "Friday, the thirteenth."

Mussolini's Socialization of Bar Assailed Here as a Reminder of French Revolution

Premier Mussolini, according to an Associated Press dispatch yesterday from Rome, expects to take over the Italian law courts and put all lawyers on the Fascist state pay roll.

In place of the present courts there will be set up Fascist state committees, the dispatch said, which will replace juries. The lawyers will be permitted to present only the facts, with no histrionics or legal subterfuge allowed.

Although Italian lawyers are reported to consider the reform as "one of the most important changes in twentieth century jurisprudence," all but one of the six local attorneys whose comments were solicited denounced the plan in no uncertain terms.

"The action of Mussolini in abolishing the courts and substituting committees for the settlement of disputes is highly repugnant to the American system of jurisprudence," said Jean M. Boardman, divorce lawyer.

"But the idea is not new to the District of Columbia. The movement to establish a 'Friend of the Court' to settle matrimonial disputes, the proposed legislation to enlarge powers of the Juvenile Court and the recent agitation to create a small claims court are all pointed in the same direction."

Walter M. Bastian, president of the District Bar Association, said he "can't think of anything worse" than Mussolini's proposed abolition of the courts.

"I think it will be comparable to the citizens' tribunal system, with all its horrors, that France adopted during the Revolution."

Neither he nor any of the other five, however, shared Boardman's fear that proposed court reforms here are headed in the direction of socialized legal practice.

Edmund M. Toland, a corporation lawyer, expressed the belief Mussolini's state boards would be "stacked," and no one would get a fair hearing.

"Under that system, citizens would lose their rights, which is the worst thing that could happen to any of us. A truck driver would be the judge one week, an ash man the next. I feel sorry for the Italian people and I hope nothing like that ever happens here."

Jeff Litchenberg, another prominent Washington attorney, was less bitter toward the Italian reform, though he deplored any infringement upon authority of the judge.

"If these State committees are composed of persons with high standards and sound qualifications, the plan is excellent," he said. "When an industrial dispute is at issue, for instance, it is much better to have experts on the subject sit in judgment than a jury that knows nothing about the technical problems involved."

Homer L. McCormick, whose legal practice consists largely of handling financial affairs, predicted Mussolini's scheme would be nothing more than a revival of the old star chamber proceedings in England several centuries ago.

"Whenever you abolish the courts and dispense with the records of public trial, you make it impossible for the people to check upon the action of their judges," he declared. "This is a totally uncivilized procedure, the substitution of government by people for government by law."

"I think our courts are working well enough. We can afford to stick to them a little longer."

Roosevelt Says Old Age Pension Plans Are Fixed

Expresses Hope J. G. Winant Will Return to Post as Board's Chairman.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt said at his press conference yesterday that no important changes are planned in the social security law.

He also said he hoped John G. Winant, former chairman of the Social Security Board who resigned during the campaign so as to be free to answer political attacks on the act, would return to his post.

The old-age pensions, one of three main features of the security act, will be financed by a joint employer-worker tax.

Labor to Discuss Plan.

There has been agitation in organized labor that the entire tax should be paid by employers. The American Federation of Labor, due to hold its annual convention in Tampa, Fla., next week, will consider a proposal to ask Congress to make this change.

The argument used by labor to justify this stand is that employers will pass the tax on to consumers in higher prices for their products, and that workers, as consumers, will pay it in the end.

Other subjects on which the President touched included:

Budget—Work is two-thirds complete. Mr. Roosevelt said he finished reviewing estimates of two departments Thursday and expected to clean up two more yesterday.

TVA—Only minor changes may be necessary in the law next session to deal with population and social problems in the valley.

No Antiwar Legislation.

Neutrality—The President is not framing antiwar legislation.

Business—He has no immediate plans to confer with business leaders.

Labor—New labor legislation is under discussion.

Farm—The President wants a farm-tenant measure passed.

In reply to another question he said he has not received an invitation to attend any conference in London.

U. S.-Europe Trade Rises in September

By the Associated Press.

An increase in United States trade with Europe as a whole during September, but a further drop in transactions with war-ridden Spain were reported yesterday by the Commerce Department.

September exports to Europe were listed at $98,937,000, compared with $97,471,000 for the same month a year ago, while imports from Europe totaled $66,291,000 and $50,015,000 for the respective months.

September exports to Spain were valued at only $245,000, compared with $3,734,000 in September, 1935. Imports from Spain were $526,000 and $965,000, respectively.

By Franklyn Waltman

NOW one year old, the Commonwealth of the Philippines is no longer an infant in the society of nations, even though it remains the baby country of the world. Although still under the protecting arm of the United States, the Filipinos have taken their first steps as a nation and have not fallen.

WALTMAN.

But this child of world nations still remains in swaddling clothes and it is still necessary for its foster mother, the United States, to lend a hand lest the baby come to grief. Even now as the Filipinos celebrate the first anniversary of independence, President Roosevelt is giving long and careful consideration to the appointment of a warder, in the person of an American High Commissioner, to watch over them.

Appointment of a new American High Commissioner to the Commonwealth of the Philippines is made necessary by the election of Frank Murphy as Governor of Michigan. Murphy, still holding the title of high commissioner, guided the newly formed insular government for most of its first year—and reports indicate he did his job well. But it is a difficult task—not one for political hacks.

Those mentioned as possible successors to Murphy are Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, former Senator Harry Hawes, former Representative Butler Hare, of South Carolina and Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who is now in the island as the Commonwealth's first field marshal, establishing a system of national defense.

Attorney General Cummings originally was slated for the Filipino Governor Generalship at the advent of the New Deal, but quickly was switched to the Cabinet when former Senator Thomas J. Walsh died before he could assume the office of Attorney General. Hawes spent years fighting in behalf of Philippine independence. Hare, is a lawyer and a student of rural economics. Gen. MacArthur's military status is one objection to his appointment as High Commissioner.

The Filipinos are deeply concerned over the identity of the American High Commissioner, because the next four years will be crucial ones for the baby Commonwealth and its prospect for achieving economic and political stability depend in large part on adjusting its relationships with this country.

Even now Manuel L. Quezon, the Commonwealth's first President, plans to come to Washington next spring to consult with President Roosevelt in an effort to have ameliorated what the Filipinos regard as economic inequalities of the independence act. Although the export tax, based on a graduated percentage of the American tariff rates, on commodities shipped to the United States does not become effective until the sixth year of the Commonwealth, sugar shipments are now limited to quotas.

Thus the Commonwealth or independence act restricted duty-free sugar shipments to the United States to 800,000 tons of raw and 50,000 tons of refined sugar. This quota is less than the quotas provided in the Jones-Costigan act, and it is estimated that means an effective reduction of the Philippine sugar producing area of about 42 per cent.

In other words, of some 436,000 acres under sugar cane cultivation, only about 268,000 acres may now be utilized, according to a recent study. This restriction in the sugar production of the islands it is further estimated, based on 1933 prices, means a reduction of approximately $27,000,000 in national income—or that much less which the Filipinos have to spend in this country.

The alternative for the Filipinos is to find markets outside of the United States for 600,000 tons of sugar. But the markets of the world already are glutted with sugar. In Java, the third largest sugar producer in the world, the Filipinos will find a strong competitor in seeking to find other markets.

With the United States the Commonwealth's only hope as a sugar market, it is expected President Quezon will make strong representations to President Roosevelt for a modification of this sugar quota. But whether Congress will yield on this point is a debatable question, since the stimulus for Philippine independence came from the beet sugar growers who wished to keep duty-free Philippine sugar out of this market and from dairy interests, which sought to stop Philippine vegetable oil shipments that compete with American dairy products.

* * *

Another question President Quezon is expected to discuss with Mr. Roosevelt concerns the status of Filipinos in this country. It has not been clearly determined, for instance, whether Filipinos should be classified as American citizens or aliens under the requirements of the merchant marine act during the ten-year transition period before the Philippine Commonwealth becomes a fully independent nation.

Still another question—perhaps from this country's viewpoint the most important of all—which may occupy the Presidents of the oldest and youngest republics in the world when they meet is that of American naval bases in the islands and its corollary of an international treaty guaranteeing the neutrality of the Philippines.

With the Washington Naval Disarmament Treaty expiring at the end of this year—and along with it the pledge of this country, Japan and Great Britain, to maintain the status quo in eastern Pacific fortifications—the question of naval bases in the Far East will soon become one of great importance and significance. Observance of the non-fortification clause after expiration of the treaty has been suggested, but this country has held that if any part of the treaty falls, all must go with it.

The Japanese, it is reported, have been diligently seeking to persuade Filipino leaders in recent months that they have no political designs on the islands and that they would gladly sign a neutrality treaty.

Japanese commercial invasion of the Philippines, however, already has become evident, and even the so-called American-Japanese "gentlemen's agreement" regarding Japanese textile exports have not stopped the flood of such commodities to the Philippines where they compete with American products. The "gentlemen's agreement" only had the effect of Japanese filling Filipino orders from their factories in China.

Thus many difficulties confront the Philippines before they become of age as a nation. But on their first birthday, Americans can say to their eldest daughter across the Pacific: "Happy birthday to you."

Head to Discuss Work At Brookwood College

Tucker P. Smith, director of Brookwood Labor College, and Joel Seidman, member of the faculty, will speak at a luncheon today at 1:15 p. m., in Wesley Hall, 1703 K St. northwest. Topic for the luncheon, which is sponsored by the Washington Committee for Brookwood Labor College jointly with the Washington Labor Study groups, will be "Brookwood and the Labor Movement Today."

Since 1921, Brookwood, which claims to be the pioneer residential labor college of this country, located at Katonah, N. Y., has been training labor organizers, journalists and research men.

Dead Baby Discovered In Package in Mails

San Francisco, Nov. 13 (AP).—Postal inspectors revealed today the body of a baby was found in a package opened at the dead letter office in the postoffice. They said that due to its condition they could not tell its age or sex.

The package was addressed to the "St. Mercie Hospital, San Frisco," bore 81 cents postage and gave an Oakland return address as "2745 Maldon." There is no St. Mercie Hospital in San Francisco.

Laurel Treasurer Is Hurt Seriously

John W. O'Brien, 70, town treasurer of Laurel, Md., was in critical condition at Casualty Hospital last night after having been struck by an automobile in Main street, Laurel, yesterday afternoon.

The aged man, who is hard of hearing, walked directly into the fender of the car, which was operated by Andrew Harris, of Baltimore, police said.

The Hyattsville Rescue Squad took O'Brien to the hospital, where physicians, who held slight hope for his recovery, said he had suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Town in Michigan Bans Auto Trailers

Orchard Lake, Mich., Nov. 13 (AP).—Automobile trailers, in which thousands of "modern nomads" have taken to the highways, were banned from Orchard Lake last night by a decision in Justice Court.

Arthur R. Green, justice of the peace, decided in a nationally awaited test case that Hildred Gumarsol, a Pontiac factory worker, had violated village ordinance No. 30 by living in a trailer parked in a "trailer shantytown."

The case was thought to be the first in which action had been taken against America's highway nomads in an attempt to force them to share property taxes with home owners.

requested and obtained the opinion of the secretary, the official said:

"One of these two only recently was discharged for repeated violations of company rules. The other is openly allied with outside interests, openly antagonistic to the employe representation plan. This person now is under the fire of his fellow representatives at at least two plants because of outside connections." Maloy is an outspoken friend of John L. Lewis.

Secretary Perkins declined to rule on legality of the company union plan of employe representation of the United States Steel Corporation and its subsidiaries, including Carnegie-Illinois. She said the question involved issues now in litigation before the Supreme Court and that of the National Labor Relations Board would be the proper governmental agency to review the plan.

Meanwhile workers at two New Castle plants of Carnegie-Illinois Steel joined 34,000 others in the Pittsburgh district, the Associated Press said, in accepting the company's wage raise offer. Employe representative groups at the Shenango works and the tin mill there voted to accept the proposal, leaving three Pittsburgh district mills withholding acceptance.

Action of the Metal Trades Department of the A. F. of L., meeting at Tampa, Florida, in voting to take the lead in battling Lewis' C. I. O. unions, was the day's highlight in the union labor war. The Department instructed its president, John P. Frey, to present a resolution calling for revocation of the charters of the ten "rebel" unions, a move which would cost the federation about one-third of its membership.

Frey was active in bringing about suspension of the "rebels" by the executive council of the federation, meeting here two months ago. The C. I. O. unions were accused of "dual unionism" in their drive to unionize unorganized industries, such as steel and automobiles, along industrial lines, one big union in each industry, as opposed to the Federation's craft union plan.

President Green, taking the offensive against Lewis, hurled defiance at the head of the United Mine Workers, of which Green himself is a member, when he addressed delegates in a series of preconvention sessions at Tampa. He denounced the "traitorous" action that had split the ranks of union labor and what he referred to as the misleading of workers with "vague, unsound and vaporous theories."

He was cheered as he declared the federation would emerge "stronger than ever" after the "eventual collapse" of the Lewis movement. He declared:

"We're going to organize the unorganized of America and we're going to organize them into the American Federation of Labor."

He said he knew that "deep in their hearts" the mine workers, led by Lewis, love the federation, but added that "we're going to deal with this issue not by emotion but by the judgment of our hard heads."

He said that "in all probability" the convention will uphold the executive council in suspending the C. I. O. groups, but added that whether it goes so far as to expel them "depends on developments."

The issue will be referred to the committee on resolutions, headed by Matthew Woll and with Frey as its secretary, he intimated.

The federation president did not take seriously the "summons" he had received from the United Mine Workers, calling on him to explain his activities in connection with suspension of that union, and others. Commenting on the order to show cause why he should not be ordered to "cease and desist" from aiding his union's "enemies," he laughed at the legal terms and said he couldn't be ousted from the union without hearings and a trial.

Passing from the federation dispute, he told the Building Trades Department of the Federation a great building boom is ahead for the country, that the Wagner housing act would pass Congress quickly and that the increase in construction would eliminate unemployment in the building trades, lead to higher wages and improved working conditions.

More than 1,000,000 workers will receive pay boosts as a result of the flood of increases reported in the past few days, a United Press survey was said to reveal.

Crouching Beneath Street Car, Pup Ties Up Rush-Hour Traffic

Homeward Stream Jammed at Ninth and G Streets Until Colored Man Crawls Under Trolley to the Rescue.

A half-grown police puppy, frightened out of its canine wits by a too attentive crowd, brought a rush-hour traffic jam to the vicinity of Ninth and B streets northwest late yesterday.

Trapped in a maze of congested traffic, the bewildered puppy vainly attempted to reach safety by darting in and out beneath the wheels of automobiles. Well-wishing passers-by, witnessing its plight, hurried to the rescue. And then the trouble began.

The pup would not be rescued. Cries of "Here Fido—heah, heah, heah!" and "Come on boy—come boy, come boy!" only added to the puppy's consternation. Cars stalled and motorists yelled. Honking horns brought more trouble.

The terrified pup, its back covered with grease from beneath autos, placed its tail between its legs and scampered under a street car. There, for more than half an hour, it remained in "seclusion;" despite pleadings and coaxing.

A colored man finally crawled beneath the car and dragged "Fido" out. By this time, Policeman R. Y. Hesse, assigned to traffic duty at the corner, was frantic. A radio scout car was called to aid. It took him nearly an hour to bring things back to normal.

The pup was placed in an ash can for safe keeping. A woman wanted to adopt it, but "Fido" would have none of that.

A wagon from the Animal Rescue League finally arrived and with the aid of a rope, the puppy was persuaded to ride to the District Pound.

and meet any attacking planes before they could fly over the city.

The Madrid defense junta tonight warned their fighting forces against "overconfidence."

The commission, appointed by the Madrid diplomatic corps to work out means for humanizing the battle of Madrid, meanwhile, announced it was attempting to get assurances from both belligerents that noncombatant areas would not be unnecessarily bombed or shelled.

To Cut Water Supply.

Gibraltar, Saturday, Nov. 14 (U.P.). Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano said in a radiocast from Seville today that rebel troops will cut Madrid's water supply from the Lozoya Canal because of continued Loyalist resistance.

Madrid, (Saturday), Nov. 14 (U.P.). Premier Francisco Largo Caballero unexpectedly returned to the capital last night from the government's temporary headquarters in Valencia. The purpose of his visit was not known.

Rebels early today captured the villages of Quijorna and Naval Agamella, west of Madrid.

Their easy victory indicated the Loyalists are giving up resistance in the Escorial sector in order to rush troops from there to the defense of the capital.

Warrant Charges Roosevelt Threats

Philadelphia, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—A warrant was issued late today for the arrest of a John A. Bartenback, of Philadelphia, on charges of sending letters threatening President Roosevelt.

The warrant was turned over to U. S. Secret Service Agent Green and County Detective Henry C. Doyle.

It was reported that Bartenback was being held in the county prison here awaiting trial on another charge, and the two officers left for the jail immediately to make the arrest.

Police revealed that three letters were sent to Mr. Roosevelt—two in June and one in August—threatening his life. Authorities checked the missives for fingerprints, police said, and traced them to Bartenback.

Contents of the letters were not revealed.

Dog Flushes 20 Quail In Auto on City Street

Independence, Kans., Nov. 13 (AP). Queen, blue-blooded bird dog, flushed 20 quail on Main street today—and was unceremoniously pitched out of an automobile for her trouble.

The quail were in Ed Hatcher's car. He had obtained them from a quail hatchery for a hunting dog stake. Queen scented the birds, froze on point, then leaped into the car. Hatcher drove rapidly away, quail fluttering about his shoulders. Queen, puzzled, galloped along behind, ready for the next point.

3 Jobs Mapped For Congress By President

Farm Tenancy, TVA Plan, Corporate Tax Revision Head Session List.

Three jobs for the next Congress were suggested yesterday by President Roosevelt and Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, while other Administration leaders set to work on a dozen pressing legislative tasks.

At least six major measures appeared certain of consideration, although the President made it plain that his legislative program would not take shape for many weeks.

He expressed hope in a White House press conference for passage of a farm tenancy bill, providing Federal aid for farm purchases. Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee, already has predicted that such legislation is "assured."

Minor changes in the Tennessee Valley act, placing heavier stress on land use and conservation activities, also received the President's endorsement.

Revision of the tax on undistributed corporation surpluses seemed increasingly probable as Glass, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, announced he favored "some changes" of an unspecified nature in the undistributed corporate profits tax law.

Simplification of the Federal tax structure has been studied for more than three months by a joint committee of the House and Senate.

Other legislation apparently headed for the statute book included:

1. A crop insurance plan, slowly being shaped by Agriculture Department experts and the House Agriculture Committee.

2. New neutrality laws, to replace the present act expiring May 1. Chairman McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, both are drafting anti-war legislation.

3. A relief bill, probably to be submitted by the President late in the session.

Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia), bitter critic of administration relief policies, gave warning today he would demand "a thorough audit" of the Works Progress Administration before additional funds are appropriated.

A dozen other problems will clamor for attention when the session opens January 3, returning congressmen said today.

Much New Deal legislation, for example, will expire in 1937 unless it is renewed by Congress. The list includes the President's authority to devalue the dollar, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's lending power, the Public Works Administration, the Electric Farm and Home Authority and the reciprocal tariff.

Three committees—named by the Senate, House and President Roosevelt—are expected to submit blueprints for a thorough-going reorganization of executive departments.

Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, has pledged himself to press for enactment of a coal bill, regulating prices and trade practices.

Leila Graham Wills Estate of $383,000

Mrs. Leila H. Graham, one-time Washington resident, who died in Paris, France, last October 23, left an estate valued at $383,000 it was shown yesterday in District Court when a petition for the probate of her will was filed.

The will directed that most of the estate be held in trust for the husband, Samuel J. Graham, of the Metropolitan Club, and Laurence S. Fuller, of Paris, France. Both are to receive one half of the income for life. Upon the death of either, the survivor is to receive the whole income.

The will provides also that when the final survivor is dead, the entire estate is to be turned over to the Johns Hopkins University for infantile paralysis research work.

Roosevelt Gets Partial Report Of Co-op Board

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt conferred yesterday with his Commission of Inquiry of European Co-operative Enterprises, and was told it could report within six weeks or two months.

Jacob Baker, of WPA, chairman of the study group, headed the members who called at the White House. He was accompanied by Robin Hood, secretary-treasurer of the National Co-operative Council; Leland Olds, of the New York Power Authority, and Miss Emily Bates, who is in charge of indexing and correlating data obtained by individual members of the commission while abroad.

Members not present were Charles Steuart, of the Export-Import Bank, and Clifford Gregory, editor of the Prairie Farmer.

"It was a courtesy visit," Baker said, adding:

"The President hasn't seen us since we returned from Europe in September, and we thought it was about time we dropped around for him to see what we looked like."

Baker declined to discuss their conversation with Mr. Roosevelt. He told an interviewer, however, that the commission hoped to show "whether the European type of consumer co-operative could be introduced into the American retail economy."

Prior to submitting the report, he refused to comment on whether the consumer co-operative could be "mingled successfully with the farm co-operative of this country and with the private retail store."

Hood, in a statement on October 9, said that "to agricultural co-operative leaders, the concept of a co-operative state or commonwealth is not essential to the fundamental principles of co-operation."

"This vision, in my idea, so far as the public is concerned," he added, "tends to thrust consumer co-operation into a category of social-political doctrines along with communism, Marxism and fascism."

of long consideration. He saw much about him that was ugly and sordid, things that made him unhappy and dissatisfied notwithstanding his success in business. He applied for admission to the Franciscans and served a year at Patterson, N. J., as a novitiate.

He takes his turn with the other brothers in waiting at the table for a week at a time. He studies 22 hours a week, poring over theology, canon law, church history and scripture. His room is a simple one, with an iron cot, a chair and a desk. On the desk is a snapshot of his sister, who is Madam of the Sacred Heart in Albany, N. Y.

"From time to time I study the important court decisions," Friar Fidelis said. "I like to keep in touch with legal movements for the reason that some day I hope to teach law at St. Bonaventure College at Olean, N. Y. Of course, my admission to the Supreme Court was meaningless except as an honor. I will never be called upon to use the privilege unless at some distant date the order should be involved in litigation which would reach that court."

Although his case is unusual, Friar Fidelis said it is by no means unique. Many of the brothers worked in the outside world before entering the order.

"By the way," he chuckled, "we have one of your boys in here, too. He was a former reporter on the Wall Street Journal."

How does he like it?

'Purple Cross' Gang Promises to Disband

Wichita, Kans., Nov. 13 (AP).—Six members of the hooded "purple cross gang," accused of breaking a Wichita university freshman's nose and inscribing a purple cross on his forehead, promised to disband the organization today and were put on probation.

Dr. W. M. Jardine, president of the university, granted probation after investigating Wednesday night's hazing of Earl Tipton, 18, who accused 19 "purple gangsters" wearing hoods.

Police said the six, leaders of the group of upper classmen, in written statements confessed they seized Tipton, took him outside the city, marked him with a purple cross in indelible ink and cut off most of his hair.

Counsel Hides General After Threat to Talk

Mystery of Widow's Death Deepens; Officer Wanted to 'Tell All' in Case.

By the United Press.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 13.—Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, charged with the murder of his fiancee, Mrs. Vera Taylor, 40, was sent into seclusion by his three attorneys tonight to keep him from telling "everything" as he had threatened to do.

Anxious to keep the 60-year-old former Lieutenant Governor of Kentucky quiet until the preliminary hearing November 20, the counsel hid Denhardt in the home of friends after he was released in $25,000 bail. He had been near prostration but was reported "sleeping for the first time."

Simultaneously the prosecution indicated Mrs. Taylor's body might be exhumed for an autopsy to determine depth of penetration of the bullet which killed her last Friday. Defense counsel said they would be present at "every step" of the exhumation and autopsy.

John M. Berry, one of the defense counsel, said it was "physically impossible" for Denhardt to do the shooting as he was 640 yards away when Mrs. Taylor was killed. Denhardt said he left the woman when their car stalled to get aid and when he returned she was sprawled dead in a ditch 250 yards from the car.

Denhardt protested that he wanted to "tell everything" at the inquest yesterday but was prevented by counsel. He was arrested when they refused to let him testify. His 45-caliber service revolver was found by the body and was being held as the death weapon.

He said he had known Mrs. Taylor eight years. It was her brother, Dr. E. S. Garr, of La Grange, who swore out the murder warrant against him.

Session Honors Washington Editor

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP).—The Associated Press Managing Editors Association re-elected Oliver Owen Kuhn, of the Evening Star, Washington, general chairman today and named 18 members to the executive committee.

At the concluding session of their annual two-day convention, the editors voted to meet in New Orleans next year and to lengthen their convention to three days, devoting the addition one to a general discussion of local newspaper problems. The 1937 meeting will be held October 7, 8 and 9.

Suffrage Leaders Gather for Parley

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—Women who led the fight for the right to vote gathered here today for the biennial convention of the National Woman's Party, the chief aim of which is "enactment of legislation guaranteeing to women equality with men."

The Woman's Party is the organization which picketed the White House during the suffrage campaign in President Wilson's Administration.

The immediate goal of the party is an amendment to the Constitution reading as follows: "Men and women shall have equal rights throughout the United States and every place subject to its jurisdiction."

The women leaders have discovered, an official statement said, "The futility of removing State-by-State the more than 1,000 laws discriminating against women."

The convention will continue through Sunday. One of the presiding officers will be Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles, of Wilmington, Del., national chairman of the party, who was sentenced to 60 days for picketing the White House and was pardoned by President Wilson.

Chiefs Tell President About Campaign Chest

By the Associated Press.

Democratic chiefs reported to President Roosevelt yesterday on the state of the party's campaign chest.

Frank C. Walker, chairman of the national committee's finance division, and W. Forbes Morgan, committee treasurer, had luncheon at the White House and then took an early train back to New York.

The two had nothing to add to what previously had been said—that State Democratic organizations had been asked to meet the half-million dollar deficit and that the party probably would be "out of the red" when Chairman James A. Farley returns from his European vacation.

Frieda Hempel Winner In $15,000 Annuity Suit

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—Frieda Hempel, former Metropolitan Opera singer, who claimed August Heckscher had promised to pay her $15,000 a year for life if she would sing at his charitable benefits, won an appellate division court order today directing the capitalist to continue payments.

Through counsel, Heckscher had claimed he was a "victim of extortion," but the appellate division, without issuing an opinion, upheld a Supreme Court order which had the effect of perpetuating the payments and specifically of requiring payment of a quarterly installment of $3,879.

Six stops were made in the project proper. The first was at the entrance to the 3,600-acre tract, where Wallace Richards, Greenbelt coordinator, described the rural aspect of the project to the President, including the 50 part-time farms and the allotment gardens.

The plan of the town itself was then studied from the centrally located mercantile center building. Here, as Hale Walker, town planner, showed the President a large scale-model of the project, with small dark rubber sponges used to indicate trees, an impatient photographer, struggling to get a clear view of Mr. Roosevelt, blurted loudly just as the conversation ceased momentarily:

"That microphone's in my way!"

The third stop, at a completed demonstration house, evoked particular praise from the President. The houses, built seven to a row are small but said to be exceptionally well-designed to admit maximum light. The consensus of reporters who accompanied the President was that the applicants who will be housed in the town, paying monthly rentals ranging from $20 to $45, will be exceedingly fortunate, as these low rents include light, heat and water, provide for town maintenance, reimbursement of the Government and interest and taxes.

Although the town is at present but half-built, in one of the ugliest stages of construction, very little imagination was needed to visualize the spaciousness, charm and simplicity of the completely modern village that soon will be the finished Greenbelt.

Roosevelt Discusses St. Lawrence Project

By the Associated Press.

The proposed St. Lawrence waterway was discussed by President Roosevelt yesterday in a conference with Frank P. Walsh, chairman, and Leland Olds, executive secretary, of the New York Power Authority.

His callers would not comment afterward.

Advocates who want the President to submit a treaty for the development to the new Senate believe changes in the membership of that chamber which once rejected the proposal, have enhanced chances of ratification.

Doors to Open Today at 17th D.C. Auto Show

Sleek, streamlined champions of the 1937 highways will make their debut here today when the Washington Automotive Trade Association unveils 65 new models in Calvert Exhibit Hall at 11 a. m.

Opening of the 17th annual exposition will be heralded by a procession of roaring, sputtering relics of a bygone motor era as they struggle to make the long trek to the exhibition hall, opposite the Shoreham Hotel, from Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

The procession is scheduled to begin at 10 o'clock and it is hoped the 23 antiquated "gas buggies" will reach the exhibition hall in time for the opening ceremonies.

Entries in the "Horseless Carriage Cavalcade" will be judged on the basis of the cars' ages, performance, appropriateness of the occupants' attire with respect to the period represented by their cars. The vehicles that have been entered range in age from 30 to 38 years.

Leading the parade will be a couple dressed in the cycling attire of the gay nineties and riding a bicycle built for two.

Barney Oldfield, veteran race-track driver and now an exponent of highway safety, who arrived in Washington yesterday, will deliver a special radio broadcast from the floor of the automobile show over Station WMAL tomorrow at 4:30 o'clock. William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, and Dick Murphy, manager of the Automotive Trade Association, will participate in the same program.

"Radio Joe" Kauffman announced yesterday he will broadcast his regular Tuesday night program from the floor of the auto show.

Other radio features in connection with the show include a radio trip through the exhibit by Dick Murphy at 7:35 o'clock tonight. Gordon Hittenmark, radio's "Timekeeper," will broadcast his "Question Mark" program from the show Thursday at 7:45 o'clock.

More than 20 manufacturers are represented in the auto show, which will be open daily from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. Tomorrow, however, the show will not open until 3 p. m.

14 Are Accused In Bankruptcy Ring's Activity

Hoover Declares $250,000 Lost by Depredations of Swindlers.

Fourteen "commercial pirates," who allegedly swindled creditors out of merchandise costing more than $250,000 through operations of a bankruptcy ring, have been indicted by a Federal grand jury in New York on evidence obtained by Justice Department men, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, announced yesterday.

The indictment charges the defendants with concealing assets, using the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud and conspiracy to conceal assets.

The case had its origin, Hoover revealed, in failure of the Aetna Sportswear Co. at Boston, Mass., during 1934. Philip Gladstone, who previously had served time in a Federal penitentiary for his participation in a bankruptcy case, was one of the principal factors in organization of the business, investigation revealed, according to Hoover.

Albert Thomas, alias Hugo Berg, former chauffeur for the late Arthur "Dutch Schultz" Flegenheimer, was the "front" man for the business and ostensible owner.

As rapidly as merchandise was received at the Aetna store in Boston it was reshipped to "fences" who disposed of it at greatly reduced prices, the Justice Department said.

A petition of bankruptcy was filed against the firm in November, 1934. When the creditors appeared at the place of business of the firm the premises were completely deserted and devoid of all merchandise, Hoover related.

"When the store was deserted by these racketeers," the F. B. I. reported, "they took the precaution to scrub the floors, walls and shelves in order to remove any of their fingerprints and to eliminate all traces of identification."

Those named in the indictments besides Thomas and Gladstone were J. J. Lesser, Henry Karnig, Harry Wind, Irving Smith, Samuel Kurzwell, David Lowy, George Sabele, Max Berger, Max Helman, Harry Kohler, Harry Krasnow and George Gladstone.

Son of U. S. Aide Dies.

Reno, Nev., Nov. 13. (AP).—Walter B. Scott, 24, instructor in commercial subjects in the Sparks, Nevada, High school, and a son of former Nevada State Senator A. L. Scott, now an attorney in Washington for the Interior Department, died today in a hospital here of pneumonia.

Happy Endings

These are authentic cases taken from files of Community Chest agencies and show how Chest funds have helped some person over a hard spot. Any names, of course, are fictitious.

Phil was one of the tough boys of the neighborhood. His home surroundings were not enviable. He didn't do so well at school. He was almost as well acquainted with the truant officer as with his teacher. He carried a chip on his shoulder all the time and was always ready for a fight.

Phil was the master mind of a street corner gang. Each member was an adept at all the petty meannesses that characterize youngsters of this stamp. The whole gang was fast heading toward the Juvenile Court, when a merchant in Phil's neighborhood took an interest in him and induced the director of the Boys Club of Washington to have a talk with the youngster.

As a matter of fact, Phil joined up with the club under protest. He didn't care much about games. He cared still less about reading, and thought that the various crafts taught in the club were "sissyfied."

And then the director found out how Phil liked to fight. He managed so that the boy was present at one of the boxing matches, when one of the youngsters his own weight apparently defaulted. Phil was induced to substitute for the absent lad, and, without realizing the necessity for conditioning and training, he donned the gloves and climbed into the ring.

Phil took a "shellacking" that night. It took about 10 minutes for him to learn that anything worth doing requires preparation. From that night on he was a changed boy.

The boxing won him an athletic scholarship at a good school. The surroundings of the school interested him in his studies. He worked hard in both directions, boxing and books, and kept in condition at the Boys Club during the summer.

The happy ending?

A few days ago Phil landed a good job with a local firm. He is putting the same training and hard work into the job that he put into his boxing and school. His new boss thinks he is going a long way.

Coroners Jury To Investigate 2 Auto Deaths

Willbanks, Hurley Cases to Be Studied; Accidents on 13th Few.

A coroner's jury today will investigate the cause of two traffic deaths—those of Elijah Willbanks, colored, 55, of 939 F street southwest, and Charles W. Hurley, 40, of 1015 K street northwest. Both died Thursday.

Willbanks was struck by an automobile on November 7. Police said Arthur T. Park, 32, Glen Echo, Md., was driver of the car.

Hurley was injured at Fourteenth and G streets northwest, when struck by a car driven by Dorothy W. Halback, 30, of 2747 Macomb street northeast.

Few Hurt on Friday, 13th.

Meanwhile, few persons were hurt on the proverbially unlucky Friday the thirteenth. John Britton, colored, 29, of 2328 Champlain street northwest, was knocked down by a truck in front of 655 Morton street northeast. He was taken to Casualty Hospital and treated for fractures of both legs. Frederick S. Riley, 62, of 1534-A Third street northwest, was driving the truck said police.

Stanley Beach, of 1220 D street northwest, escaped injury but his car took a dip into the Potomac River.

Beach, employed by a paving company at the foot of Thirty-third street northwest, was cranking his car while the motor was in gear. When the engine started the machine careened about 20 feet into the river. He escaped by leaping aside.

Triple Collision.

Two persons were injured in a three car collision at Fifth and R streets northwest. They are Alice Thomas, colored, 157 Heckman street southeast and Elsie Perkins, 219 I street southwest, also colored. Both were treated at Freedmen's Hospital for cuts and bruises.

The accident occurred when an automobile driven by Mamie Shea, 35, 922 F street northwest, collided with a machine operated by Willie Mae Marsh, 28, colored, of 612 K street northwest. The Marsh machine turned over, striking a truck driven by Mike Lizzi, 43, of 1359 Florida avenue northeast.

Job Follows Sale Offer As a Human Guinea Pig

Jacksonville, Vt., Nov. 13 (U.P.).—An unusual appeal by William E. Bird, jr., who offered to sell himself to science as a human "guinea pig" for $2,500 so he can pay his debts and see his family of four through the winter, brought some results today.

The 32-year-old unemployed stationary fireman was given a job by Harry Murdock, foreman on a State road construction project.

It was understood the job would last only two or three weeks.

Bill Makes Benavides Peruvian Dictator

Lima, Peru (Saturday), Nov. 14 (U.P.).—President Oscar R. Benavides became virtual dictator of Peru today when the constituent Congress approved a bill keeping him in office three more years.

D. C. Man's Guess Good as Farley's

Add to the list of persons who knew President Roosevelt would carry every tate but Maine and Vermont, the name of Harry L. Bushong, a sunburn ointment manufacturer, of 2009 Klingle road northwest.

In the case of Bushong, however, there is this difference. He put his predictions in writing, had them witnessed by Catherine Roach, an employe of the Democratic National Committee, who sealed them in an envelope and put them away in her desk on the day they were made—September 9.

It showed the President taking Pennsylvania by 350,000, New York by 500,000 and Kansas, Illinois and Indiana by an unnamed plurality. Maine and Vermont he guessed "possibly Landon."

Reserve Bank Clerks Outside Security Act

By the Associated Press.

The Internal Revenue Bureau ruled yesterday that member banks of the Federal Reserve System and their employes do not come within the provisions of the Social Security Act.

The bureau based the ruling on exemptions in the act for instrumentalities of Federal or State governments or political subdivisions.

The opinion as to State banks was restricted to those in Texas. Whether the ruling would apply in other States would depend upon the laws of the States.

ment of WPA workers, however, is the seasonal factor, which in past years always has increased the governmental relief load.

Schedules Hearing.

Commissioner Allen also disclosed he had scheduled a hearing on request of the board of public welfare for an $830,000 deficiency appropriation to care for the border-line relief cases now barred both from the dole and WPA.

Elwood Street, director of public welfare, estimates there are 3,000 such cases in which families are destitute.

While the commissioners are sympathetic, they point out that the District's fiscal plight makes any budgetary request futile. The District already faces a $1,000,000 deficit for the current fiscal year, and its 1938 estimates are from $3,000,000 to $7,500,000 beyond anticipated revenue.

Spurt at Finish Brings Victory To Bridge Pair

Mrs. V. A. Clarke, Mrs. M. R. West Rise From 6th to Take Tourney.

Mrs. V. A. Clarke and Mrs. M. R. West proved themselves the women champion bridge players of the District of Columbia when they forged up from sixth position, in the previous session, to win the first event of the Washington Bridge League's annual tournament. The final session of the women's contest was played yesterday afternoon at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mrs. John Evans and Mrs. C. F. Shafer, who were the runners-up in the first game, maintained that position for the series, their score was only one match point below the winners, 180½, to 181½ for Mrs. West and Mrs. Clarke.

Mrs. C. W. Boyce and Mrs. Marian H. Barre, who were leading in the first session, dropped to third place in the finals, with a score of 173½ match points. Mrs. Menne Barry and Miss Frances Skelly moved from seventh place up to fourth with 170 points. The fifth position went to Mrs. Eugene Nolan and Mrs. Betty Kelsey.

The mixed pair event that opened on Thursday evening, attracted a larger attendance than a Bridge League contest. Thirty-eight pairs of men and women players enrolled in the first session. Mrs. Eugene Nolan and C. B. Pennebaker scored 368½ match points, 28½ points above their nearest competitors, Mrs. V. A. Clarke and Roy Thurtell.

Mrs. C. B. Pennebaker and E. M. Jaffee were in third place with 335½ match points; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lemon, fourth, 332 points, and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hamlin, fifth, 317. The final session of this event was played last night. The score was not completed in time for publication in this issue.

The intermediate event for less experienced players also had a first session Thursday evening. Leading in this contest were Mrs. Paul Phinney and J. C. Cook; second, Mrs. R. S. Du Bois and Mrs. T. D. Sheldon; third, M. E. Myers and W. M. Peterson.

The final session of the intermediate contest will be played tomorrow evening.

Over-Confidence.

Over-confidence has been known to spoil many performances both on the athletic field and in games of mental agility. Even experts are apt to err when a hand appears so easy that their mental reaction is "Oh, it doesn't matter how I play it." Few hands indeed are such lay-downs that they can be treated contemptuously, or even nonchalantly.

North had a perfectly sound two bid to start with; he held six honor tricks and less than five losers. His rebid was also on the conservative side. Having started with only one club, he should have attempted to show his great strength by jumping to three notrump over one heart.

When West opened a low spade and the dummy was exposed, the declared saw that nothing short of sudden death could make him lose his contract. This reflection probably explains his subsequent very bad play.

Winning the first lead in the dummy, he laid down the heart King and then jumped to the conclusion that it would be a good idea to establish a club trick on which to discard his losing spade. So he went about this by leading the Ace and King of clubs. He was not greatly disturbed even when West interrupted the proceedings by ruffing the latter, but when the spade was continued and it later developed that West had started out with five hearts, the declarer's chagrin would have been hard to match. He ended up, of course, by losing a spade trick, the diamond Ace, and two trump tricks, including the ruff of the club.

It is difficult to explain the declarer's line of play on any other basis than that he had a brain storm. The effort to establish a club trick for a spade discard appears particularly silly when one examines the diamond situation in the combined hands. Patently, it would have been a much easier and safer process to have cleared away the diamond Ace, thus establishing a diamond trick for a spade discard. Had this perfectly natural plan been followed, the contract would have been made with ease, despite the very bad break in trumps.

Holt Asks Senate Inquiry of PWA

By the Associated Press.

A Senate investigation of the Works Progress Administration before additional funds are appropriated to it was demanded yesterday by Senator Holt (Democrat), West Virginia.

Long a critic of the Federal relief program, Holt said he had completed a "private survey" of relief conditions in more than 15 States.

"We've got to find out where this money has been going," he asserted. "Something obviously is wrong, when private industry absorbs workers at a rapid rate, and relief rolls continue to rise at the same time."

He characterized relief administration in Pennsylvania and West Virginia as "particularly bad."

Lila Lee, Son, 12, Questioned In California Suicide Case

Morris, Novelist and Wife Also Interrogated; Kin Suspicious.

the Morris home for five days prior to the night his body, a hole drilled in his head by a .32-caliber bullet, was found.

She said she telephoned several times and each time was told her son "had already gone to bed" or that he was "all right;" but she said not once during that time was she able to talk with young Russell.

Six weeks after the young man's death had been recorded by police as a suicide, she appeared in the district attorney's office, sobbing demands that the investigation be reopened.

Doubts Gun.

She said information had been uncovered, but not made part of the police record, indicating the .32 caliber pistol he supposedly used to fire a bullet through his head, was rusted and had not been fired recently.

Today, district attorney's investigators discovered among other things:

That the bullet which killed Russell went through his head from right to left and there was a bullet hole in the canvas beneath the wound, but there were no bloodstains on the canvas.

That the bullet which made the hole in the canvas—which may not have been the bullet that killed Russell—was found in a board beneath the swing, but since has disappeared.

That a small clot of blood and a tiny sliver of bone were found on one of the lower flaps of the swing, at some distance from the place where young Russell's head lay.

That the swing itself has disappeared.

Investigators considered the possibility the body may have been carried to the swing from some other place.

LILA LEE.

Morris told police he and Mrs. Morris had "befriended" young Russell, a jobless accountant formerly employed with an automobile company. He spent much of his time at the Morris home, and the 60-year-old novelist said the youth "frequently talked of committing suicide." Morris' wife, a small, attractive brunette, corroborated this story.

On the night of Russell's death, Miss Lee and her son were guests at the Morris home, and the boy informed those in the house that Russell's body was in the swing outside.

Supreme Court To Decide Fate Of Price Fixing

By the United Press.

The Supreme Court yesterday took under advisement four cases involving the fair trade practice acts of California and Illinois. On the outcome may hang future plans of the Administratoin for the revival of the NRA, since both acts involve questions of price fixing.

The court was told that 12 other States have laws similar to, or identical with, the two statutes under attack.

Both laws provide that prices agreed upon in contracts between retailers and distributors shall become the established price of all trade-mark or standardized goods. In event a retailer or wholesaler sells at less than the price established in recognized contracts the injured retailer or distributor may sue for damages or an injunction.

In the California cases, retailers were accused by distributors of selling lubricating oil and cosmetics at less than the established price. The two cases from Illinois involved the alleged sale by retailers of standard brands of liquor at less than the established price.

R. C. Macy & Co., Inc., New York department store operators, have intervened, contending the law is unconstitutional. Associations of book sellers and druggists have intervened, contending the law is constitutional and necessary for the preservation of competition.

Employe Plan Of Harvester Firm Outlawed

Indiana Plant's 'Paternal' Policies Illegal, Says Labor Board.

By the Associated Press.

The International Harvester Co. was ordered by the National Labor Relations Board yesterday to scrap the employe representation plan at its Fort Wayne, Ind., plant on grounds it is "illegal" under the Wagner labor act and provides workers only a "shadow, not the substance, of collective bargaining."

The company manufactures agricultural implements and motor trucks at 13 plants in this country. The ruling applied only to the Fort Wayne factory, however, and was made as a result of a complaint by a local union of the United Automobile Workers of America.

A board statement said the "Harvester company has financially supported the plan to an extent forbidden by the (Wagner) act" and the "management in other ways has extended its influence and support to the point of domination of a supposedly independent worker organization."

The board pointed to aspects of the plan, which, it said, had a proven tendency to have the same employe representatives year after year until "they have come to identify themselves with the management itself" and the lack of "employe meetings where group opinion can find expression."

As specific acts of company domination, the board listed what it called the practice of advising new employes that the Works Council, an integral part of the plan, will represent them in bargaining with the management; payment of all expenses of the plan by the company; commendation of the plan by management officials.

The board added:

"The respondent has controlled the plan at its Fort Wayne works ever since its adoption in 1927, and such control today is a violation of the (Wagner) act."

Credit was given to the company for paternalistic treatment of employes, but the board said the company had improperly made it appear this treatment had been obtained by employe representatives.

Driver Kills Nurse, Then Shoots Self

Richmond, Va., Nov. 13. (AP).—Jane Collins, 26-year-old nurse, and John Moschetti, city ambulance driver, were shot to death on a street here tonight as the result of what Coroner Paul Kimmelstier said was murder and suicide.

Lieut. O. D. Garton, of the city police, said Moschetti seized the young woman as she stood on the steps of her home with a friend, W. B. Landon, who was preparing to escort her to the movies. The ambulance driver dragged Miss Collins across the street, Garton said, and shot her through the head. She died instantly.

Moschetti then turned the gun on himself and died beside the woman on the sidewalk.

The Post Special Nurse Fund For Burned Girl Reaches $202

The fund being raised by readers of The Washington Post for special nursing care for 21-year-old Dorothy Fenwick grew by $103 yesterday, bringing the total to $202.

As Miss Fenwick lay critically burned at Gallinger Hospital last night, there was every indication money would be forthcoming from kind-hearted Washingtonians for as long as her special nurse is needed.

The girl was seared by gasoline flames last month when her mother hurled the liquid at her stepfather as Miss Fenwick was cooking breakfast. The gasoline struck the stove and exploded.

Miss Fenwick can neither talk nor move her hands. Her brother, who earns $22 a week, borrowed all he could on his salary, and when it looked as though all hope for more money was exhausted, contributions started coming into The Post.

Co-ordinator of the fund for Miss Fenwick is Mrs. W. E. Dettweiler, of 3545 Quesada street, who has suggested organizations give card parties and benefits for the injured girl.

George C. Clarke, owner and manager of the Grafton and Ebbitt hotels, called The Post and said yesterday that if funds became exhausted he would contribute to her care.

Yesterday's contributors:

Olga S. Moncure, $5; Anonymous, $2; a member of the Soldiers' Home, $10; Mary A. Crismond, $2; Anonymous, $4; Katherine B. Sherman, $24; Anonymous, $ 0; Anonymous, $10; Mrs. William J. H., $5.

Clark Howell, Sr., Ill.

Atlanta, Nov. 13 (AP).—Clark Howell, sr., editor and president of the Atlanta Constitution and Democratic national committeeman from Georgia, was reported as gravely ill at his home tonight. Attending physicians said there was little hope that he might recover. He became ill of an abdominal condition several weeks ago.

1 Man Killed, 2 Are Injured As Vans Crash

One man was killed and two critically injured early yesterday in a collision between two giant 17-ton freight vans on the Washington-Richmond highway near Accotink, Va. Another man was severely burned while clearing away the wreckage when a self-igniting flare exploded.

Irba Harmon, 26, of Martinsville, Va., was killed instantly and his mangled body thrown clear of the wreck.

His companion, Howard W. Cecil, 25, of Martinsville, received a compound fracture of both legs and is suffering from severe shock. Earl Brent, 35, of Burlington, N. C., driver of the other truck, suffered a fractured skull and other injuries and is not expected to recover. Both men were taken to the Alexandria Hospital by the ambulance from Fort Belvoir.

The crash occurred about daybreak, the impact being heard by garagemen at Accotink about a quarter of a mile away. They found the two trucks interlocked on the west side of the highway.

The trucks were owned by the Bassett Furniture Co., of Martinsville, Va., and the Barnwell Brothers Transfer Co., of Burlington, N. C. The Bassett truck was headed north with a large load of furniture for Philadelphia and the Barnwell truck was going south with a load of general merchandise and freight. Wreckage was strewn along the highway for about 100 yards.

While assisting in clearing the wreckage from the highway L. S. Hodges, of Triangle, Va., was burned when a night flare being pulled from the debris exploded in his face. Instantly his clothing, which was gasoline soaked, caught fire. Others threw him to the ground, smothering the flames with their overcoats. He was rushed to the Alexandria Hospital by the state police.

13 Defy Friday the 13th In Room 1313 at Hotel

Chicago, Nov. 13. (AP).—Thirteen men—huddled in the eerie light of 13 candles at 6:13 o'clock tonight in room 1313 of a Michigan avenue hotel—came to the conclusion: "This superstition stuff is the bunk." They comprised the committee of 13 of the Anti-Superstition Society. Every Friday, the 13th, for five years they have gathered to dine, shatter mirrors, spill salt and open umbrellas indoors, walk under ladders, trail black cats and kick horse shoes around the place.

Science Churches Announce Topic

"Mortals and Immortals" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The golden text is from Romans 8:13.18: "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live:" (John 11:25).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "When being is understood, life will be recognized as neither material nor finite, but as infinite—as God, universal good; and the belief that life, or mind, was ever in a finite form, or good in evil, will be destroyed."

Rev. Schnabel Speaker.

The Rev. George E. Schnabel, pastor, will preach the fifth sermon on great essentials to Christian living at 11 a. m. tomorrow. His topic will be "A Great Essential—the Spice of Life." The sermon subject at the 7:45 p. m. service will be "The Quest for Truth."

Pin Ball Pay-Off Skill, Not Luck, Owners Testify

Ask Permanent Injunction to Restrain Police From Halting Operation.

The question of whether a "pin ball" machine is a game of chance or of skill confronted the District Court yesterday when owners of a hundred such machines appealed to Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue for a permanent injunction to restrain police from interfering with their operation.

The owners obtained a temporary injunction several months ago.

Seeking to make this permanent, they claim their machines are truly games of skill, and that the element of chance is not predominent in their operation. Through Attorney W. R. Lichtenberg, the operators demonstrated that their machines could be "beaten" by persons who took the trouble to study their mathematical probalilities.

The hearing yesterday developed into a steady succession of reputable store owners who had the machines in their places, and who said each machine was productive of heavy income to players each week. This they ascribe to the fact that these players had learned to operate the machines with skill.

Justice O'Donoghue showed unusual interest when it was alleged that school children had been permitted to play the machines.

John J. Wilson, Assistant United States Attorney, and Mr. Lichtenberg agreed yesterday that a full hearing would require several days.

'Work as Usual,' Brandeis' Role On Reaching 80

With his keen, searching mind probing deeply for the realities behind complex legal intricacies, Associate Justice Louis Dembitz Brandeis yesterday observed his eightieth birthday at work on the bench of the United States Supreme Court.

While complimentary messages poured into his home from all parts of the world, Justice Brandeis went about his duties with the modest, unassuming dignity that has marked his career in the Supreme Court for the past 20 years.

Among the birthday greetings received by Justice Brandeis was a message from President Roosevelt, but neither he nor the Chief Executive would make it public Greets Friends.

At the opening of the court at noon, Justice Brandeis nodded his head and smiled at someone who had bowed to him. When court recessed, instead of filing out with the other Justices, Brandeis stepped from the bench to greet lawyers and friends who had come to congratulate him.

It was his only recognition of the anniversary being noted by his friends from one end of the nation to the other.

Among the messages received at the jurist's home was one from Arthur Thomas, negro messenger, who for many years served the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, close friend of Brandeis.

"Congratulations of your birthday and may you live to enjoy many more," said Thomas, now an attendant at the courtroom entrance.

Tribute in Palestine.

In Jerusalem, leaders of Palestine Jewery paid tribute to the Justice as "perhaps the only Jew who belongs to the histories of two peoples, the Americans and the Jews."

Oldest member of the Supreme Court Bench, Brandeis appeared in excellent health yesterday and his bright alert eyes, clear complexion and brisk movements belied his four-score years. He has lost little time because of illness in the past two decades and has appeared at his place every day during the current term.

While he has been eligible for retirement for the past 10 years there was no indication yesterday that he planned to relinquish his place on the bench where he has become a spokesman for liberal doctrine, a supporter of social experimentation and an upholder of much New Deal legislation.

The University of Louisville, Ky., where Brandeis received part of his education before going to Germany and Harvard, however, called a special convocation in his honor yesterday. The Justice has made several contributions to the university located in his native Louisville. One was several packets of papers to be opened after his death. Justice Brandeis opinions, usually filed with the minority in cases involving social legislation, have won him the designation of being closer to the heartbeat of the man in America's streets than any other member of the high tribunal.

Owners Reject Seamen's Offer In Ship Strike

More Walkouts Threatened, Violence Reported in Houston Area.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 13.—Another "last hope" formula for maritime strike peace negotiations went into walkout threats developed on both walkout threat's developed on both sides of the Continent and violence marked picketing on the Houston waterfront.

The seagoing unions offered to negotiate if the employers would grant them control of their hiring halls and accept a modified proposal for penalizing workers violating any agreement to be reached.

Shipowners rejected it flatly and said the opposing sides were "still as far apart as ever on fundamentals."

Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady, who presented the union proposal to the employers, announced the formula would be revamped and resubmitted to the shipowners immediately.

Although both sides have watched for days for possible signs of White House action in the strike, President Roosevelt said no special Federal mediation was planned for the immediate future.

A walkout of 600 textile workers from a San Francisco bag company brought to 11 the number of Pacific Coast strikes in progress besides the maritime strike. These strikes involve 37,000 maritime workers and 9,600 other union members.

Philadelphia longshoremen met to discuss a renewal of their strike after shipowners rejected their demands and brought a week's truce to an end.

Two sailors reported they were beaten and a woman said she was kidnaped in Houston, where a strike of seamen has been in progress for two weeks. A member of the strike committee asked protection from "two New York gunmen" who he said were imported to kill him.

New York leaders of striking seamen asserted they had tied up 274 ships with a walkout of 19,299 men on the East Coast. Shippers said the figure was "too hgih" and at Tampa, Fla., International Seamen's Union officers opposing the strike declared not more than 30 vessels were stopped.

Employer Policies Hit.

New York, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Representative Vito Marcantonio tonight accused shipowners of transporting "gangsters, thugs, hoodlums and bums from all over the country" to New York to use as strikebreakers in the East Coast maritime strike.

Marcantonio, Republican Representative from New York City, who was defeated in November 3 election, told 1,500 insurgent seamen that he would demand that the Department of Justice investigate "every employment agency in New York and the Middle West, too."

"If it's my last act as a Congressman, I'm going before the President of the United States and plead the cause of American seamen," he said.

His address followed by a few hours the arrest of Sam (Chowderhead) Cohen Harris, 47, and four other alleged strikebreakers on charges of vagrancy. Marcantonio attacked strikebreaking activities of employment agencies and said:

"This strike will be won in only one way—that is to tie up every ship on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts."

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 13 (AP).—The Norfolk city jail was invaded today by steamship agents in search of seamen to take the places of strikers on ships whose crews complements were incomplete. Two men who had papers showing them to be able bodied seamen were released from jail when their fines were paid by the agents who sought their services.

Gang Shooting Victim to Face Court Monday

Decision Delayed on Contempt for O'Brien's Refusal to Talk.

Joseph E. O'Brien, alleged victim of a gang shooting last summer, will be brought before Justice Peyton Gordon in District Court Monday to explain why he refused to tell the story of his shooting to the Grand Jury.

O'Brien, summoned as a witness against six men, held by police in connection with the shooting, flatly refused to testify Thursday.

Thereafter, he was sent before Justice Gordon to determine whether or not he was in contempt for refusing to testify. The case went over until yesterday, and then was postponed until Monday morning.

O'Brien was shot by a group of men who, in two cars, blazed away at him in Southwest Washington last July. Since then he has been in the hospital, where physicians said he had been permanently crippled. One of the shots struck him in the knee cap and shattered it, leaving O'Brien unable to use the leg.

When he was brought before the jury he refused to testify and Harry (Spike) Behrle also refused to testify. Both were standing together when the shooting began. It was understood that O'Brien refused to testify because he might "incriminate himself." Justice Gordon will be called upon to say whether he will be compelled to testify or will be excused.

Priest's Prayers Aid Police Search For Body of Girl

Montreal, Nov. 13. (U.P.).—Brother Andre, the "miracle" priest of St. Joseph's Oratory, knelt today beside the Mille Isles River and prayed that the police search for the body of Elaine St. Pierre, 22, would be rewarded.

Detectives have been searching for her body since a week ago Tuesday. They believe she was murdered and her body was thrown into the river.

Unable to make any headway in their search, police went to St. Joseph's Oratory—where many "miraculous" cures are reported to have occurred—and enlisted the aid of Brother Andree, 92.

The old priest went to the bank of the Mille Isles River and scattered religious medallions on the water. Then he asked divine aid in making the search successful.

Miss St. Pierre was a drug-store clerk. She last was seen in the company of Emile Pissiault, 28, traveling salesman, who is being held on a provisional charge of kidnaping. Bloodstains were found on Fissiault's automobile and clothing, but he said he could remember nothing about the evening on which he took Miss St. Pierre for an outing.

Mother Names Kin of Husband As Moses' Father

Pearl River, La., Nov. 13 (AP).—Mrs. Louis E. Crawford, 24-year-old wife of a WPA worker, dispelled the mystery of "Little Moses" today by claiming the woodland babe as her own and naming a relative of her husband as the father.

Mrs. Crawford told District Attorney C. Sidney Frederick the child was born in the back yard of her one-room cabin home Sunday night and that she concocted the story it had been carried there by a dog to conceal its paternity from her husband.

Physicians who examined her today confirmed that she had given birth to a child recently.

Frederick said the man named by Mrs. Crawford as father of the infant vigorously denied her accusation.

The Crawfords have two children, Louis, jr., 4, and James, 2. All four live in the cabin far back in the Pearl River woods.

The baby was named "Moses" by Crawford after his wife told of the baby's being dropped into their yard by a "big brindle dog."

A Result Of Belated Planning.

Washington's fight against the operation of an abattoir in the Northeast section is a good illustration of the special and specialized character of the Capital City. Doubtless many another American metropolis would welcome the establishment of a new industrial plant on economic grounds. It would simply be a question of finding a suitable location. In Washington the almost unanimous opinion seems to be not only that the site chosen for this slaughtering plant is inappropriate, but also that industries of this sort have no place within the Federal District.

Enormous sums are being spent to develop a seat of central government of which the entire country can be proud. Part of that money comes from the pockets of local taxpayers. It is entirely reasonable, therefore, for District residents, as well as Federal and local officials, to resent the establishment here of any plant that would seriously interfere with the attainment of unusually high civic ideals. From the Government's viewpoint it would be absurd to build parks and finance careful housing projects while permitting their usefulness to be impaired by the unfortunate location of a slaughter house.

In these circumstances the Board of Commissioners and other officials are justified in opposing the proposed abattoir project with every legal means at their command. And it may be hoped that the interested company will be willing to waive certain of its rights in return for a community goodwill which is not without commercial value.

On the other hand, it is a serious reflection upon our municipal planning machinery if a question of this sort must be carried to the courts for solution. The zoning regulations should keep pace with the changing character of any section of the city much more closely than they did in this case. Orderly development of the Capital ought to be assured by advance planning rather than by unpleasant fights after plans for an industrial plant have been completed.

If this squabble results in a comprehensive extension of the Zoning Commission's authority to deal with nuisance industries, as now seems assured, it will have served at least one useful purpose.

The Moscow Assignment.

For months now the United States has not been represented in the capital of Russia by an official with rank appropriate to the importance of the post. The ambassadorship left vacant by William C. Bullitt, since named Ambassador to France, has not been filled. Indeed, in a reply to a question put to him at a recent press conference, the President is reported to have said that he did not know whether he would fill the vacancy or not.

This cannot be taken seriously. In view of the obvious importance to our national and international interests of normal diplomatic relations with Russia, the presumption is that sooner or later a new American Ambassador will be sent to Moscow. When the moment for such action arrives, and it is already belated, it is to be hoped that the man named will be both technically and temperamentally qualified for his arduous job.

This was certainly not true in the case of Mr. Bullitt. It would not be true in the case of Mr. Curtis Bok, who, it is reported, is being considered for the Moscow assignment. Regardless of admirable personal attributes, Mr. Bok, even more than Mr. Bullitt, lacks that career-service training and hard-won diplomatic experience which the American envoy to Russia must, under existing circumstances, necessarily have if he is properly to perform his duties there.

Russia today occupies a position of crucial importance, both as regards Europe and the Far East. Russian policies are a vital factor affecting the destinies of two great continents. For the Administration to leave the Moscow Embassy untenanted, or to fill it with an untrained political appointee or diplomatic dilettante, might easily prove little short of disastrous.

This very delicate and vital post obviously calls for an appointee of the caliber and training of John V. A. MacMurray, at present Ambassador to Turkey. Mr. MacMurray's long years of diplomatic experience in Russia, in the Far East and, more recently, in the Baltic states; his demonstrated capacity to remain a dispassionate and accurate observer of trends in the land to which he has been accredited; his successful executive record in the Department of State, and his thorough acquaintance with the functions and duties of an American diplomat—all single him out particularly as the right man for the Moscow assignment.

Six Months Of Operation.

The State Department's analysis of Canadian-American trade during the first six months of operation under the reciprocal trade agreement is an interesting but far from conclusive study.

Great difficulties are encountered in tracing the numerous factors affecting trade between countries, as a whole and in respect to particular commodities. But the department concludes rather easily that the "beneficial stimulus" of the agreement has already become apparent. As proof it cites the fact that trade between the United States and Canada has improved more noticeably since the agreement came into effect than the trade of each country with the world generally.

However, six months is a very short time for testing and passing judgment upon the stimulative effect of the treaty. Certainly the mere fact of trade expansion is not conclusive evidence, since both our import and export trade with the United Kingdom—a country with which we have not concluded an agreement—rose at a more rapid rate compared with the first half of 1935 than was the case with Canada.

Moreover, it is impossible to determine what part of the increased exchange of goods is attributable to the upward trend of business in both Canada and the United States, and what part to tariff reductions. There is abundant proof that the business upturn is responsible for a large part of the recent gains in trade between the two countries.

About one-fourth of the total increase in our imports from Canada during the first half of the current year is accounted for by newsprint paper and paper-making materials, long on the free list. Similarly, wheat imports were responsible for 30 per cent of the total increases in all imports from Canada during this period, although wheat had not been granted any tariff concessions under the agreement. Obviously the drought is the source of this last trade "gain."

We undoubtedly bought more cattle, cheese and other agricultural products because of the tariff reductions. Examination of the figures here is interesting because it shows how grossly exaggerated was the Republican campaign claim that the Canadian treaty is ruining our farmers. The value of increased imports of cattle weighing 700 pounds or more, permitted entry at lower rates under a careful quota system, amounted to only $2,900,000. At the same time our whisky purchases, stimulated by lower duties, increased about $4,700,000.

Examination of the changes in our exports to Canada also reveals the influence of general business improvement, although goods enjoying tariff reductions accounted for about two-thirds of the total increase in this category. But shipments of raw cotton, already admitted duty free, increased, as did sales of various textiles on which duty reductions have been quite moderate. Again, in the iron and steel group, structural iron and steel, on which duties remain unchanged, made the largest gains.

While the stimulative effect of reduced duties is apparent in some cases, the numerous factors assisting expansion of our trade with Canada make it impossible to base any positive conclusions from the data as yet available. The evidence more than suffices to absolve the Department of State from absurd charges that its concessions to Canada are seriously injuring American agriculture. But it likewise prevents the department from laying effective claim to all the credit for the gains which have followed the coming into operation of this or other trade agreements.

Light Or Dark?

American politicians, whatever their faults, know their limitations. During a campaign they may branch out to discuss regimentation of the Passamaquoddy tides or the use of potlicker in Louisiana. But in spite of the academic prestige which professors have lent the New Deal, they have let etymology alone.

This is not because of ignorance of the subject. Certain legislators who in Washington use nearly normal English customarily experiment with a variety of early American dialects when campaigning in rural precincts. Yet they have lagged far behind German leaders in attacking the problem. In order to make their language 100 per cent German, Nazis have decided to cut out words of foreign derivation. Thus the Einstein theory, which its author named the "Relativitaetstheorie," becomes the "Bezueglichkeitsanschauungsgesetz." The few who were supposed to understand it will now probably give up.

One hopes that racial snobbishness will have its limits. For the sake of tourists the word for beer, which is pronounced nearly enough like beer to convince a waiter in Germany, as in three-quarters of Europe, must hold out against Nazi attacks. But Germans, even when advertising, have a weakness for long compounds, Norse mythology and politics. It would not be surprising if this combination should result in beer hall signs referring to the drink in the German equivalent of "Valhalla-derived-Munich-putsch-producing-principal-Bavarian-industry-supporting-beverage."

The Changing Relief Problem.

The march of recovery has substantially changed the nature of the relief problem. When the total number of jobless men was so large that there was no prospect of restoring the majority to permanent employment, emphasis was naturally placed upon suitable relief. Now that industry is once more absorbing large numbers a new strategy is needed. By far the most important consideration is the transfer of men from relief rolls to real jobs.

Administrator Hopkins properly recognized in the present upturn of business an opportunity to shift relief workers back into private employment. His plan is to reduce the relief burden 1,000,000 cases below last year's figure, and cuts to that end are being ordered. If the goal is to be attained by January, however, the recent expansion of work relief due to last summer's drought will have to be thrown into reverse. And if full advantage of the new opportunities for work is to be taken, the entire policy of WPA will have to be carefully revised:

A recent study in New York indicates that only one out of four new jobs takes a man off relief. It is well known, of course, that a considerable number of men seeking work are not drawing aid from the Government. But that does not fully explain the tendency to pass over WPA employes when new workers are sought. In some instances the life of a relief beneficiary discourages efforts to find more arduous employment. Perhaps more frequently employers, knowing the inefficiency and slow-motion habits acquired by many WPA workers, are reluctant to hire them. Whatever the cause may be, it is evident that Mr. Hopkins' organization must now concentrate on the transfer to employment rather than the extension of relief.

This change of emphasis is of the utmost importance to WPA beneficiaries as well as to the public which is supporting them. For the approximately 3,500,000 still on relief it would be a grim tragedy to be left high and dry while the rest of the country surges forward toward full recovery. Their problem is to move from the mud bank where they are stranded into the current of reviving economic activity. And it is clearly a major responsibility of the Government to help them make that move.

If the WPA continues to pay prevailing wages and to encourage actual shortages of labor in some parts of the country, it will tend to frustrate the primary purpose of the Government in extending aid to the unemployed. It will tend to increase rather than diminish the already alarmingly large number of those whose inefficiency makes them virtually unemployable.

Instead of merely making arbitrary reductions in the number of men it sustains, the WPA should be revamping its policies to assist transfers to private employment. The new relief budget ought to be adjusted so as to reduce the spending of Mr. Hopkins in proportion to the expansion of opportunities for steady work. In short, the WPA should be in the vanguard, not the rear, of the movement to restore reliefers to regular jobs.

Reasonable Proposal.

Post-mortems aplenty have been held over the Literary Digest's 1936 Presidential poll. The remains have been mourned by the family and scientifically analyzed and dissected by a variety of unsympathetic practitioners. But it has remained for Senator McKellar to demand exhumation of the corpse on suspicion that its death was due to foul play rather than deplorable accident.

The Senator from Tennessee is noted for his suspicions as well as for his efforts to oust civil service employes from their jobs. But he might have spared himself the trouble of warning the Literary Digest to preserve its books, papers, returns, ballots, etc., for possible senatorial investigation. The painful fact for the Digest is that its forecast cannot be forgotten.

Whatever the differences between Senator McKellar and the Literary Digest it is a fair conclusion that neither dislikes publicity. Under the circumstances a suggestion constructive to both parties would seem to be that the Digest poll its readers on the Senator's proposal to supervise such polls, and then let Mr. McKellar tabulate and announce the results.

A Small-Change Racket.

From the New York World Telegram.

Unsolicited "watchers" of parked automobiles are a plain nuisance. This fact, of common knowledge to any car owner, is being recognized at last by the aldermanic committee now drafting a new traffic code. If they succeed in clearing the streets they will confer a general benefit upon the city.

Watching a parked car is an almost entirely gratuitous and needless procedure. It is an outlet for the energies of young street urchins and a somnolent excuse for adult derelicts. The occasional possible usefulness of it is overbalanced 100 times by the annoyance. But the car watcher still lurks in hundreds of blocks, and drivers find it better to submit than to risk reprisals by refusing. It is a racket.

It wouldn't have attracted Lucky Luciano or Owney Madden, of course. It is a chicken-feed racket, content with dimes and quarters. To put Special Prosecutor Dewey on to it would be like using a shotgun to kill a mosquito. But mosquitoes are a pest. We hope the aldermen and the police are able to chase the watchers off the streets.

Letters to the Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

To Parade Objectors.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was just beginning to settle down today and atune myself to the "era of good feeling" when I happened on three letters in The Post—one signed "Wilsonian Democrat," another "Let-Down Citizen," and the third, "Doubtful New Dealer." All three took a crack at The Post, and for the same reason: They didn't like the suggestion that you made last week that the people of Washington give President Roosevelt a welcome on his return "home" after the election. Heaven help me! After reading them, I am all out of tune again.

The fellow signing himself "Wilsonian Democrat" says that such a welcome to President Roosevelt, while appropriate perhaps in New York or Philadelphia is entirely out of place here. Why? Because, he says, "the Capital City was designed to be a place removed from political partisanship so far as its populace is concerned." He compared the demonstration here to a welcome which the Praetorian Guard might have given a Roman emperor, or to the "arranged welcomes" for Hitler and Mussolini.

"Doubtful New Dealer" warns you against making Roosevelt "an object of popular adoration." And then, after chiding you for trying to jump on the bandwagon, he asks that you start the tom-toms beating again, calling attention to the "very real dangers inherent in Mr. Roosevelt's character and in his tremendous personal popularity."

Yes; you really ought to do that, Mr. Editor. And, while you are about it, you ought to warn parents to keep their children away from the White House egg-rolling next Easter. Of course, the kids here will never be able to vote, but Roosevelt might make partisans out of them anyway.

F. T. SULLIVAN.
Washington, Nov. 18.

Future Of The G. O. P.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In looking toward the future we find a general spirit of co-operation toward the President. The metropolitan newspapers, including those who so vigorously opposed some of the President's policies in the past, are lining up on a common front to aid the Administration so long as it fosters sound legislation and true American principles in Government. The average citizens, including those who registered votes of protest in the recent election, seem to be willing to go along with the President in the hope that he will change some of his programs and revert to more constructive and conservative programs.

The Republican Party still looks to its titular head, Herbert Hoover, who, entirely unwilling to stoop to the low level of mud-slinging, stood by the ship throughout the campaign, and in his forceful and inimitable manner hammered out facts very embarrassing to the New Deal on the anvil of honest thought and constructive leadership. Mr. Hoover, who has undoubtedly forgotten more political strategy than the rest of the Republican organization will ever know, rendered the country and its citizens service of a very high order, and his wise counsel and abundant experience must furnish the chart to guide the Republican organization back to the position of normalcy in the months to come.

In Mr. Hoover lies the future and the hope of the G. O. P., and those who are not yet willing to surrender the two party systems of American democracy will thank the Almighty for his sound leadership and high principles. VIRGINIAN.

Fr. Coughlin's Competition.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is with a feeling of intense gratification and relief that we learn of Father Coughlin's determination to quit broadcasting and give his long-suffering listeners a much-needed respite. Such an attitude is praiseworthy, and should furnish inspiration to and be emulated by all those who have grown accustomed to using their great talents of persuasion to convince themselves of the righteousness of their various and sundry causes.

It is significant perhaps that the fading of the influence of the self-appointed champions of the discontented coincides with the general improvement of the material welfare of the eople.

I should like to offer my explanation as to the reason for the rise in popularity of this gifted public speaker and the subsequent falling off of this popularity. It is this: The American people, by habit and custom and natural predilection, enjoy political speeches; and for a long time, in his celebrated weekly discourses, Father Coughlin practically had this field to himself, particularly in the off-seasons and off-years. The widespread use of the radio in the recent campaign and the plethora of distinguished and talented speakers on political topics furnished overwhelming competition and gave the people a surfeit of this variety of entertainment.

Besides, Father Coughlin was badly in need of an issue, his, by constant repetition, having become slightly shopworn, and if there is anything an agitator needs it is an issue. The victories which Father Coughlin had in the past were due to the fact that the issues were real and not imaginary.

Protests Alien Laws.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The newspapers carry reports that certain Italians who resided in the District of Columbia and who went to Italy, at its expense, to fight against the Ethiopians, are back in the United States looking for jobs. One of them is reported to have placed a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier on Armistice Day.

The Government of the United States and the remnants of the League of Nations regard the conquest of Ethiopia in much the same way as the average American looks upon a hold-up by a gangster or a kidnaping.

It appears there is something radically wrong with our alien laws if resident aliens can leave this country to fight in a controversy on the side of those whom the United States and the world regard as outlaws—and then return to suckle at the breast of the United States.

The deposit of a wreath on the sacred Tomb of the Unknown Soldier is a profanation of the principles for which the Unknown Soldier fought and died. The Unknown Soldier died for reasons utterly opposed to those for which Italy stood in her ravaging of Ethiopia, and he might have been alive today were it not for the rulers who attempted to enforce the same methods recently adopted by Italy.

Pasteur On Spirituality.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I agree with your correspondent that the word "spirituality" cannot be used lightly but when, in their rarity, the quality of a leader's acts have proven themselves spiritual, they cannot be recognized with sufficient virility and reverence.

Louis Pasteur spoke these words at the end of his labors: "Now that I have exhausted all the resources of nature, I have the faith of a coal man; if I should have greater faith, it would be that of the coal man's wife." The coal man and the coal man's wife were, to the mind of the great Pasteur, persons of spiritual light, from the knowledge of whom he, the genius scientist, could receive food for spiritual enlightenment.

Is it too much to presume that a great man and a great President, all in being the means of representing economic security to some, cannot mean that and more—an example of spiritual force—to others?

Conversation With A Voter.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Roosevelt having been swept back into power on the wings of a volcanic upheaval miscalled a landslide, this comment, added to what has been said, may sound superfluous. Leaving out those voting their honest convictions, or those interested directly or indirectly in the perpetuity of their New Deal jobs, it's a safe bet the largest moronic vote in history contributed to the result—a negligible share of it for Landon.

Before election I asked a mechanic on a park bench why he was voting for Roosevelt. "He's give us recovery, ain't he, and kept the common people from starving. I got $1,200 off the New Deal (he didn't say how), not including my bonus. Roosevelt's okay. He's the only guy in the White House ever done anything for the working man. You can tell the world I'm for him."

"But Roosevelt vetoed the bonus twice."

He burned me up with a glare. "D'yuh think I'd 'a' got it off Hoover?" That disposed of that. "And say, brother, you name the banks what's folded up since Roosevelt saved 'em?" Roosevelt had, proudly, discussed that angle of New Deal accomplishment in his latest oration.

My garrulous informant admitted, under close questioning and with beetled brow, he'd "hauled down about 15,000 smackers" in six years prior to 1929, but had "scuttled the tin" by unwise use. Hoover, Mellon and Wall Street were not named as connivers at his destruction. At that time he'd worn no man's collar, but seemingly the latest favors enjoyed are the only ones that count.

As he left to read the "form sheet" and hear Roosevelt's speech, I told him Landon and a Jeffersonian Democrat were speaking the same night. "Say, d'yuh think I'd listen to them guys."

Those 18,000,000 votes for Landon look more and more like a miracle.

Applied Song Hits.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several popular song hits are very applicable to the recent rout of the reactionaries.

"Did I Remember?" I venture that every plutocrat and spokesman for plutocracy in the United States—yes, and all over the world—will remember with a wry face the 1936 election as long as memory continues.

"I Can't Escape From You!" No, indeed, if the forces of entrenched greed address these words to awakened and awakening masses.

"A Star Fell Out of Heaven!" More accurately, several stars fell out of the political firmament and disappeared in the darkness of oblivion. They were already well on their way before election.

"Until the Real Thing Comes Along." Paraphrasing the words of the song, which says, "If this isn't love, it will have to do until the real thing comes along," the coalition that backed Landon may assure themselves that "if this isn't defeat, it will have to do until the real thing comes along."

"You Can't Pull the Wool Over My Eyes." Yip! Election proved that this was the voter thought!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I commend the fine editorial in The Post of November 4—an able and dignified analysis and suggestions as to the future course of Mr. Roosevelt?

I read it at our recent meeting of the Dames of the Loyal Legion and suggested its study to members. Such editorials will be helpful to the people in their own course in the future, which demands the courage and calm judgment of the American people to preserve our Nation.

The Post Impressionist

A Great Preacher.

REVISITING Washington 23 years after must inevitably be fraught with many memories of many sorts to any "Conrad in Quest of His Youth." Rarely, however, have the early twenties of this "Conrad" pleaded so eloquently to be heard as during last Sunday afternoon's memorial service for Dr. Earle Wilfley at the National City Christian Church.

I say "memorial service" because it was exactly that. The usual sadness of a funeral service was almost completely obliterated by the realization that a great and a good man had gone to the rest so magnificently earned by an important job well done.

* * *

It was the closing year of the Taft Administration. I had come to Washington to go to school and had transferred membership from a home church to the Vermont Avenue Christian Church. With the first sermon that I heard him preach, Dr. Wilfley's God became my God. An objective abstraction became a subjective reality.

I had not intended to be particularly active in church work. Having left childhood behind me in a distant State, I had thought to plunge myself into new studies, surround myself with new friends, treat myself to new sensations, enjoy to the full all the thrilling advantages of my first "large city;" in fact, it was my intent to put behind me "childish things."

Earle Wilfley had other ideas. At the merest suggestion from him I found myself active in the Young People's Society, teaching a Sunday school class of small boys, and for nearly five years the major part of my social life revolved around "his" church.

* * *

Many of the major battles of young manhood were fought out with the aid of his sympathetic and silent understanding. How complete this understanding was I did not realize until years later, when I had taken my small daughter to see the magnificent church he had built, and to meet him. With his rare, almost evanescent smile, he made a reminiscent comment concerning those struggles of long ago, a comment so illuminating as to make me realize with a shock how complete had been his understanding of those early difficulties. The personal problems of a young man never become universal to him until the perspective of years makes them so.

I never went to him with any specific problem of my own. It was never necessary. It seemed to me that he always anticipated difficulties that might arise. Some short sentence in a young people's meeting, some eloquent passage in a sermon, and the solution was clear. Young egotist that I was, it never occurred to me that many others were sharing in his loving understanding.

* * * *

Then came the war, with its appalling destruction of spiritual as well as of material values; the decade of the twenties, with what seems now an almost pathological emphasis on tawdriness, and the "depression," carrying within its very misery the hope that real values may once again become important.

Many places, many experiences, many people, much that was unworthy have passed across the screen since those almost mythical years before 1917. But I have never heard a preacher more eloquent, I have never heard English more beautifully spoken, I have never listened to a voice more adequate to carry out its chosen task than during the years when Earle Wilfley had my spiritual well-being in his competent keeping.

His beautiful smile will never fade from the hearts of those whom it has warmed. May God rest his loving soul in peace.

Cheese and Education.

Scholarships for cheeses. No more delightful and appetizing thought has been presented for many moons, even moons made of green cheeses. Taking ideas, perhaps, from Samuel Butler's Hudibras, the Dairy Industries Exposition held in Atlantic City this week offered scholarships to winning members of six college teams who were required to judge the excellence of cheese by sight, smell and taste. They also and likewise judged milk and butter.

Cheese judging is intriguing. Surely the contestants, who were from Rutgers among many universities, recalled their Hudibras if the sponsors of the contest did not. For of Hudibras it was written by Samuel Butler about 1650.

"For he by geometric scale
Could take the size of pots of ale"
Good ale and good cheese ever were congenial bedfellows of whatever college. Though it is not stated the college aspirants to a cheese scholarship, good for a year of dairy research work, were given ale, in pots or otherwise, to aid them in grading what they smelled, tasted or sighted. If good wine needs no bush, perhaps a good cheese needs no ale.

Too many times, alas! have cheeses belied their appearance. Often the sight of Gorgonzola or Cheddar has made the mouth to water, but the sight was not borne out by the taste. There was failure between eye and palate. This may now be corrected by a certificate given by a college cheese tester. Too long has the old adage been hesitatingly harkened to by cheese lovers: "Cheese digests everything but itself." A base libel, doubtless, for though cheese may bring strange dreams, it also brings delights to the wide-awake.

Miamis Get Religion.

ADVICES are to hand indicating that Miami and Miami Beach have got religion this year and are solemnly resolved to exclude gambling houses from their midst and to suppress rackets. That will be an interesting experiment and I hope to watch it because, for a number of years, I have thought that the Florida Pleasure Coast, with a much better climate than that of the French and Italian shore of the Mediterranean, and with more, and, on the average, better hotels, would be an ideal winter haven but for the presence of many of the most notorious police characters of the Mississippi Valley and the Northern cities of the East Coast.

In the first place, they came to spend their fabulous income from the liquor trade, but opportunity knocked and, in no time at all, they were in business and the politicians didn't dare throw them out because they were in business with them. Here was a community which had been a wild frontier only a few years before, built by investors and speculators into a scene of amazing beauty and luxury and now, in a season, its good name had been put into the hands of the underworld of the North in collusion with a few bewildered, small-time local politicians who probably didn't appreciate the character of their new partners.

IT IS NOT FAIR to give an impression that the two Miamis were over-run with hold-up men, however, for crimes of vulgar violence have been uncommon and generally the work of frowsy independents with no standing in the underworld. There are only two roads out, one across the Glades to the West Coast, the other along the shore, a long haul from Jacksonville; the railroad is easily policed and the sea is not good for swimming outside the bar.

So robbery is a dangerous trade, not only in the Miamis, but elsewhere in Florida, as the late Gerald Chapman decided the night he visited Bradley's at Palm Beach and found the exits inadequate. One of the house men at Bradley's recognized Chapman and the staff was ready with shotguns and ball-bats and the sheriff was covering the bridge to the mainland. Mr. Chapman played a few stacks, cashed in and went away and they let him go because they didn't want him, dead or alive, and the sheriff agreed that it would give Palm Beach a bad name to let it be known that Chapman had been around.

• • • •

THAT BEING the situation, it is not necessary for Florida to adopt a workman's exclusion policy or for the Miamis to fingerprint people who move into their midst looking for seasonal jobs in the hotels and restaurants. If these people didn't come to take the jobs the hotels and restaurants couldn't operate at all, and, anyway, there is no reasonable ground to assume that because a man wants to work in Florida there must be something wrong with him, although it does seem peculiar, at that.

John McEntee Bowman, who built one of the best hotels in the State, was a baggage porter, himself, in his youth and liked to say that he first saw New York between the gun-sight ears of a mule hauling a tray around Grand Central. There may be a few Bowmans among the bellhops and waiters today, but they are entitled to the benefit of a doubt as to criminal tendencies, and with good police work they should be easily caught if they do break over.

Similarly, it should be a simple thing to deport the underworld, and I dare say that if the Miamis should fingerprint the crowd at the race track any good afternoon the police would dredge up much more important fish than they will ever catch by humiliating working people.

• • • •

BUT THERE IS no problem of identification, for the racketeers are well known and the local police are highly sophisticated nowadays, in addition to which they usually have the co-operation of detectives on assignment from northern cities. How well they co-operate, however, may be suspected from the fact that hitherto notorious racketeers have been subject to little molestation either on their own home grounds or in Florida.

And possibly, in time, some sections of that sunny land will give a little thought to the idea that ordinary people without enough money for villas, and resort hotels, also get cold in winter and could use a little of that sun. They could hide away somewhere and just be poor in seclusion, and it seems ungenerous and harsh of a rich State, so blessed by nature, to put turnstiles on the border and charge admission to the sunshine.

Heavy Reading Matter

By William Lyon Phelps

A 10-lb Book.

I have enlisted for the duration of the war; I am engaged in making war on books that are horribly, accursedly, and unnecessarily heavy in weight.

Thirty years ago books published in Great Britain were usually light in weight and books published in the United States of America correspondingly heavy. So true was this that I often picked up a book, stated instantly whether it were English or American and never got it wrong. In the year 1904 I reviewed for a scholarly periodical E. K. Chambers' monumental work in two big volumes, called "The Mediaeval Stage." I was interested not only in the contents of this treatise, but in the physical weight. Although they were big and fat, they were delightful to hold in the hand, they were so light. It was a pleasure to read them.

• • • •

Years ago a historical work was published in this country; it was a work that had cost its author years of preparation. It was given to a young man on the New York Sun to review. His review consisted of five words:

This book weighs ten pounds.

The day the review appeared, the great editor of the Sun, Charles A. Dana, sent for the young man to come to his office. The youth went, fully expecting to be expelled from the paper. Mr. Dana asked, "Did you write that review?" "Yes," said the youth. "Your salary is raised."

About the year 1904 I began a campaign in America for light books. And for a number of years there was an enormous improvement in American books. It was no longer possible to tell merely by lifting it whether a book were American or English in origin.

• • • •

This blessed state of affairs lasted until about five years ago. Now it is impossible to tell whether the book is British or American, not because both nations publish light books, as was the case 10 and 20 years ago, but because they both publish heavy books. The British are now as bad as we used to be, and we are worse than we were 20 years ago.

Here is a new book that has just come into my hands—both hands; because I could not hold it very well in one. It is not a large book, but it weighs exactly four pounds.

To read many modern books is not a literary, but a gymnastic exercise. They appeal more to athletes than to lovers of reading. To carry three or four of them in a suitcase while traveling is a hideous undertaking; to send them by mail requires a large income; to read them in bed——But who would?

• • • •

Now, it is not necessary to perpetrate these monstrosities. It is quite possible to manufacture books that are light. A heavyweight book is devoid of charm; it is repulsive.

I give the prize for the most attractive book in lightness, in paper, in type, that I have seen in two years, to a novel called "The Bazalgettes." It contains 383 pages, is printed on dull paper, in enormous type; and the publisher's name is Hamish Hamilton, 90 Great Russell street, London, England. A child could hold it for an hour between two fingers. It weighs 15 ounces.

Steel Wage Increase

Study Of New U. S. Steel Contracts Reveals No Certain Victory For Principles Of Collective Bargaining.

By Smith Simpson.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE WAGE INCREASES recently announced in the steel industry create a number of questions for both the workers who are directly affected by the increases and for the C. I. O. which is busy with plans for the organization of the industry. The increases have ostensibly been "negotiated" with the workers. They have not been handed down in the form of a decree of boards of directors. They have no fixed time limit, but are to fluctuate with the cost of living so as to increase when the cost of living increases and decrease when the cost of living decreases. They seem, therefore, to have been arrived at in a reasonable way and to be governed by a reasonable standard.

The impartial student of labor conditions in the steel industry, however, finds himself confronted by a number of questions also in connection with this situation. The first of these is: What is the nature of this contract which the subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation have made with their employes?

One of the gains which these contracts might contribute to the improvement of wage conditions in the steel industry would be to stabilize the wage rates and prevent arbitrary changes by the boards of directors of the companies. Has this actually been obtained by the contracts? Final judgement must be reserved until the contracts have been exposed to public scrutiny. Contracts without a time limit are, as every lawyer knows, terminable at will. The employe can terminate them whenever he desires, and so can the employer. If the wage contracts do not provide for mutual negotiation, should either side desire to terminate the contract little has been gained, in actuality, in the stabilization of wage conditions in the industry.

Contracts Provide No Wage Certainty.

THE CONTRACTS may fail in still another way to provide a stabilization, or a rationalization, of wage conditions in industry. Contracts may not only be terminated; they may be broken. If the new contracts do specify a definite time limit during which they are to continue in force, they still can be broken.

Should this happen, the matter could be carried to the courts, but it is more likely that such an event would result rather in labor strikes and disorders than in the more moderate course of legal procedure to redress a contractual wrong.

The reason for this is that a wage contract is more than just an ordinary contract. This has long been recognized by the courts themselves. It is the foundation of the existence of those who are employed and of vital concern to them. Unless there is some way of substituting reasonable action for arbitrary action in a matter which so frequently in the past has separated life from starvation and which determines the extent and security of a worker's income, workers cannot reasonably be expected to acquiesce in wage cuts in an orderly way.

If the steel contracts do not provide for some kind of wage boards or other procedure for the hearing of wage questions, it would seem that the employers have not been genuinely interested in providing workers with an orderly procedure for the analysis, negotiation and modification of wage rates, but have chosen to retain the ultimate power in their own hands. This, again, would lead the impartial student to suspect that the contracts are, in the eyes of the lawyers, terminable at the will of the employers and on the score cannot be viewed as a particularly stabilizing factor in the industry.

Employer Holds Whip In Privilege To Fire.

WAGE CONTRACTS are open to evasion in still another way. They do not need to be terminated; they do not need to be broken. More basic to the situation of an employe than a wage contract is his contract of employment. A wage contract, unless it specifically is a contract of guaranty in which the employer guarantees a wage to his employes no matter what happens, presupposes employment.

It says to the worker, in effect: "This is the wage I shall pay you as long as I employ you." There is nothing in a strictly wage contract which obligates the employer to employ the other party. Thus, the power of employment becomes a mighty weapon in the hands of one of the parties to a wage contract.

The wage increase may be avoided by dismissing workers unless they agree to relinquish their rights under the wage contracts. Wholesale dismissals would not be necessary. Economic power is mightier than the law. Enough men could be let go to convey the meaning of the employers, and there are convenient pretexts ever at the hand of an employer for this purpose. Inventories can be run up and plants or departments of plants shut dwn. The men would no longer be "needed."

But whatever methods were used, the workers could be made to understand that if they were not prepared to work for less they could no longer expects employment; and there is nothing in the law, nor is there any possible provision in any contract, which would forbid the parties to the old wage contract from entering a new contract to supersede the old one.

WHETHER a worker receives one wage or another is not an insignificant thing in his life. Such men live on the wages they earn. But workers regard the way in which wages are determined as equally significant. If the wages are arranged through agreement which is genuinely mutual that is one thing; if they are a "hand out" by the employer, that is another thing. What is handed out can always be taken back. What is agreed upon in a process of genuine collective bargaining cannot be withdrawn arbitrarily. Numerous press reports of the recent wage contracts in the steel industry treat these contracts as having been negotiated between the wokers and their employers. But to one familiar with labor conditions in the steel industry it is clear that the representatives of the workers who sat in on the negotiations were representatives of the company unions fostered and nursed by the employers.

Whether such representatives genuinely participated in a collective bargaining process or were simply stage setting for the employers is a matter not ascertainable by this writer, but he has very lively doubts upon the subject. In an industry which has fought genuine collective bargaining with money and violence, the presumption must be that no genuine collective bargaining has existed in this situation. In any case it is hardly accurate to state, as has been stated in a number of newspapers, that the wage increases have been "obtained" by the company unions.

There is no evidence which can be found by the impartial student of labor conditions in the steel industry indicating that the company unions have been able to obtain any substantial improvement of any labor condition in the industry. This is not to say that no such improvement has been made. It is only to say that no such improvement is known to have occurred through the pressure of company unions. The history of this wage advance is that it has come about solely at the initiative and volition of the employers. But even if the company unions had "obtained" this advance, it has been clear that their employers have not resisted it.

The test of effective collective bargaining is not whether workers can obtain what their employers are willing to give but whether they can obtain what their employers are unwilling to give. Such a situation does not exist today in the steel industry. It is, therefore, impossible for the impartial student of labor affairs to join in the numerous expressions of jubilation over the "new vision" and the "new intelligence" in the steel industry which the recent wage increases do not necessarily attest.

Italian Quits Parley Because of Ethiopian

Jerusalem, Nov. 13 (AP).—Count Quinto Mazzolini, Italian consul general who walked out of a royal British Palestine Commission meeting yesterday, demanded an explanation today for being seated next to a "person defined as the Ethiopian counsul." The demand was lodged with Sir Arthur Grenfell Wauchope, British high commissioner for Palestine.

Count Mazzolini left the session after being assigned a place next to an empty chair reserved for the Ethiopian delegate, Consul General Wolbe Gabriel, who did not attend.

Pax Americana

By Barnet Nover

At Buenos Aires.

AT BUENOS AIRES, next month, a paradox may come to life. The whole may prove greater than the sum of the parts.

On the agenda of the inter-American conference are a series of proposals ranging from the furtherance of intellectual co-operation among the 21 republics of this hemisphere, to the establishment of an American League of Nations.

Obviously there will be little time for the delegates to give detailed examination to any of the suggestions. With equal certainty can it be said that the more ambitious proposals will, either because of their ambitious nature or because they conflict with policies already being pursued by the nations, be set aside for further study. Yet, however minor the concrete accomplishments of the conference may be, and that is a possibility that must be taken into account, there is a real prospect that it may score a great success. The imponderable gains may overshadow the tangible.

• • •

PEACE CONFERENCES, Secretary Hull pointed out on the eve of his departure for Buenos Aires, are of two kinds. There is the kind that follows a war. Such conferences, as a rule, contribute little to international good-will and harmony. The Paris parley of 1919, if a glaring example, is nevertheless not untypical. There are, however, conferences along the lines which operate at Geneva, called into being to further a state of peace already in existence. Of this kind, Mr. Hull avers, is the forthcoming parley in the Argentine capital.

With this Americans will generally agree. Relations between the United States and the Latin-American republics are at the moment extremely happy. The once suspicious attitude toward the Colossus of the North has largely disappeared. The "good neighbor" policy of the Roosevelt Administration is not viewed south of the Rio Grande as a new form of Yankee imperialism. It is taken at its face value. After all, there is no mistaking the trend apparent in the withdrawal of American Marines from Haiti and Nicaragua, in the abrogation of the Platt amendment, in the new United States-Panama treaty and in the reciprocal trade agreements. At the same time this hemisphere, since the end of the Chaco war, has been at peace.

This is obviously the time to consolidate that peace; to strengthen the barriers against war, to foster in the Americas those practices which make for good relations. That, perhaps, was in President Roosevelt's mind when, last January, he formally proposed the conference. At that time he suggested that the meeting should consider whether peace in this hemisphere might be made more secure through the ratification of existing treaties, their amendment in the light of experience or through the creation of new "instruments of peace additional to those already formulated."

Since then a whole flood of more specific suggestions has come from the participating nations. The hopes which the Buenos Aires gathering have aroused are high. At a time when the horizons of Europe and the Far East are so thickly covered with the storm clouds of war the prospect of a meeting of American nations, held in an atmosphere of serenity rather than of suspicion, is one that has kindled imaginations.

• • •

IT MUST BE pointed out, however, that the premise to begin with is not that the present happy state of inter-American affairs will necessarily be continued.

After all, the Chaco war, and the Colombian-Peruvian imbroglio, that almost led to war, are facts to be taken into account. What was can be. In other words, no conferences, even those designed to consolidate a state of peace already in existence, can have any point or purpose if war can be ruled out as an impossibility. Canada and the United States do not have to hold any such conferences for that very reason.

But when we begin to envisage the possibility of war arising in this hemisphere, even if we do so only for dialectical purposes, we run smack against those very difficulties which the history of the League of Nations and of international relations in the post-war period generally, have revealed in such abundant measure.

Both the effort to outlaw war simply by getting nations to say they have done so and the more ambitious and more realistic measures taken by the League to penalize an aggressor have failed. But the failure of the League certainly does not mean that we need any additional Briand-Kellogg pacts.

Any addition by the Buenos Aires conference of new "instruments of peace" would therefore be superogatory. Yet the Buenos Aires conference can do much to achieve its intended purpose of fostering the spirit of peace in this hemisphere. It can do so by encouraging the habit of mutual forbearance, the readiness to co-operate, which lies at the very foundations of peace.

From that point of view it may prove a success, however minor its tangible accomplishments may be. And from that point of view a visit by President Roosevelt, dramatizing as it would, the American will to peace, might prove eminently worth while.

Gold reserves and currencies of European nations have been affected in the past by activities of private groups or syndicates, he said, pointing to attacks on the French franc in the last few years. He said the "gentlemen's agreement" had largely eliminated this influence, and the problem turns on other disturbing factors.

Seek "Cause," Not "Effect."

In Federal Reserve quarters it was said the problem being studied is largely one of dealing with the "cause" rather than the "effects" of the expansion of foreign investments in this country, but the problem still is in the study stage.

As gold moves into this country, it passes through the banks, reflecting itself in increases in excess reserves, and is stored by the Treasury. In return for it, the foreigner receives dollars, which he has been using, to a large exent, to buy domestic securities.

In treating the "effects" of this movement, the Federal Reserve Board already has moved margin requirements up to 55 per cent. The board, further, on July 14 increased the legal reserve requirements by 50 per cent, eliminating as a basis of possible injurious credit expansion a part of the excess reserves created by inflowing gold.

As the gold inflow continues, excess reserves once more are on the upgrade, and now stand at around $2,260,000,000. The Reserve Board studies thus are directed at means of minimizing these large flights of capital, which ever since the depression began have had a dislocating effect all around—both on the nations which lose this capital and the countries which gain it.

Neither the Federal Reserve Board nor the Treasury fears some orderly retreat of gold from this county. In fact, it would be welcomed as a healthy development. Some exodus was anticipated following the three-power stabilization agreement, but it has never developed.

In a letter to Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, on September 25, Secretary Morgenthau said a return flow could be expected as European political disturbances dissappear, as European monetary problems are solved, and as foreign economic factors improve. He said such events "would be an excellent thing for the United States, as well as for the world."

SEC Watches Purchases.

Chairman Landis, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, said yesterday that for six months his commission has been keeping a daily check on foreign purchases on United States exchanges, and they are "pretty well distributed" between countries.

Landis said the SEC has no direct means of combating a sudden withdrawal of foreign funds, should that develop, or any legislation presently in mind. While the commission can regulate American brokers investing abroad, it has no control when this situation is reversed, except through general regulations to curtail stock exchange trading. One possible method of limiting trading would be for stock exchanges to impose a rule similar to that in effect on grain exchanges, under which trading stops when prices exceed a given range. He conceded the commission is a "little more alert" because of present stock market activity.

Evidence of this was forthcoming when the SEC made its first charge of manipulation on the New York stock exchange against the brokerage firm of W. E. Hutton & Co., and Michels, a California broker. Ordered to show cause why they should not be expelled from exchange membership, they were charged with creating a "false and misleading appearance of active trading" in Atlas Tack Corporation common stock, which allegedly was pyramided in price from $9.50 to $30.25.

Hution Issues Denial.

From Cincinnati, Ohio, James M. Hutton, sr., president of W. E. Hutton & Co., issued a flat denial, according to Associated Press.

"There is, in our judgment and in the opinion of our attorneys, absolutely no basis for this charge against the Hutton Co. or any of its members," Hutton said. "It seems that the commission thinks there is a manipulation whenever a stock goes up or down—but the law of supply and demand is what really determined the price of Atlas stock. We never had any reason to want to manipulate it."

At the same time, offices of W. E. Hutton & Co. in New York issued a statement denying "they had ever engaged in any transaction of a false and misleading nature, or that they had ever attempted to manipulate or influence the market price of the common capital stock of the Atlas Tack Corporation as charged by the commission."

Associated Press dispatches quoted the brokerage house as welcoming public hearings so it would be able to "establish its complete innocence." The brokers said they felt "aggrieved" after 50 years of existence to be confronted with charges made on the basis of an examiner's report, without any opportunity on their part to see it or answer it, before the charges were made public.

The SEC in its order charged the brokers had entered matched orders and had engaged in "wash" sales. It was charged that in order to create "a false and misleading appearance" in the market for the stock, purchase orders were entered "with the knowledge that orders of substantially the same size, at substantially the same time, and at substantially the same price, for the sale of such security, had been or would be entered by or for the same or different parties."

It was further alleged that the brokers used the mails and other instrumentalities of interstate commerce in a series of transactions in the Atlas stock, "creating actual and apparent active trading in such security and raising the price thereof."

The commission said purchase was induced by means of information disseminated "to the effect that the price of the stock of Atlas Tack Corporation would rise because of the market operations of a group of persons conducted for the purpose of raising the price" and charged numerous statements were made that were "false and misleading with respect to material facts."

The W. E. Hutton & Co. partnership includes James M. Hutton, James M. Hutton, jr., John Christie Duncan, Charles N. Foster, Joseph A. Hall, Carroll V. Geran, George C. Riley, W. E. Hutton, 2nd, C. Kenneth Smith and Joseph A. W. Iglehart. The firm has membership on eight exchanges, including both the New York Stock Exchange and curb. Michels' firm was not included in the charges. He holds membership on six exchanges, including the New York Stock Exchange and curb.

As the SEC busied itself with its variety of functions ranging from stock market vigilance to holding company law administration, Chairman Landis took time out to explain to reporters his views on foreign investment implications. He said he thought foreign money was flowing here because Europeans considered the American market relatively "safe."

A somewhat similar explanation of the influx of foreign funds was given by Secretary Morgenthau in his recent letter to Senator Vandenberg, who had pointed out the "peril" of so large an amount of funds on "foreign call."

Morgenthau explained the capital movement in this direction was due to return by Americans to this country of some short term funds and investments they had made in previous years, and transfer of foreign capital, largely inspired by "political and economic fears, monetary uncertainty elsewhere, and a wish to invest in American securities because of the prospect of economic improvement in the United States."

"If unrestricted foreign investments in the United States be deemed undesirable, the only effective check is legislation which would grant the proper authority adequate powers to control the magnitude and type of international movements," Morgenthau wrote.

Michels Denies Charge.

Oakland, Calif., Nov. 13.—H. H. Michels, Oakland, Calif., broker, issued a statement tonight denying he was connected with any pool operations in Atlas Tack or any other stock.

Michels and the firm of W. E. Hutton & Co. were charged by the Securities Commission in Washington today with manipulating stock.

Michels said that at various times he corresponded with W. E. Hutton & Co. in connection with the stock of Atlas Tack Corporation and said he believed it was because of this correspondence that his name was connected with the case.

Frat Head Disapproves News Workers' Unions

Dallas, Nov. 13 (AP).—Carl P. Miller, president, told Sigma Delta Chi, national journalistic fraternity, in convention today he did not approve of unionization of newspaper editorial employes.

"Sigma Delta Chi represents all branches of the profession," Miller said. "It should act as a common meeting ground for employe and employer, by accepting a standard, but it should never become involved in direct negotiations between any given employer and employes."

D. C. Man in Dispute For $5,000,000 Estate

Madison, Wis., Nov. 13 (AP).—The will of Mrs. Agnes Wahl Nieman, widow of the founder of the Milwaukee Journal, leaving the bulk of her $5,000,000 estate to Harvard University School of Journalism, today was before the State Supreme Court.

Arguments were heard on an appeal by two uncles and a half aunt of Mrs Nieman, Fred Wahl, of Washington; Robert Wahl, of Chicago, and Paula Pierce, of Chicago, who are trying to break the will.

Judge M. S. Sheridan, of Milwaukee County, has ruled Mrs. Nieman was "competent" when she executed the document.

War Note to Hungary Sounded by Rumania

Vienna, Nov. 13 (AP).—A stern warning any attempt by Hungary to regain the lost lands of her war-carved domain would be met by resistance came tonight from Ion Inculets, Rumanian minister without portfolio. Inculets' statement, aligned with Rumanian fears of an attempted "resurrection" of the once powerful Austro-Hungary dual monarchy, followed the new tri-power accord, backed by Italy, proclaiming Austro-Hungarian "right to rearm."

Army Proposes Seaplane Base At Midway Isle

$500,000 Harbor Recommended for Use of Transpacific Service;

By the Associated Press.

A seaplane basin at lonely Midway Island, one of the Navy's outposts in the North Pacific, was recommended yesterday by the chief of Army Engineers for use in Pan-American Airways' transpacific service.

Although described by Navy officers as primarily a commercial project, its potential value from the standpoint of national defense also was stressed.

A prediction was voiced in other well-informed quarters that similar developments at Wake Island and Guam might be proposed later. With Midway, they form the landing stages of the Pan-American route between Honolulu and the Philippines.

Japan recently announced its intention to open a commercial airline to its mandated islands, westward of Midway, where large-scale commercial harbor development has been in progress for some time.

Cost $500,000.

The Army Engineers surveyed the Midway project in compliance with a resolution of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, through which all appropriations for rivers and harbors projects must pass.

In his recommendation to the committee, Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, Army Engineer chief, estimated costs at $500,000, plus $15,000 annually for maintenance. Committee employes said his recommendation probably would be submitted to the next Congress.

Markham reported that a sheltered basin where seaplanes could land in safety was "considered essential to the maintenance of a regular schedule" between the United States and Asia.

In view of "the importance of a dependable transpacific air service" and "heavy expenditures" already made by the Pan-American Co., he said, the project is warranted at Federal expense.

Navy Agrees.

The proposed basin would be 1,200 feet square, dredged to a depth of 8 feet and protected by breakwaters where its channel leads to the sea.

The Navy, which has jurisdiction over Midway, gave its assent to the proposed development. One officer said that while the basin as specified would be too small for the concentration of a large number of planes, the Navy "naturally is interested in the development of any activity which may have potential military value."

Midway, which lies 1,500 miles westward of Honolulu, is described as an almost deserted atoll, where the Pan-American Co. is building a supply depot and a hotel for the accommodation of transpacific passengers. A lighthouse has been erected. The Commercial Pacific Cable Co. also has a relay station there.

World Labor Lists D.C. Textile Parley

Geneva, Nov. 13 (AP).—President Roosevelt's invitation to the international labor organization to hold a world textile conference in Washington, D. C., was accepted by resolution tonight.

The 40-hour week, working conditions and other problems facing the textile industry will be among topics discussed.

The conference will be held in April, with about 22 nations represented. Delegates will represent governments, employes and workers.

The resolution accepting President Roosevelt's invitation specified that the conference "will consider all those aspects of the textile industry which directly or indirectly have a bearing on the improvement of the social conditions of the industry."

Deputies Fight After Rightists Criticize Blum

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 13.—Leftist and Rightist French parliamentarians, shrieking invectives, punched each other in a wild melee which interrupted a session of the Chamber of Deputies today.

During the melee, the leftists, spurred by Rightists criticism of Premiere Blum and Interior Minister Roger Salengro, poured from their seats and swarmed over the Rightist benches on the other side of the room.

When the deputies reconvened, Blum won a vote of confidence, posed by a Socialist deputy, by 371 to 201. That vote came after the Chamber condemned the attacks on Salengro—charged by Rightists with being a World War deserter—by a count of 427 to 103.

The fact that the opposition vote was larger on the confidence motion was seen as indicating many Centrists who opposed the campaign against Salengro were unwilling to express approval of Blum.

A Military Court of Honor recently cleared Salengro of the accusation he was a traitor, saying it found he had been acquitted during the war while he was a prisoner in Germany.

The Chamber Army Committee gave Defense Minister Edouard Daladier a vote of confidence when he refused to consider a Communist demand for reduction in the two-year compulsory military service term.

Daladier declared it was "impossible in the present international circumstances" to shorten the period. He had threatened to resign because of opposition to his armament plans.

Socialist members of the committee, who at first supported the motion for lowering the army term, joined the Radical Socialists in the expression of confidence. The vote was 28 to 0, with five Communists abstaining.

Brawl Is Started.

A Leftist sprinted across the chamber and drove his right fist to Tixier-Vignancour's chin. That was the signal for the general brawl.

For several minutes, more than 50 lawmakers slugged and kicked each other. Attendants who tried to separate them were bowled over.

The remainder of the legislators either shouted insults across the chamber or stalked out in dignified fashion.

Herriot finally donned his hat—the signal for suspension of the session—and the more calm deputies who remained in the room separated the battling Leftists and Rightists.

As the bruised and limping parliamentarians went into the corridors, party leaders pleaded with their followers to keep their tempers in check.

Blum defended Salengro's war record, referring to the decision of the Military Court of Honor.

M. Salengro told the deputies: "I am a Socialist and also a good soldier. I am proud of my record."

Plan to Move Stranded.

Honolulu, Nov. 13. (AP).—Some 700 strike-stranded passengers may be taken to the United States mainland on the Matson liner Monterey, due here in 10 days from Australia, company officials disclosed today.

They said plans were to halt the big ship three miles off port and ferry passengers to her if the Monterey carries sufficient supplies to take her to Los Angeles.

The number of stricken vessels in Hawaii reached eight today with the arrival of the Matson freighter Mauna Loa from the American East Coast. Her crewmen shut off steam and came ashore, but the cargo was unloaded by use of steam from locomotives.

Holidays Will Halt Highway Work

Preparing for the seasonal Christmas rush and the expected traffic congestion in connection with the President's inaugural, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, Director of Highways, yesterday issued a memorandum warning all concerned not to start projects on or below streets that will overlap either of the holiday periods.

Commercial organizations were advised not to engage in any work on public space, except of an emergency nature, from December 10 to January 14.

Utilities, plumbers, and others were told that no permits for underground work, except of an emergency nature, will be issued between December 1 and 28.

Any jobs started between December 28 and January 14, Capt. Whitehurst said, must be completed by January 18, including replacement of roadway surface.

'Let Us Give Thanks'

Thursday, November 26, was proclaimed as a day of national thanksgiving yesterday by President Roosevelt, who said America is ready to "promote international friendship and, by the avoidance of discord, to further world peace, prosperity and happiness."

The proclamation follows:

"I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, hereby designate Thursday, the twenty-sixth day of November, 1936, as a day of national thanksgiving.

"The observance of a day of general thanksgiving by all the people is a practice peculiarly our own, hallowed by usage in the days before we were a nation and sanctioned through succeeding years.

"Having safely passed through troubled waters, it is our right to express our gratitude that divine providence has vouchsafed us wisdom and courage to overcome adversity. Our free institutions have been maintained with no abatement of our faith in them.

"In our relations with other peoples we stand not aloof but make resolute effort to promote international friendship and, by the avoidance of discord, to further world peace, prosperity and happiness.

"Coupled with our grateful acknowledgement of the blessings it has been our privilege to enjoy, we have a deepening sense of our solemn responsibility to assure for ourselves and our descendants a future more abundant in faith and in security.

"Let us, therefore, on the day appointed, each in his own way, but together as a whole people, make due expression of our thanksgiving and humbly endeavor to follow in the footsteps of Almighty God.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

"Done at the city of Washington this 12th day of November, in the year of Our Lord, 1936, and of the independence of the United States of America the 161st. (Signed) Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Belgium Seeks Data on League Aid if Attacked

Note Demands Clarification on Help to Be Given Its Members.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Nov. 13.—Belgium asked the League of Nations today to be specific on what help an attacked member nation "could count on."

In a note, she demanded clarification of the League covenant, particularly the article applying to sanctions against an aggressor.

(Her action followed on the recent statement of Belgian Foreign Minister Paul Henry Spaak that Belgium could not feel completely safe through sole dependence on the League.)

Belgium declared the League covenant should be reinterpreted so that all nations would join, but said it believed amendment was unnecessary.

Efforts to prevent war should be emphasized by the League, Belgium said, and measures against countries which endanger peace should be improved upon.

"The existing uncertainties as to the practical meaning of the sanctions article 16 (providing for penalties against a nation making war) must be dissipated," the statement said, "so the nations may know exactly the extent of their obligations and the help on which they can count in grave situations."

(Article 16 was applied in part by the League against Italy after the international body branded Italy the aggressor in Ethiopia.

(Most of the League members adhered to the economic and financial sanctions which were invoked, halting trade and commercial relations with Italy. The section of the article which provided for military measures against the aggressor was not used against Italy, however.)

Plane Base Urged For Midway Island

Construction of a seaplane basin at Midway Island, 1,500 miles west of Honolulu in the Pacific, was recommended yesterday by Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, chief of army engineers.

The development, which would consist of a basin 1,200 feet square and 8 feet deep in Welles Harbor, Midway Island, protected by suitable breakwaters with a channel of the same depth, would cost an estimated $500,000, and require an annual maintenance of $15,000.

Pro-Japanese Troops Batter Chinese Lines

Violent Fighting Reported as Mongols Invade Suiyuan Province.

By the United Press.

Peiping (Saturday), Nov. 14.—Violent fighting between invading pro-Japanese forces and Chinese defenders has started in Suiyuan Province, according to dispatches today.

Chinese asserted they repelled the assaults, but neutral reports indicated the Chinese lines were driven back at several points.

Fighting became general after patrols of the Mongol and irregular Manchurian troops which have been concentrating for weeks in Chahar clashed with Chinese patrols on Wednesday morning.

A general battle developed Wednesday afternoon and lasted until dawn Thursday. The Chinese entrenched positions reportedly were broken in several places.

The attacking troops were part of the command of Gen. Li Shou-Hsin, said to be a subordinate of Prince Teh, of Inner Mongolia, who declared his independence of China—reportedly at the instigation of the Japanese army—early this year.

Several squadrons of airplanes allegedly of Japanese make participated in the attack. The Mongols and irregulars were well drilled and supported by heavy artillery and field guns.

The airplanes were said to have come from a big airdrome at Shangtu, which, the Chinese assert, is under direction of the Japanese army.

Following the air bombing operations scouting planes, also allegedly Japanese, flew over the whole Chinese defense area.

The United States Embassy yesterday received the formal notice of the Nanking foreign office requesting that Americans in Suiyuan and other potential war areas be asked to take refuge in Peiping and Tientsin.

Zioncheck Estate Faces $3,179 Claim

Escapades of the late Representative Marion A. Zioncheck may cost his estate $3,179, it was learned in District Court yesterday. Mrs. Pamela Schuyler Young, who leased her Harvard Hall apartment to him shortly after he was married, and who claimed her apartment had been seriously damaged, asked that amount because of injury to her furniture and bric-a-brac.

Representative Zioncheck committed suicide in a leap from an office building in Seattle, Wash. Thereafter, his will was filed and a suit, then pending in Municipal Court here, was dropped. The action yesterday merely sought to obtain whatever assets of the estate could be located here.

Zioncheck was sued for $999 in the Municipal Court, and the suit went for naught when he died. Then Mrs. Young sued for the damage she ascribed to the Representative. The claim has been filed with the Probate Court.

A Record Investment in Progress

YOU are invited to view the new 1937 automobiles of the General Motors family now in the showrooms of General Motors dealers everywhere.

We believe these new cars represent a sound example of progress with stability—another stride forward in the steady march by General Motors engineers toward higher utility and outstanding value.

A significant new feature of these 1937 cars is the Unisteel Body by Fisher. An extension of the turret top principle, this advanced construction fuses top, bottom and sides of the body structure together into one single rigid unit of steel.

Safety and silence are greatly increased by this more solid construction, and important contributions are permitted to comfort, roominess, and style as well.

Refinements have also been made in the direction of a further increase in economy of operation and maintenance, and these betterments are supported by such familiar and time-tested General Motors features as knee-action, improved hydraulic brakes, the turret top and no-draft ventilation.

But progress in the way of product improvement is only secured through the coordination of many factors.

It is an accepted principle of sound industrial management that good products can only be produced by good tools, in which have been incorporated the most efficient practices known to research and engineering.

In line with this principle, and in preparation for our new 1937 production, General Motors has this year made an all-time record investment in plant modernization and for new tools, dies and machinery.

These improved facilities enable us to offer better products at the same or lower prices, which in turn should stimulate consumption and thereby provide more jobs and increased opportunities and benefits to workers.

In passing directly into the channels of trade these expenditures have stimulated employment in many lines. This is true particularly in the heavy industries where the recovery processes have hitherto lagged and where an important part of our national unemployment has centered.

This again suggests the great opportunity that exists of rebuilding America's productive facilities through replacing obsolete plants and machinery with modern equipment, thus offering a fundamental solution for the current problem of creating more jobs for more people.

It is significant, too, that the benefits of this General Motors investment in progress have not been limited to any one area, but have been spread through many parts of the country, through the establishment of new plants in many additional communities.

By such decentralizing of its manufacturing operations and thus distributing buying power to more and more communities, General Motors feels it is helpful toward the development of a more balanced national economy.

All depressions uncover opportunities of advancing the social and economic status of the community. The depression through which the world has just passed is no exception to the rule. These opportunities should be recognized as stimulants of progress. Important among them is the necessity of assuring greater stability and permanence of employment, not only from the standpoint of the human factors involved, but from the standpoint of maintaining greater continuity of purchasing power.

An important step in this direction was taken by the automotive industry last year, whereby new models were introduced in November rather than in January. The objective was more uniform sales throughout the year and consequently steadier work and increased annual earnings for the workers.

Another important step has been tempering the seasonal variations with their adverse influence on continuity of employment by the building of inventory of component parts, so far as that is practical, during periods of reduced consumer demand.

The benefits of these policies are by no means confined to the workers directly involved, but exert a favorable influence throughout the whole national economy, affecting not only the workers in many other supplying industries but the great army concerned with distribution and manufacturing as well. Thus is established a new measure of industrial progress.

To the extent that industry and the country at large move forward aggressively with sound principles as their guiding inspiration, will America attain progress with stability.

Pledging its members to renewed activity in religious work, the American Legion of the District of Columbia has declared tomorrow "Go-to-Church" Sunday, and is urging all Legionnaires to attend services in some church during the day.

"The present world situation clearly indicates the need of vigorous church activity," declared H. W. Lineburg, department commander, in a proclamation setting the day aside for worship.

Tomorrow, which is the first Sunday after Armistice Day, when veterans throughout the country paid tribute to the World War day, will be an appropriate time for veterans to rededicate themselves to the cause of religion and peace, the District commander said.

"The American Legion recognizes the churches of America to be the foundation of our Nation," declared the proclamation, and "the American Legion desires to perpetuate and encourage all agencies for good in our country.

"Be it proclaimed," continued the announcement, "that Sunday, November 15, following Armistice Day observance on Wednesday, November 11, be proclaimed by the District department of the American Legion as 'Go-to-Church' Sunday in that department, and

"Be it further proclaimed that all members of each of its posts be called to worship that day in the church of their choice."

Mrs. Edwin Phillips Kohl and Others of Capital Take Prominent Parts in Brilliant Russian Levee

Several members of Washington society took part in the representation of a brilliant levee at the court of Catherine the Great, which was unfolded last evening at the ninth annual Russian Students Ball at the Plaza Hotel in New York. Mrs. Edwin Phillips Kohl, of New York and Washington, was executive chairman of the ball, and Baroness Barbara Korff, with her brother, Baron Serge Korff, played important parts in the glittering pageant.

The Empress Catherine was portrayed by no less a person than her great-great-granddaughter, Grand Duchess Marie, of Russia. The Grand Duchess wore a rich costume of the period as she received homage from her courtiers and ambassadors of the evening. Mrs. Kohl appeared as Countess Vera Apraxime, lady-in-waiting to the Empress, and Baron Paul Wrangel, who has many friends in Washington, appeared as Gen. Adj. Narishkin, who, history informs us, was the Stalmeister of the Court. Baron Wrangel was also master of ceremonies for the evening.

Appropriately enough, Baroness Korff played the part of one of her ancestors, the Baroness Korff, who was lady-in-waiting to Catherine. Her father, the late Baron Serge Korff, was at one time gentleman-in-waiting to the ill-fated Czar, Nicholas II. After the revolution he became professor of Russian law in the University of Helsingfors, Finland, and later lieutenant governor of that country. Upon the founding of the School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University he was called to Washington to take the chair of international law.

Baroness Barbara Korff is living in New York this year, where she is busy studying art. She was here recently to attend the wedding of Miss Helen Minnigerode and Mr. Frederick H. Allen. Her brother, who resides here with his mother, will return to the Capital on Monday.

Following the glittering reception last evening, the entire company danced the Sarabande to the tune of Bach's stately G minor suite. Russian girls in native costumes greeted the arriving guests with the traditional welcome of their country to emperor and peasant alike—black bread dipped in salt and a tumbler of vodka.

Many dinners were given before the ball at La Maisonette Russe at the St. Regis Hotel, which began its winter season recently with a gala opening. The ball is given annually for the benefit of the Russian students' fund and the Russian Alumni and Students Association. As the coming year will mark the centenary of the death of Alexander Poushkin, Russia's great poet, a part of the proceeds of last night's benefit will be given to the Poushkin fund.

The Nikola Perazics, who have been on a butterfly visit to Europe, are again on this side of the ocean for a time, although they only dropped down to Washington for a how-do-you-do and then hurried back to New York. We are not surprised at that, because the vivacious wife of the diplomat has many friends in Gotham and they are always giving parties for her and Nikola. Not in love with the idea of commuting between the two cities, they have not opened house this saeson and are spending the lion's share of their time in New York.

When Frau Scholz smokes, she does so with the utmost grace and the aid of a long, tapering ivory holder. At cocktails recently, she had on a brown frock with a faint tinge of henna in it. Pulled down over her smooth blonde waves was a tricky little rust velour hat, the brim of which was turned up in the back and slanted down at a provoking angle in the front just to the level of the pretty wearer's candid gray eyes.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Living With Sister Calls Latter's Husband "Fly in Ointment": Asks How to Reform Him.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young woman living with my sister and her family. She is very good to me and we get along fine, but her husband is the fly in the ointment. He seems to like me and is nice to me, but he is so narrow minded! He thinks we are too nice to associate with our neighbors and will not allow us to go to see them or to have them in our home. Because of this, my sister and I have been called "snooty," through no fault of our own.

• • • •

Another thing is that he is eternally fussing about things that do not matter at all. It is not because he works too hard—he has a good job and reasonable hours. He is not interested in other women. In fact, he is so superior that he knows only a few of the men at his office.

• • • •

He never compliments my sister on the dinner she has fixed but is always complaining about something on the table. On the other hand, he is always willing to give her any amount of money she asks for. She was a normal, happy and well-liked girl when she married him, but now she is so changed! And I am afraid that if I keep on living with them that I will change too. Do you think that is possible, even if I try to ignore his ways?

• • • •

I feel that it would hurt their feelings for me to leave the home they have offered me, but at the same time I do not approve of any relative living with a married couple unless it is absolutely necessary. Is there any way I can help my brother-in-law to be more like the rest of us and yet not do this in any way that will be conspicuous to him? Or must I just give it all up and find another place to live?
Your truly, LAURA L.

A Mistaken Ambition.

DEAR LAURA L.: I believe the soundest move you could possible make would be to vacate your sister's premises at once. Much of the change you perceive in her may be due to her acting as buffer and apologist between you and her husband. More of it may be due to her having to keep the lid on her temper when she would prefer to explode into an atmosphere-clearing argument with her fault-finding spouse. Having you around at meal times and in the evenings deprives both of opportunity for giving their grievances an occasional healthy airing—which is a fundamental necessity for keeping the average marriage to a middle-of-the-road course. Your presence in the home may be developing a rift and widening a breach between husband and wife which would never have occurred had they lived continually to themselves.

• • • •

It is entirely possible that neither of them would be as hurt as you anticipate if you were to move elsewhere. They may have offered you a home with them because they felt obliged to, and not because of a 100 per cent thoroughgoing delight in having you. The only help you can give your brother-in-law is to leav him alone; treat him with the same affectionate courtesy you would accord any long-term friend or well-liked relative; and scrupulously refrain from interjecting your opinion or comment into his personal affairs. In going to live elsewhere, you would be doing no more than you should do. Probably if you were living under your parents' roof, or in any boarding house, club or apartment building, you could find as much fault, perhaps of a different variety, with whomsoever was under your feet all the time.

• • • •

Your sister's husband sounds like a better-than-average bet. A husband who has a good job, is generous with money, indifferent to the charms of other women, discriminating to a fault in his choice of associates, and tolerably courteous to an underfoot sister-in-law who is determined to reform him and humanize his treatment of his wife, can't be other than a rather good sort. M. H.

Quest for a Friend.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a schoolgirl in my early teens and wish to know how I may obtain the friendship of a girl whom I like very much. While I have several girl friends at school, I have no special girl friend to go places with. This girl I have in mind is very nice, from what I have heard. She lives in my neighborhood, we are about the same age and both go to the same school.

• • • •

I have tried several times to make friends with her, and have asked her several times to go places with me, but she never accepts. She speaks when we meet at school or on the street, but never accepts my invitations or extends any to me. Like me, she has girls friends at school and there is one girl she walks home from school with, but she very seldom goes out with her.

• • • •

I would like us to be special friends and go about together all the time, but since she has never gone any place with me, and doesn't ask me to go places with her, do you suppose that means she doesn't want to be friends with me? Please tell me if there is any way I could win her close friendship. Yours stuly, H C.

Things to Consider.

DEAR H. C.: Having made the direct aproach, only to fail of your purpose, the next thing to do—if you are determined to have the girl for your special friend—is to rally your forces and try the indirect approach. Make every effort to cultivate the acquaintance of the girl with whom she walks home from school. She may be less shy or less finicky than the girl you admire so much, and through her you may eventually gain admittance to the other girl's close companionship and be made a party to their homeward strolls and their informal and intimate conversation.

• • • •

It's just possible the girl's parents don't permit her to go out on school nights, and that in their opinion, you are given too much freedom in that direction. If such is the case, it might help to try to seem more like her; to appear to be bound by the same rules she is. Many carefully brought up school girls are allowed social privileges only on Friday and Saturday evenings. Perhaps you have asked the girl to go places in mid-week, and that was her reason for refusing.

• • • •

Or it may be of course that she simply doesn't like you. Having faced that harsh possibility don't give way to despair. Try to discover what sort of girl she does like by closely observing and intelligently analyzing her friends.

• • • •

If she is good at sports or likes bicycling or roller skating or tennis or swimming you may find it helpful to develop a corresponding enthusiasm and skill. If she attends church, you might find out what church, and, if you have no religious affiliation at present, join that church. If she takes books from the library, you might do the same. If she belongs to a dancing class, you might persuade your parents to enroll you. Most friendships are the result of a background of mutual interests and activities, and friends can seldom be acquired for the asking. M. H.

Lecturer Lists Diversions for Young Who Can't Use 'Live Alone' Formula

Georgette Howard Tells of Scores of Places Here for Them.

By Elizabeth Young.

THE FACT that a certain imprudently witty little volume of worldly advice entitled "Live Alone and Like It" has become a local best seller suggests to Georgette Ross Howard, Washington lecturer, that there are plenty of people here living alone and trying to like it.

It takes a sophisticated older man or woman to live alone and like it, in Mrs. Howard's opinion. Youth, which naturally craves companionship and group activity, will find poor consolation in Marjorie Hillis' suggestions for becoming a contented bird in a gilded cage, she believes.

Mrs. Howard feels a maternal compassion for "the number of youngsters who come here and take rooms, rejoicing in the fact that they don't have to take their meals where they sleep; because it gives them so much more freedom, they consider."

"What do they do?" she asks. "They knock the props right out from under their chances of living a satisfactory life. They don't contact any church or any other social organizations which are available, with the result that they live here four or five years at a stretch without reaping any of those benefits which Washington has to offer everybody. They remain as unaware of and as untouched by its beauty and privileges as if they were still in Podunk.

Places Worth Seeing.

"It would be interesting to make a survey of how many young people in Washington have ever visited a session of Congress; how many have ever seen St. Gaudens' statue of 'Grief' in Rock Creek Park, one of the most glorious statues of the world and all time; how many have ever looked upon the original copies of the Constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence, which may be seen any evening or Sunday at the Library of Congress; how many have ever been to Mount Vernon—remind me about that later; I want to tell you about a Washington girl I met abroad this year," Mrs. Howard interrupted; "how many have ever visited Arlington—surely an easy place to get to, and even more charming than before, now that the period furniture has been restored—and how many have seen the Folger Library, a truly wonderful place.

"I wonder how many of our lonely hall-bedroom dwellers realize that our public library, at Ninth street and New York avenue, is open on Sundays as well as every evening until 9 o'clock," Mrs. Howard continued. "I wonder if they know that many churches are equipped with young people's groups which serve suppers Sunday evenings and make transient comers cordially welcome.

"I wonder if those who are college graduates know about the Women's University Club at 1634 I street northwest, and the Men's University Club at Fifteenth and I streets. I wonder if older women know about the Women's City Club, and Mrs. Harvey Wiley, its presiding genius, and the things it might do for them and they for it.

"Do they know that the Y. W. and the Y. M. are veritable beehives of humming activity nearly every night in the week, with recreation, courses of study, lectures and so on?

"Too many," said Mrs. Howard providing the answer to her own questionnaire, "don't seem to realize what residence in Washington could mean to them not only educationally, but in adding to their joy of life. That it offers much is proven by those lucky rich who retire and come back here to end their days in its beneficent atmosphere.

Written for Elders.

"Oh, yes," Mrs. Howard continued, "'Live Alone and Like It' is a worth-while book in its way. But the advice it contains is more applicable to age than to youth. If youth is going to get the best out of living alone in Washington, it must, without being too Pollyannish, make a sincere resolve to use some energy and initiative in seeking contacts with the cultural life of the Capital. There is a very real possibility that in so doing worth-while friendships will result.

"That Washington girl I met abrod Oh, yes——. Well, there she was, running around to Berlin and Prague and touring England, seeing all the sights of Europe, and she had never seen Mount Vernon. Yet she's lived in its shadow all her life!"

Mrs. Howard, whose lectures on current topics have been for eight years a standard feature of Washington's winter program of activities, goes abroad every summer for a motor tour of Europe to get first-hand information on foreign affairs. Her family background includes many generations of statesmen, but, according to her, her chief claim to distinction is the fact that she is a native-born Washingtonian. She meets so few Washingtonians who are, she says.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 13.

OF ALL the women in New York who once enjoyed Fate's choicest bonbons, and is now forced to nibble adversity, I know none gamer and more resurceful than Cobina Wright. Know about Cobina? Her recent life is certainly an object lesson to everybody tossed about by chance.

ALICE HUGHES.

It's pretty tough to have to struggle through existence without having any of the soft and lovely things of this world, but it must be downright horrible to have tasted the sweetness of existence and then to have the goodies snatched away summarily, and be forced to eat, not cake, but bread if possible.

Does this make me a snip and a snob? Please God it doesn't, for I don't feel one, and this drawing-room argument has been going on for more years than you and I remember.

But back to Cobby Wright. The depression whipped her fortune to a frazzle. Her husband somehow disappeared from her picture. She was left with a pretty young daughter who has now grown into a beauty, and is known as Cobina, jr. Her mother has tried everything. She has talked on the radio for all manner of absurdities—but for pay.

This season she comes up with more fight—each year must seem like a round of a boxing match to the woman. Today she prepares for a joint recital at Carnegie with a pianist—and she is to direct the entertainment at the Hotel Pierre's corinthian room, a job at which she should shine. I doff the old toque to such people. The world kneels on their chests—but they never say "Uncle." So may Cobby Wright's shows at the Pierre be tops—and if you get my sense of her gameness, you'll join me in the wish.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Spring? Winter's barely come, but the big shots of style are already plotting what will encase our frames come April. They, of all people, must work ahead—and far. Here's a one-second forecast from no less an authority than Marjorie Howard, of the Fashion Group: Slim skirts—matching hosiery and gloves—high hats (in the nicer sense, I hope)—wide shoulders—violent color combines. That's what Marjorie says. Now we can go right ahead getting ready for the struggles of the cold months . . .

Speaking of designers (oh come on, let's!) Joe Platt, who now creates the fabrics for the mighty house of Marshall Field, says that the greatest single influence today in the world of design is Christian Berard, the man whose "Margot" modes of last year practically mopped up the world. He's done breath-taking designs for the Monte Carlo Ballet this year. So if you have a little Berard number, you'll probably be one of the 54,341st best dressed women in the world. That's what I'm shooting at.

And Norman Block, one of our leading bespoke tailors to such aces as Clifton Webb and Fred Astaire, says that every man should have at least 60 suits. Reading this, my poor little old gentleman fell forward in a dead faint right into his grapefruit.

Poor Clark Gable was glad enough to get out of this town all in one piece, after a visit of but three days. He'd counted on staying ten, but the movie-mad mobs were too much for the great he-man. What finally drove him west was the occasion when his taxi was caught in a jam at Fiftieth street and Fifth avenue, current hub of the world, in a way. He was spotted from the curb, though he cowered in his seat and it took 10 cops and 20 minutes to clear the Avenue so the rest of us could go about our usual business. That was enough for good old Clarkie. The same night he hopped a plane for the peace and quiet of Hollywood!

I asked Mary Lewis, the former Arkansas girl who rose to the Met and then to wifehood with the rich Bob Hague, how she felt about becoming a night club star, and she said she felt fine. "But they mustn't expect any coon-shouting. I'll give them some Puccini and Lehar," said the plump Mary. Well, I don't know how Puccini will go when the customers start operating those little wooden hammers that make night clubs so gay. But Mary will find out, soon enough.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Sinus Infection From Colds.

Colds and sinus disease really are one and the same thing or we may say the latter is an extension of the former. It is as though a gigantic microbe had walked into the house with muddy feet. He may take a seat on the chair nearest the door or he may wander about the hallways and enter each room, leaving his tracks on the velvet carpet.

This is the picture when one has a cold. The virus which is responsible for the infection starts up the inflammation and prepares the mucous membrances for the camp followers that trail along—such as streptococci, staphylococci, pneumococci, etc. Some of them may take up permanent abodes, particularly if they stray into the rooms adjacent to the nasal passages—the sinuses.

There is no ground for believing that a cold confines itself to the mucous lining of the direct air channels. The contagion can spread much like a film of oil over the surface of water. Every one should assume, therefore, that a head cold means sinus complications.

Much of the discomfort of the acute attack will depend upon the activity of the bacterial invaders. If the mucous membrane is gorged with dilated capillaries, and if the individual is overtired, there will be a temperature, headache, sometimes chills, weakness and the gathering of considerable pus within these head spaces. The very fact that the mucous membrane is greatly swollen may prevent drainage and a sizable amount of pus may accumulate within the sinuses because the normal exits are partially or wholly obstructed. As a result the spaces in the cheek bones (the maxillary sinuses), in the bone of the forehead above the eyes (the frontal sinuses), the ethmoids and even the sphenoid all may be ablaze with congestion.

The objective of treatment is to provide drainage and to raise resistance to the point at which the forces of the body will neutralize the poisonous effects of the microbes. Antiseptics may be helpful in some cases, but there is little use trying to kill many of the germs, as some of them undoubtedly have burrowed into the upper layers of cells and cannot be reached. There is some advantage, however, in cleansing the passages of mucus and pus once or twice daily, thus removing some of the toxins. Dilute salt solution is suitable for this purpose, but repeated irrigations (every hour or so) are not advised.

Not infrequently surgery will be called upon to create a mechanical outlet for the pus, but only after the mucous membrane has returned practically to its normal state. Should the sinuses become chronically infected there is no alternative other than to furnish an escape for the confined bacteria and the products of inflammation.

Vaccines are often beneficial—perhaps not so much for the acute cold as for the chronic, deep seated type of disease which the powers of the body have failed to conquer. The added "punch" afforded by these agents is able now and then to eradicate completely a lurking nest of organisms. But adequate and prompt care of all colds will—as a rule—preclude permanent sinus involvement.

Gayest Clothes Since Boom Days, Spring Forecast

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—Women will be wearing "optimistic, glorious clothes" next spring, Capt. Edward Molyneux, designer, said today, "because the seven-year cycle of hard times has ended."

The little black, somber dresses of the depression will pass from the picture, and clothes will be gayer than they have been since the boom days of 1929, he predicted.

"Materials will be very, very rich. There will be embroidery again, and brocade," he explained. "In short, women will look glamorous again—which is their duty, because it makes men happy."

Asked if men would be wearing "optimistic" clothes, too, Molyneux's smile faded. "No," he said drearily. "I don't think men are going to change much."

Household Hints

Make your Thanksgiving centerpiece of autumn harvest materials. Dried corn, gourds, oak leaves and cornstalks are almost as colorful as chrysanthemums.

Silver and china service is oftentimes austere when laid out for a special occasion. To soften the appearance of the table, place a single pink carnation in a tiny container at each place.

Plants grown in water have leaves of a color which it is impossible to produce in soil grown house plants. It is suggestive of tropical growth, with a brilliance which many prefer over the more conventional greens and yellow-greens.

To remove chocolate stains wash in cold water or put borax or glycerin in boiling water and soak the garment in it.

Coffee stains may be removed by boiling water falling with force on the article or by covering the article with boran and water or with glycerin and ammonia.

Children Learn How to Choose Art Themselves

LET CHILDREN choose their own pictures, advises Margery Currey in the current issue of the Parents' Magazine, in order to lay the foundation of their love and understanding of art.

When children select their own pictures they have an active interest in them. They notice and study details that may easily pass unobserved in pictures provided for them and their early affection for paintings of their own choice often develops into a genuine fascination with the artists and their technique.

Then 10-year-old son of a wise mother was allowed to select and buy his own pictures. His choices were a bright illustration of the Canterbury Pilgrims, a vividly-detailed Indian hunting scene and a painting of red horses—probably not what his mother, no matter how wise, would have purchased for him.

Pictures for the very young must appeal through familiar subjects or color. Paintings of animals are always popular, and pictures dealing with activities of children, if they are presented from the child's viewpoint. Pictures for children should have stories. From the story of the picture, interest may be led to the story of the painter.

Travel, history, literature, geography can be made utterly thrilling through pictures—an education with a superlative chance of being remembered.

"Then there's the collector's hobby in the bones of every child," adds Miss Currey. "To keep a scrapbook of a growing collection of reproductions of great paintings not only nourishes a love for good pictures, but also extends knowledge over an ever-widening field of art appreciation.

The latest developments in color printing make this hobby much more satisfactory and inexpensive than ever before. Color colletypes or color lithographs are more true to the original shadings than hand-tinted reproductions possibly can be.

Two years ago a group of American artists organized for the purpose of stimulating interest in, and popularizing, art. They are accomplishing a great deal through Christmas cards with fine American pictures, and through sending out traveling exhibitions of the original etchings, lithographs and woodcuts from which the cards were made, to colleges and high schools. Schools may obtain complete portfolios of these cards at reduced rates.

"Appreciation of pictures is an inevitable result of the making of pictures, no matter how rudimentary and casual the attempts . . ." concludes Miss Currey. "It adds greatly to the ability to see and appreciate a picture if one has had even slight experience in the making of pictures. As today's children are taught the use of art materials and tools, their observation of methods used by great masters is sharpened, and their art appreciation developed."

Recipe Is Suggested For Christmas Canape

For a canape that will help to mark your Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner as something special and long to be remembered, try the following recipe: Mash 1¾-ounce cube of Roquefort cheese. Add 1 teaspoon cream and beat until smooth. Spread on slices of buttered toast. Cover with pineapple spears (canned pineapple in spear-like shapes) which have been cut in half and split lengthwise. Spread a small amount of the cheese around the edge of the pineapple and arrange thin slices of stuffed olives on it.

New Recipes Restore Onion To Good Grace

Even Counteractant Found for that Formerly Lasting Breath.

THE LOWLY ONION, unpopular with diners, but most popular of all vegetables with cooks who know their art, is regaining new life, possibly because this year a larger onion crop has been harvested than ever before.

You must remember that there is nothing better than an onion to build up resistance against colds or any bad effects we may have from the chilly days we shall be having soon.

There are many good ways to prepare this long neglected food.

Glazed Onions.

Melt half a cup of butter in a saucepan, roll onions around in this until they are all swabbed with butter, then arrange them properly for cooking. Almost cover them with hot water in which a beef cube has been dissolved, then sprinkle with salt and sugar. Cover the dish and cook until tender. At the finish take off the lid and let the sauce simmer down.

Onions With Cheese.

Boil large mild onions five minutes. Cut in halves, remove the centers and fill cavity with a dressing made of grated cheese, bread crumbs and chopped ham and seasoned with salt, pepper and thyme. Put a lump of butter on each and place in a baking dish with a little hot water, in which a beef cube has been dissolved. Bake for half an hour. The dressing may also be made of chicken or veal with crumbs, butter and seasoning.

Onion Souffle.

Rub creamed onions through a sieve; there should be ¾ cup pulp. Melt 3 tablespoons butter, add 3 tablespoons flour and when smooth add ¼ cup water, in which onions were cooked and ¼ cup cream. Add onion pulp and stir until mixture boils. Add salt and pepper to taste and 2 egg yolks beaten until thick and lemon colored. Cut and fold in 2 or 3 egg whites beaten until stiff and dry. Turn into greased baking dish, place in pan of hot water and bake 30 minutes at 350 F. Serve at once.

America Still Lagging On Cheese Consumption

Cheese is the most highly concentrated form of protein known. It contains in one pound, all the tissue-building casein and energy-producing fat values of one gallon of fluid milk, and 11,200 units of vitamin A. Cheese is also a good source of the other vitamins, and of milk minerals.

In America, cheese consumption per capita was 5.05 in 1935. In 1879 it was two pounds.

Cheery Kitchen Lightens Tasks; Charming Room Easy to Arrange

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

EVERY YEAR about this season we get a new idea about decorating our kitchen, and our fingers itch till we get hold of a paint brush. It's a lot like the lure of menu making—we're always in the market for something different.

That's not such a bad idea though because it keeps us from getting boared with the kitchen. This year we have the added incentive of just having moved into a new old-house where we expect to spend the rest of our days.

But it's probably the prospect of roasting turkeys and bubbling cranberry sauces that center our eyes on the kitchen in November. At any rate we're carrying around samples of oil cloth in our purse these days, and wondering whether we can afford that linoleum wall covering.

Linoleum Walls.

If we don't change our mind, our kitchen will end up with walls of linoleum that looks like old paneling (the reason we prefer this to real paneling is that it can be kept so much cleaner). We'll have this only go up to within 2 or 3 feet of the ceiling, then have the wall above and the ceiling papered in blue and white plaid coated wall covering that can also be washed.

On the ledge that divides the wall linoleum from the plaid, we're going to have some old-time cooking utensils that we've been collecting, also bright peasant pottery plates and mugs. The curtains will be yellow theatrical gauze and we're going to have our pots and pans in copper and iron and yellow enamel and we want all our kitchen dishes to be in yellows.

We haven't decided about the cupboards yet; if we afford to have new ones, we'll have them of stained pine with old iron hinges. If we can't do that, we'll paint the old cupboards with yellow enamel and line them with bright blue. The linoleum floor will be blue and the kitchen chairs and table yellow or maple.

Newest in Appliances.

Of course, we'll have our last minute models in refrigerator, table top stove and cabinet sink, we wouldn't be tempted by anything old fashioned there.

If we don't turn out to be affluent enough for the linoleum walls, then we'll have the walls, ceiling and all, covered in a Scotch plaid oil cloth wall covering, quite loud! Then blue linoleum, red cupboards, red table and furniture, and white curtains.

But maybe your taste in kitchens is simpler. If so, you'll like the kitchen in the home of a friend of ours. The walls are light green, the linoleum is brown and the curtains are brown and white checked.

Crockery A Touch.

She has some of those reddish brown casseroles and earthenware baking dishes along with wooden mixing bowls and salad bowls and spoons and some odd pieces of copper.

Another woman we know did her kitchen over recently and delightfully. She had to keep her old lineleum, which was gray and blue checked and nothing to brag about for looks though perfectly good. She had the walls done in gray, painted the cupboards yellow and had blue willow dishes standing up in them. The curtains were yellow, too, with blue valances, and the furniture she painted blue with yellow oil cloth chair pads and table tops.

Take our word for it—kitchen work is loads more fun if the kitchen is something besides a laboratory. Give it the charm of other rooms, it need lose none of its efficiency thereby. Make it look as nice as baking cinnamon buns smell and you'll have the right idea. And if you want to paint bright peasant designs on the cupboard, send a stamped, self addressed envelope for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "Designs for Painted Furniture Decoration."

Carrots Can Be Served Baked Whole in Jackets

Here is a new way to prepare carrots. Bake them in their skins with plenty of butter and seasonings. You may serve lemon butter sauce with them. This is made by melting 3 tablespoons of butter to 1 tablespoon of lemon juice. Pour this sauce over the baked carrots just before serving.

For baked carrots, select vegetables that are uniform in size. Wash well and leave in their jackets. Arrange in a well buttered glass baking dish, dot generously with butter and seasoning. Bake in a hot oven until done.

Oriental Atmosphere Now Sweeps Pajamas

New York (AP).—Pajamas—more important this year than they have been for some time—appear in oriental costumes combining satin trousers and a short coat generally of contrasting color.

Mandarin coats have inspired long oriental robes designed with little standing collars and side fastenings. One of the most striking is made of a pale gold silk brocade lined with peacock blue satin.

Tang for Feast.

A tangy punch will help to give a festive note to the Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner, and the following recipe is an excellent one for such occasions: Mix 1 cup grape juice, 1 cup carbonated water, 4 cups canned Hawaiian pineapple juice. Add 1 orange, sliced and cut in quarters. Pour over ice in tall glasses, or over ice in punch bowl if you prefer.

Child Chats

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. BROWN always spanks her children when they misbehave. She believes in acting promptly and has no use for what she calls sentimentalizing and "all this modern psychology stuff." When they do wrong she "upends them and gives them what for." They are spanked for disobeying, for answering back, for stealing, for lying, and no exceptions are made.

Mrs. Smith puts her children to bed when they do wrong. She does not believe in corporal punishment, though why slapping and spanking are corporal punishment any more than is being put to bed against one's will, it would be hard to say.

Mrs. Green scolds and preaches to her tribe. She prides herself on her self-control. Sometimes her talks last for hours. She emerges fresh and relieved of much emotional steam. The children are ragged from the strain.

All children cannot be dealt with in the same way, nor can all sins be punished alike. The parent who knows only one form of punishment and uses it for all the children, regardless of age, temperament or sex, shows a lack of imagination, and is apt to harm the youngsters rather than help them.

Some children become savage little animals when they are spanked. The blind rage which they feel at the indignity is physically bad for them, and they carry rancor against the perpetrator of the outrage for months and years to come, sometimes forever. Such a child should never be spanked.

● Give a slice of Heinz Fresh Cucumber Pickle to that dear old lady in the knitted shawl. Instantly she'll recognize the recipe as her own. Lush cucumbers, fresh from the vine; mellow old vinegar and rare Oriental spices—blended the "home" way.
That's the very formula Heinz follows. Old-fashioned?—yes! And America delights in it—always has! The fragrance, the cool, clear green color, the crisp succulence of Heinz Fresh Cucumber Pickle takes us back to childhood days—recaptures the teasing taste thrill Jefferson immortalized—the taste that America couldn't forget.
Serve Heinz Fresh Cucumber Pickle with canapés, as garnishment for meats or in place of green salads. Use as sandwich filler. Put a bowl on the table within everyone's reach. The cost of the big, family-sized jar is trifling.

Cream, Masks And Massage End Face Lines

Squinting and Wrinkling of Brow Should Be Avoided; Aids Suggested.

LINES in your face! Don't let them worry you.

Vertical lines between your eyebrows and horizontal ones across your brow are generally due to squinting and dry skin. You should learn to keep your face in a relaxed state and to talk with your lips and not your eyebrows. If your skin is inclined to be dry, leave a bit of rich tissue cream on your face while you sleep. Correct massage tends to eliminate lines and furrows in the face.

After you have thoroughly cleansed your face and neck, smooth a thin layer of tissue cream from the base of your throat up to your hairline. Use upward and outward lines. If vertical lines seem to be your trouble, place the forefinger firmly between them and smooth outward.

Masks help to eliminate the lines. When you start to apply the mask, relax your face completely and smooth the paste generously over the forehead and don't wrinkle your brow while it is drying. After you have rinsed off the mask, apply tissue cream immediately and pat it in thoroughly.

Forehead creases may be due to eyestrain. If you think that this might be possible, see an eye doctor at once and follow his prescription if he tells you to wear glasses.

Daily use of a good eyewash will take away the smarting, burning sensation that often causes you to squint. A weak solution of boric acid is good for this purpose.

Jack Straw Carrots Easy Dish to Make

CRISP autumn weather will be cutting short the list of fresh vegetables that may be served at meals and it will challenge the housewife to find enough suggestions to vary her menus.

You may despair of finding another new way of serving the standard winter vegetables, but there are so many ways of serving almost everything that it is the easiest thing in the world to find new recipes.

Jack Straw Carrots.

4 tablespoons butter (or substitute)
18 young carrots
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
Wash and scrape 18 tender young carrots and cut them lengthwise into thin strips just like jack straws. Now melt in a frying pan 4 tablespoons of an easily digestible vegetable shortening. When it is melted add the carrots, 1 tablespoon of chopped onion, a teaspoon of sugar, a teaspoon of chopped parsley and about a teaspoon of salt. Cover the pan and let the carrots simmer gently until they are tender. It will take about 20 minutes. While they are simmering, turn them frequently with a spoon. When they are done, drain off any excess shortening that may be remaining and pour into the pan a half cup of milk. Let the carrots get piping hot, stirring them well as they cook. Serve immediately. This recipe makes six servings.

Phone Booth Boom.

CAPITAL MANNERS

By Margaret Wallace.

"CAN A HOSTESS give a successful formal dinner with only eight or ten guests if she only has a cook and a waitress?" one Washington woman has asked. The answer is a most decided "Yes." Some of the most successful and popular hostesses in Washington are those who have one or two servants. Of course, such hostesses do not attempt large dinners. One hostess whose invitations are always eagerly accepted, manages to give cozy little dinners for six. Her cook is also waitress and general house worker in her apartment. The cook prepares and serves the meal. The hostess arranges the table and helps with the preparation for the meal such as making salads and filling finger bowls before she goes to dress.

The success of such a dinner depends largely on how well the person waiting on the table knows the rules of the game.

It should be impressed on the waitress that the rules of procedure in serving must never be changed no matter how "rushed" she may feel during the progress of the dinner. The fact that dinner services are not expected to be rapid, but to go forward smoothly at an even pace must also be impressed on the waitress.

One of the first commandments of good table service is to pass dishes at the left of the guests and remove them from the right. Since the glasses are always on the right of the plate, glasses should be placed or filled from the right.

Remove All Plates.

After each service the waitress should remove all plates and implements and other articles that have to do with that particular course.

When service plates are used, the waitress handles the service plate with her left hand and places the dinner plate with her right. The perfect table service insures plates before the guests from the time they sit down to the table until it is crumbed for the dessert course.

When service plates are used the first course such as canape's or fruit cocktails is placed on the service plate. The same plate is also placed on the service plate. Sometimes the service plate is also left on the table for the fish or entree course but it is considered better form to change the service plate for other plates for this course. The service plate must be removed and another plate substituted for the meat course.

The salad plate should be placed on the table with no under plate. This plate is placed after the plates and silver for the meat course have been removed.

The silver for each course should be removed whether it has been used or not. For instance, if the guest uses only a fork for the fish course both the knife and fork should be removed.

Before the dessert course is served the table should be cleared and the salt cellars and pepper shakers removed. All remaining place silver should be taken off. The silver for the dessert course is always placed especially for that course.

Dessert Service.

The dessert service usually consists of the dessert plate with a finger bowl on it with a doily placed between the bowl and the plate. The dessert spoon is placed on the right of the plate and the dessert fork on the left. The guests should remove the spoon and fork and place them on either side of the plate. Then they should remove the doily and finger bowl and place them to the left of the top of the plate. If fruit is to be served after the dessert course a plate for the fruit is placed under the dessert plate. After the dessert is served the dessert plate should be removed by the waitress and the fruit passed. The fruit knife is substituted for either the dessert spoon or the dessert fork as it is awkward to bring in three pieces of silver with the dessert service.

After dinner, coffee is served after the fruit course. It is not bad form to bring it in during the fruit course. It should be placed at the right of the plate. Most hostesses prefer to have the coffee served in the drawing room. It can be passed on a tray by the waitress with cream and sugar or the hostess may preside at a coffee table and serve the coffee herself. The gentlemen take the cups and pass them first to the women guests if the waitress does not perform this service.

Hats Not Becoming To Average Woman

Paris (U.P.).—The selection of becoming winter hats promises to be more difficult than ever this season. Seldom has there been such a generous choice, as far as actual style trends go, but most of the numerous different shapes prove unbecoming to the average woman.

Height still reigns supreme in fall and winter trends, although many milliners have tried to retain the more moderate, rounded and shallow crown. The tall crowns, still shaped like inverted flower pots, prevail on every type hat, but the turban. Some of these felts seem to be inspired by early Pilgrim days in America, while others look more like modern Alpine hats with taller crowns. Leather bands, cords, ribbons halfway from the brim to the tip of the crown and feather quills are used for trimming as well as silver Miles Standish buckles.

Herald of Thanksgiving—the Mince Pie

These luscious mince pies are holiday treats and are sure to give a happy ending to left-over dinners. Bake several at a time and keep them in a cool place. The lattice pie should be served in a day, but the whole top-crust pies are just as good when heated up and served a week later.

Mince Pie, Real Holiday Dish, Is Ideal for 'Leftovers' Dinner

Preparation Was Difficult in Grandmother's Day but Now It Is a Simple Matter; Filling Can Be Bought in Stores.

GRANDMOTHER'S MINCE PIE! Doesn't that make your mouth water? It's a real holiday dish with sugar and spice and everything nice, and is one of those things that just hits the spot, especially at this time of year. Traditional holiday foods have been enriched with the joys of generations; there is a wealth of romance stored in a steaming mince pie. Few housekeepers want to deny their families the treats which add to the joy of living, and this pie is one of those treats.

In grandmother's day the baking of a mince pie was a difficult art, but today it is a simple matter. Especially when mince meat is not difficult to make at home, or you may buy it ready prepared. If you make your own mince meat, make enough for several winter dessert surprises and put it away in cans for future use.

Why not make three or four variations of mince pie at a time and keep them in a cool place until needed? They'll be just as delicious heated up a week from today if they have a whole top crust. Lattice-top pies should be served in a day or two.

Mince Meat Pie Filling.

1½ lb. meat (chopped)
½ lb. suet (chopped)
3 lbs. apples (chopped)
1½ lbs. raisins
1 lb. currants
½ lb. citron (cut in thin slices)
Grated rind of half orange.
Grated rind of half lemon
1 tb. cinnamon
½ tb. cloves
½ tea. nutmeg
1½ lbs. light brown sugar
½ quart cider (after boiling down)
½ quart molasses (light brown)
½ cup orange juice
Salt.

Mix all ingredients in the order given. Place in a cooker and cook on low heat for six hours.

Sherry Mince Meat Pie.

1 (9 oz.) package dry mince meat
1 cup water
3 tablespoons sugar
½ cup sherry

Break mince meat into pieces. Add water and sugar. Place over heat and stir until all lumps are thoroughly broken up. Bring to brisk boil; continue boiling for one minute. Allow to cool. Add wine. Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry and fill with mince meat. Place upper crust on filled lower one and press edges firmly together. Trim off surplus pastry. Bake 35 minutes in a hot oven (400 F.).

Plum Mince Pie.

1 9-oz. package dry mince meat
1½ cups plum juice and water
1 cup fresh or canned prunes, drained
Pie crust

Place upper crust on filled lower one and press edges firmly together. Trim off surplus pastry. Bake 35 minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit).

One cup plums is sufficient for this recipe. However, 2 cups may be used, making a large pie, serving eight. The 1 pound 14 ounces can furnishes 2 cups of fruit.

1½ cups sour or canned cherries
½ cup finely powdered confectioners' sugar
1 9-oz. package dry mince meat and half-cup water, boiled almost dry
3 tablespoons flour
1 egg
Pie crust

Cover cherries with half-cup of sugar and allow to stand while preparing mince meat. Break mince meat into pieces. Add cold water. Place over heat and stir until all lumps are thoroughly broken up. Bring to brisk boil; continue boiling for three minutes or untire mixture is thoroughly dry. Cool. Combine mince meat and cherries. Add remaining sugar and flour, mixed together and well beaten egg. Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry strips across top. Moisten edge of pie with cold water and finish with narrow strip of pastry around edge of pie. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees Fahrenheit) 10 minutes, then decrease heat to moderate (350) and bake 30 minutes longer.

YES, THIS FOOD ENDS YOUR CONSTIPATION

Look out for those half-sick days, when you feel listless, headachy, out-of-sorts. Your trouble may be constipation. The real cause of common constipation is too little "bulk" in meals. Your system misses its regular exercise.

Get this needed "bulk" in a delicious cereal: Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Within the body, its "bulk" absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, gently sponges out the system.

Why keep on feeling bad when you can feel good? Millions of people use ALL-BRAN. Tests prove it's safe and effective. ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Try it a week. If not satisfactory, your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Serve as a cereal, with milk or cream, or cook into recipes. Remember, ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron.

Certainly you'd rather eat a food than take pills and drugs. Buy ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Budget for a Home

IT IS AMAZING what a budgeting plan will do toward quickly getting you that home of your own you are now dreaming of. Or a car. Or a fur coat. Or any other "big-money" purchase. For, by tying this friendly ball and chain to your income you eliminate slip-shod spending and always know where every dollar goes, even to the nickel you put in sister's bank.

The budget plan is not a cure-all, neither does it create "baloney dollars." It does give you new purchasing power by stopping unsuspected waste of money. It is a system of planned expenses. It is a system split up the family income scientifically—a prosaic method of applying bookkeeping principles to household management.

The plan is easy to work out and simple to operate. You establish in your own mind the scale of living you want to adopt, then divide your income under different headings.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "How to Budget Your Income," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Old-Fashioned Spoon Bread First Demand of Lady Astor in Virginia.

By Pattie Ellicott.

THE FIRST THING Lady Nancy Astor is said to have asked for when she reached her home in Virginia, Mirador, recently, was for some old-fashioned "spoon bread."

As Nancy Langhorne, belle of the Old Dominion, the titled American-English lady and first woman member of the British Parliament had been brought up on "spoon bread" cooked by the clever plantation chefs skilled in bringing out all the magic contained in cornmeal, for generations the bulwark of Virginia dietary.

For those who wish to enjoy the same culinary delights experienced by this world-famous woman, here is an old-fashioned recipe known to all good cooks of the Old Dominion. Through its observance any housewife can present Southern spoon bread to an eagerly awaiting family.

Southern Spoon Bread.

Two cups cornmeal, 1½ cup sweet milk, 2 cups boiling water, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 large tablespoons butter (melted) and three eggs.

Sift the meal three times and dissolve in the boiling water, mix until smooth and free from lumps. Add the melted butter and salt. Thin with the milk.

Separate the eggs; beat until light; add the yolks and then the whites. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven about 30 minutes.

This should be served in the dish in which it is baked.

LADY NANCY ASTOR

Loaf of Macaroni Serves for Meat

Suggested Also As Welcome Carbohydrate Dish.

Macaroni loaf makes an economical substitute for other carbohydrate dishes appearing with sometimes irritating frequency in our menus. If generously seasoned with cheese and bound together with eggs, it may well be served in lieu of both meat and potatoes.

Use four cups of cooked macaroni, blanched in hot water if it is to be made immediately into a loaf. Mix with the hot macaroni one cup of cream or evaporated milk, one cup of grated cheese, one-half cup sliced ripe olives, one pimiento cut in small strips and a tablespoon of chopped parsley. If evaporated milk is used instead of cream, add two tablespoons of melted butter. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Bake in a well-buttered casserole in a moderate oven, 325 F., or place the casserole in a shallow pan of water and bake at a low temperature. Bake from 45 to 60 minutes, until the eggs have set.

Mushroom Dishes Chosen as Subject Of Recipe Contest

That one-time luxury, the mushroom, is now very reasonable, and fortunately for us for there are so many delicious ways to prepare and serve this vegetable.

Mushrooms may be used in sauces, croquettes, soups, cocktails, omelets, stuffed and many other interesting foods. They give us ideas for varying our overused menus.

Because of their many uses, mushrooms have been chosen for the subject of our recipe contest for this week, so send in your favorite mushroom recipe. It may win one of the cash prizes which are $3 for the first prize, $2 for the second prize and $1 for each of the three additional prizes.

Copy your recipe neatly and send it to the Foods Editor of The Washington Post so that it will reach her not later than Saturday morning.

Stuffing Bird Night Before Feast Advisable

In preparing the Thanksgiving or Christmas turkey, it is a good idea to get the bird ready the day before, not only to save time when you will be rushed with other preparations, but because the pungent stuffing imparts a fine flavor to the meat if it is allowed to remain in the bird overnight. An unusually appetizing stuffing can be made as follows: Peel and core 8 large apples. Chop them fine. Mix thoroughly with the apples 4 cups of stale bread crumbs, 2 teaspoons powdered sage, 2 teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon paprika, and the grated rind of 1 lemon. Moisten the whole thoroughly with canned Hawaiian pineapple juice.

Bowie Delays Naming of Aide In Racket Study

Prince Georges Prosecutor Promises Action Soon; Nice Parley Deferred.

While rumors of a "whitewash" were current yesterday, State's Attorney Alan Bowie again declined to say when he would appoint a special assistant to help him in his investigation of the alleged bonding racket in Prince Georges County.

Bowie had promised to name his assistant at the close of criminal prosecutions in the Circuit Court last Tuesday. Yesterday he said it would be "several days longer" before he would announce his choice.

Charging the Prince Georges County Police Department was set up for patronage purposes, a member of Mt. Rainier Town Council yesterday expressed the hope that the current investigation would lead to a complete renovation of the department.

About a year ago—shortly after the murder of Corinna Loring, Mt. Rainier sunday school teacher—the County Police were under fire by the Town Council.

Protection Held Lax.

It was claimed at this time that the town of Mt. Rainier received no benefits from the county police, despite the fact that its citizens paid approximately a seventh of the county taxes.

A resolution was adopted requesting that the county commissioners order at least one county policeman to duty in Mt. Rainier. The commissioners, however, declined to act on the suggestion.

While voicing their approval of the current investigtaion of alleged practices originating in the Hyattsville police department, a number of leading citizens throughout the county have expressed the opinion that the charges will be ignored by party leaders who fear an expose.

They point to the occasion last winter when the police were ordered by the commissioners to visit La Fontaine's on a tour of inspection. It was reported back that La Fontaine was operating a restaurant.

Keystone Automobile Club officials' proposed trip to Baltimore to see Gov. Nice yesterday was canceled when it was learned that the Governor was to leave on a trip to St. Louis. The conference with the Governor will be held after his return to Baltimore November 23.

Automobile club officials had planned to ask the Governor for the removal of Justice of the Peace Herbert J. Moffat, of Hyattsville. They were to have presented him with affidavits and photostatic copies of police records, which were delivered to the county commissioners' office yesterday.

It also was planned to ask that the Governor assign a State auditor to check the books of justices of the peace who are alleged to be implicated in the purported "bargain-fine" system.

Meanwhile, My Maryland Post of the American Legion, in session last night, passed a resolution commending and indorsing Capt. Vinton D. Cockey, Prince Georges County commissioner, for his part in the probe.

Copies of the resolution were ordered sent to the county commissioners, to Capt. Cockey and to all American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars posts in Prince Georges County.

Change of Venue Asked.

Caesar Aiello, attorney for Mrs. Eleanor F. Johnson, garage owner of Hyattsville, Md., yesterday moved for a change of venue for his client, who is being sued by a Washington motorist seeking to recover $3.50 he paid to recover his car from the garage after his arrest by Prince Georges County police.

The trial was scheduled to be held before Justice of the Peace Robert E. Ennis, of Capitol Heights. Aiello requested that the suit be heard by some other justice on the grounds that Magistrate Ennis was prejudiced.

Ennis, a practicing attorney, is secretary of the Magistrate's Association of Prince Georges County, which last week adopted a resolution commending Police Commissioner Vinton D. Cockey's fight for an investigation by the county commissioners of the alleged bonding racket.

The Washington motorist, Robert J. Cullivan, of 516½ M street northeast, has stated in an affidavit that following his arrest by county police last June his car was driven to Mrs. Johnson's garage by a policeman and that he was later presented a bill for storage and "towing."

Petworth Citizens Oppose Bus Route

Residents of Petworth, particularly those near Grant Circle, are ready to make an emphatic protest against running buses on Fifth street when the Public Utilities Commission opens its public hearing Monday morning on a petition for abandonment of the Kennedy street car line.

It has been proposed that buses which would supplant the Kennedy street car line would be routed down Fifth street.

Everett J. Brosnan, of 501 Webster street northwest, is one resident of the neighborhood who has notified the P. U. C. that he will protest the routing.

"This would create a double traffic hazard for school children," Brosnan said last night. "We have two schools in the neighborhood—the Bernard and St. Gabriel's. The Bernard is off Fifth street, and St. Gabriel's off Illinois avenue. Already the buses are running on Illinois avenue. Some of the children not only have to cross the avenue to reach school, but Fifth street as well. I am afraid, and my neighbors agree with me, that if we put more buses on Fifth street the consequences will be tragic."

Jobless Leader to Talk.

Louis Roberts, unemployed leader of Philadelphia, and candidate for Vice President on the Workers' Vote ticket in the recent elections, will speak at the regular semimonthly Workers' Forum tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. at Jerusalem Hall, 1607 Eleventh street northwest. His topic will be, "Preparing the Next World War."

California Shown as Island In British Geography of 1671

Three Great Lakes, No Sign of Mississippi or Ohio Rivers Found by Librarians in 'Accurate Description of New World.'

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 13.—Employes of the Ohio State library took today a "postman's holiday" into one of their own volumes to learn that:

There is no Ohio River.

California is an island.

Two of the Great Lakes have disappeared and those that remain are shaped like a three-leafed clover.

These surprising "facts" came from a book on "America—being the latest and most accurate description of the new world," written in 1671 by John Ogilby, geographer to King Charles II.

Ogilby remained at home and compiled his book from tales of early visitors to the new world. A large map, showing the island of California, the three Great Lakes, and no sign whatever of the Ohio or Mississippi Rivers, served as a front piece.

Warning Europeans of dangerous animals in the new world, Ogilby said, "On the borders of Canada there is seen a kind of beast having some resemblance to a horse, having cloven feet, a shaggy mane, one horn jutting out of the forehead, a tail like that of a wild hog, and a deer's neck."

The obliging Englishmen even provided a drawing of the "strange beast," of which he wrote, "it feeds in the nearest wilderness and becomes so ravenous that it not only devours other beasts, but also one another."

From garbled reports, apparently of the American buffalo, Ogilby wrote that, "towards the south of New York there are many 'buffles,' beasts which are betwixt a horse and a stag; though they are of strong constitution yet they die of the smallest wound.

"They have broad, branchy horns like a stag, short tail, rough neck, hair colored according to the seasons of the year, and skin so thick as not easily to be pierced."

The librarians learned from Ogilby—although more modern books contained no word on the strange "buffles"—that "they have great force in their claws, and can kill a wolf with one blow; their flesh whether fresh or salted is a good diet; besides, their claws cure the falling sickness."

State to Lose Taxes On Rogers' Estate

San Francisco, Nov. 13. (AP).—The estate of Will Rogers owes California $28,000 in personal income taxes which the state probably never will collect, Attorney General U. S. Webb said today.

Federal taxes of $115,000 have priority, Webb said.

Rogers' California estate has been appraised at $106,900. The humorist's large insurance policies are not a part of the estate and are exempt from taxation. His income from syndicate writings was paid directly to his wife, under the terms of his contract.

Wins Customs Honor.

High Liquor Taxes Called Bootleg Aid

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—High liquor taxes were held by the Institute of Public Administration tonight to be the chief cause of continued bootlegging.

The institute, in the second of a series of reports based o a two-year study of post-repeal problems, suggested that lower taxes on beer and wnies would promote temperance.

Whereas Congress had expected an annual revenue of from $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000, the actual income from liquor taxes during the first two years amounted to approximately $400,000,000 a year, the report said.

"The reason given this disappointing yield," it went on, "is the prevalence of the illicit liquor traffic. The per capita consumption of tax-paid spirits at the present time is only 29 per cent of what it was in 1914 and it is held by many persons that the difference is accounted for by bootlegging rather than by a decrease in consumption."

Archives Murals

Our inspection of the two new murals which have been painted on the walls of the exhibition chamber of the National Archives proved rather mortifying. Of the 28 signers of the Declaration of Independence and the 25 signers of the Constitution we could identify only five in both groups.

In the Declaration of Independence mural, which is on the left wall, we spotted Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin and John Adams (and Adams was a lucky guess). With the Constitution we did even worse, picking out only Washington and Franklin. Still, we're willing to bet there isn't a person in the Government service who can recognize every one of the fathers of our country.

Despite our miserable performance, the murals were rather inspiring. Perhaps it was because we were buoyed up by the splendid manner in which we resisted the impulse to label the fellow with the wooden leg, in the Constitution group as Peter Stuyvesant. (He turned out to be Gouverneur Morris.) Even we knew that Peter was in his grave and that the Dutch were no longer in possession of New York at the time of the Constitutional Convention.

Still tacked up on the bulletin board in the General Accounting Office is a veterans' sick-leave regulation issued by Herbert Hoover in 1930.

Living Index

The Bureau of Labor statistics' quarterly cost of living index which is to be used by U. S. Steel as a wage yardstick takes roughly five weeks to get up and is based on reports from more than 4,000 cooperating retailers in 51 cities throughout the country.

There are 2,003 retailers alone reporting on food items, another 750 on clothing, 250 on household furnishings and 150 on tobacco and smoking. Every type of retailer is included in proportion to community spending in these different types of outlets. As soon as a new neighborhood develops in any of the reporting cities, the list of retailers is expanded to include merchants in that district.

The list to be reported on includes 239 items, 84 of them food, 82 clothing, 8 fuel and light, 21 household furnishing and 44 miscellaneous articles ranging from automobiles to lead pencils. Each retailer is interviewed individually—the bureau has a staff of 16 field investigators and borrows additional interviewers from the branch Labor Department offices in the cities. All quotations, save that of food, are taken as of the fifteenth of the month. For food, bureau experts have decided that Tuesday is the most typical day.

The reports are sent in to the bureau's retail price division in this city, where they are enumerated and passed on to the bureau's cost of living division. The principal function of this section is to "weight" the different items reported on so the index will be a true reflection of the cost of living.

During the war years, when cost of living indexes were first used as wage yardsticks, the bureau made a study showing what proportion of the worker's income goes for different types of things. Food consumed 32 per cent of the average worker's income; clothing, 14 per cent; household furnishings, 5 per cent, and so on. These figures are still used for weighting the different classes of items.

The numerous articles in each class are weighted in similar fashion. Meat, for example, is given more weight than spinach. The items tabulated and weighted, a cost of living index is then compiled, first for each city and then for the entire Nation. In averaging out the index figures of the different cities, each city is weighted according to population.

The index is an "average" index, explained Isidore Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics, and therefore subject to all the disadvantages of any "average" yardstick. For numerous individuals the index would be entirely inaccurate.

Use of the index to adjust wages is not new—any number of such instances being on record. In general the practice works well as long as prices rise—employers are satisfied because until quarterly adjustments are made they enjoy so much velvet while workers are satisfied in that eventually they do get their increases.

So large was the crowd at Thursday night's performance that the Agriculture Music Guild will repeat its "Gay Nineties" program tonight in the Agriculture auditorium.

Smithsonian Report

Tomorrow's Office of Education-Smithsonian Institution broadcast will dramatize the Smithsonian's last annual report. "What's New in Science" is the title of the broadcast, and if you get hold of a copy of the report you will see why.

Part one is the routine account of the Institution's affairs for the year 1935, but part two consists of 27 scientific articles covering the latest developments in as many scientific fields.

The article that intrigued us most was that of Prof. Henry N. Russell, of Princeton University, raising the possibility that the earth will rust itself to death. There are no new supplies of oxygen on earth, yet, and our planet is steadily losing small quantities of oxygen that are combining with iron to form ferrous oxide (rust to you), argues Russell. This oxygen is lost forever—which would seem to make death by rust only a matter of time marching on. The red color of the planet Mars, Russell believes, may be a symptom of an advanced stage of oxygenic anemia.

George M. Warren, for 28 years an agricultural engineer with the Department of Agriculture, was given a retirement party the other day by his friends.

In his many years of service, Warren has written ten engineering bulletins, of which 1,666,000 copies have been distributed. Best-seller of the Warren list is "Sewage and Sewerage of Farm Homes," with 376,000 copies.

Also retiring this month, from the Government Printing Office, are Moses Bretzfelder, after 29 years service; Sylvester F. Garman, 19 years, and Pickney C. Hilton, 28 years.

7 Suspects Are Accused In Theft Ring

Police Charge Men Involved in $10,000 Rifling of Trucks.

Charged with stealing wearing apparel from a transfer company, then selling it to stores in Southwest Washington, seven men were arrested yesterday.

Detective Sergts. C. H. Trammell, Michael Mulhaney and Thomas Sweeney and Precinct Detective R. E. Williams have been on the trail of the thieves for some time, but it was only after they had caught one of them with the alleged loot that they cornered the gang.

Five of those held were charged with grand larceny and two were accused of receiving stolen property. All the prisoners are colored.

Five Worked on Trucks.

According to police, the five who obtained the goods were employed on the trucks of a local transfer company which hauls goods here for a New York concern. They had been operating for about a year, police said, and in that time took about $10,000 worth of goods.

Already claims for more than $4,700 have been paid out by the transfer company for goods taken from its loading platforms at Fourth and E streets southwest.

The five men who worked for the company, police asserted last night, carefully picked what would sell most readily in their two stores, located in private homes. They would take small quantities of merchandise at a time.

Sometimes their loot would be several well-tailored suits. Often they would take as many as a dozen or more.

"Fences" Operated Stores.

The "fences" ran the stores, receiving most of their goods at night from the five sources of supply, police say.

The gang, police declared, made its mistakes. One night the "boys" brought in some boxes in which they thought was a high-grade of hosiery. When the boxes were opened, there were only shoe trees inside.

Undaunted, police say, the prisoners drove to Rock Creek Park and dumped the trees. In fact, the park became the "graveyard" for all unwanted goods.

The prisoners furnished $2,000 bond apiece last night.

A. A. A. Protests Speeding Penalty

Voicing sharp criticism of the present practice of automatically suspending permits of motorists caught driving faster than 35 miles an hour, the advisory board of the A. A. A. District Motor Club yesterday urged the District Commissioners to use "care and discrimination in imposing so drastic a penalty."

The board recommended that suspension or revocation be based not on speed violation alone, but also the degree of recklessness involved; and that the Board of Revocations be required to hear the sworn testimony of arresting officers.

Consideration should be given the facts and circumstances in each speed violation case, the board contended as it reiterated its complaint that a motorist caught speeding in an outlying district when there is no traffic should not receive the same punishment as one driving at the same speed by a school or in a congested district.

Thomas Relates 20-Yr. Growth Of Holy Land

Geographic Unit Speakers Talk on Modernization After Emigration.

With motion pictures of strife in Palestine now in progress, and "cut backs" to the Holy Land campaign of 1918 when Allenby drove the Turks from the eastern end of the Mediterranean, Lowell Thomas, radio commentator, last night sketched for members of the National Geographic Society the changes that have taken place in Palestine in the last two decades.

Speaking at Constitution Hall, Thomas opened the fiftieth consecutive series of lectures in Washington under auspices of the society. He was introduced by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the society.

Recent pictures showed how Jewish colonists from all parts of the world have brought old fields into production, have planted orange groves, and have built modern cities, among them Tel Aviv, in which more than 100,000 inhabitants now live in what was a barren plain 20 years ago.

But beside these scenes of construction were shown patrols of British tanks, bristling with machine guns, which must protect the colonists today from the Arabs who resent the making of Palestine into "a national Jewish home." Fighting is in progress even in the crowded city of Jaffa, where, the motion pictures showed, British troops recently have dynamited buildings in an effort to dislodge Arab snipers.

President Wilson sent Thomas to Palestine to gather information for the American Government at the time of Allenby's campaign, and the pictures shown last night of the campaign were taken by Thomas' staff of cameramen. Thomas told his audience he considers the present situation in Palestine serious, but said that he could make no prophecy as to the outcome.

Thomas told of the great part played in the freeing of Palestine by his friend, Lawrence of Arabia. Lawrence, he declared, will go down in history as one of the most remarkable figures that British history has chronicled.

Gonzaga High Parents Marvel As Sons Study Latin in Public

Elementary Class' Proficiency Under Fire of Questions From Father Matthews on Stage Amazes Audience of 400 Fathers, Mothers, Relatives

Parents of Gonzaga High School students who have wondered sometimes about their sons' marks in Latin found out last night what the boys were up against. They saw them enact an elementary Latin class on the stage of Gonzaga High School Auditorium.

At least, the parents thought it was going to be elementary. They learned better after they'd been there for five minutes.

Some of them, who'd once been pretty good themselves at declensions and conjugations, found out the youngsters weren't so bad after all, no matter what kind of marks they got.

It seems the Rev. Phillip Clarke, S.J., headmaster at Gonzaga, got the idea parents might like to see what goes on in schoolrooms these days. So he had the Rev. Thomas Matthews, S.J., put his first year Latin class through its paces in public.

400 in Audience.

Desks were set up on the auditorium stage and the 35 boys in the class, all shiny-faced and scrubbed behind the ears, marched to their studies last night under the gaze of about 400 parents and relatives. A few teachers from other schools were there, too, taking notes avidly.

Father Matthews didn't pull any punches. He just went ahead with his teaching, paying no attention to the audience.

A burly, heavy-set man with white hair and glasses and a restless energy, he paced back and forth before the class, whipping questions in rapid-fire style.

"O'Donnell," he would say, "give me a verb in the third conjugation."

"Now, Walsh, give me the third person, singular, indicative, active of that verb."

Parents Astonished.

It went on like that, one verb after another, with the students sending back answers with a quickness and precision that had the parents numb with astonishment. Sight translation followed the verb drill.

Father Matthews attempts to teach his students to think logically. He is not so much concerned with sheer memory work as with showing the boys the reason for what they do.

After the class was over, he explained to the parents, the boys were working under pressure and would ordinarily have done much better. The parents believed that. They were glad that they took Latin lessons from the orchestra seats instead of the stage.

Afterward they told Father Matthews how glad they were they'd seen their sons in action. The sons didn't seem to mind it so much either. As one of them said:

"Aw, this wasn't so bad. We're going to get a day off from class Monday and, besides, we're going downstairs now and have dessert.

Labor Board Clears Auto Concern Here

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday ruled that the Nolan Motor Co., Inc., had not discriminated against Joseph Aceyes and Bruce Luttrell 2d, two of its employes, as had been charged by the International Association of Machinists, Local 193.

The board ruled, however, that the company had been guilty of unfair labor practice in attempting to induce employes to bind themselves to a company union. The board followed the board's instructions in rectifying the matter, but ordered it to cease all such practices in the future.

Acevez and Luttrell have been reinstated to their jobs voluntarily by the company, the board announced.

President Praises Patent Unit As 100th Anniversary Nears

President Roosevelt said in letters made public yesterday the American patent system "has contributed notably to a higher standard of living," and he said it held a bright promise for the future.

The President's letters, commenting on the celebration here November 23 of the 100th anniversary of the founding of the American patent system, were addressed to Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, and Dr. C. F. Kettering, chairman of the national committee in charge.

The President said in his letter to Secretary Roper:

"I trust the event will serve to impress our people with the material progress which the Nation has achieved in the last hundred years, and to stimulate their interest in the problems which are connected with our industrial advancement. For myself, I am convinced that the genius which the American Patent System has evoked and rewarded will prove equal to the solution of these social and economic problems."

To Dr. Kettering he wrote:

"The American Patent System has promoted countless applications of the arts and sciences to the needs and well being of our people. It has contributed notably to a higher standard of living. But progress has been accompanied by problems of social as well as industrial significance. Their solution is a task for us all. In our study of these questions it is likely that improvements in the patent system will take place as improvements in our social order continue."

D. C. to Fight Gobel's Suit For Abattoir

PWA, Parks Board Also Study Joining Court Battle on Permit.

Legal experts for the District government and two Federal agencies yesterday mapped plans for resisting the suit of Adolf Gobel, Inc., for an abattoir building permit after the Commissioners had stated flatly that they will fight the applicant so far as the courts will allow.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal conferred for several hours with counsel from the Public Works Administration and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, but stated afterward that no definite decision as to procedure had been reached.

Supported by President Roosevelt, the Commissioners, however, minced no words in stating that they would resort to every legal means to block the enlargement and reopening the Gobel meat preparation plant in the Northeast.

Special Meeting Set.

A special board meeting was scheduled for Monday morning so that the Commissioners may reject formally the Gobel application before argument Tuesday in District Supreme Court on the Gobel suit for a writ of mandamus. Meanwhile, however, the PWA may file a counter suit to enjoin the District heads from issuing a permit.

The District Zoning Commission formally announced a hearing for November 24 on the zoning regulations proposed by the special committee on the basis of its investigation and report on the abattoir problem.

More drastic control of "noxious, offensive, or hazardous" industries is contemplated under the rules which will be considered at the hearing.

Would Bar Sixteen Lines.

Sixteen types of industries would be added to the 50 now barred from second commercial districts by one of the regulations, while 30 businesses would require specific approval by the Zoning Commission before they could establish themselves in industrial areas.

The 16 industries which would be added to the barred group by the proposed regulation are:

Assaying, bag cleaning establishment, bottle factory, distilleries, fish canning, curing, grinding or smoking; flour grist or grain mills or elevators, glass factory, grinding, cooking, piling, rendering, or storing of slaughterhouse refuse, or animal refuse, or rancid fats, or refuse of dead animals; hair factory, iron, steel, or copper works or foundaries; manufacturer of concrete and mortar, and pulverizing charcoal or coal.

Kennedy Line Bus Proposal Stirs Protests

Brightwood Civic Group Fights Move to Drop Trolley Service.

Declaring "we have just begun to fight," the Brightwood Citizens Association, meeting last night in the Paul Junior High School, resolved to renew its protests against a petition of the Capital Transit Co. to abandon trolley service on the Kennedy street line in favor of bus service.

Headed by William McKay Clayton, chairman of the public utility committee, the citizens agreed to present their protest at the hearing Monday of the P. U. C. The Capital Transit Co. will then present their case for abandoning the line in Kennedy street.

Clayton declared the company has been using "propaganda" to persuade Kennedy street business men to agree to the abandoning of the car service. He said the company has threatened that parking on Kennedy street would be forbidden unless the car tracks were abandoned.

The association adopted a resolution calling for the substitution of a three-platoon system for District firemen.

Announcement of a membership drive to round up new residents of the Brightwood area, was made by P. J. Moynihan.

Ballou 'Ridiculous' In Barring Suburb Pupils, Glass Says

Dr. Frank W. Ballou's attempt to exclude from local schools out-of-District children whose parents are employed in Washington was described as "ridiculous" yesterday by Carter Glass, Senator from Virginia and head of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Glass said that Ballou, who is superintedent of schools, had until last year appeared annually for 16 years before the Senate Appropriations Committee seeking repeal of the law providing for admission of such children.

Almost every year, Glass said, the House had approved such repeal only to have the proposal thrown out in the Senate.

Dr. Ballou recently lost the first battle in his campaign to exclude out-of-District children when the District court held the law to be mandatory on the school superintendent and the Board of Education. Suit was brought by John S. Kemp, of Clarendon, Va., to compel the board to admit his 11-year-old daughter, Lois, to Gordon Junior High School.

Union to Buy Famed Club as Headquarters

Mine Workers Seeking University Building at Fifteenth and I Sts.

Establishment of permanent headquarters for the Committee for Industrial Organization in the University Club Building at Fifteenth and I streets northwest was forecast yesterday after it was revealed that the United Mine Workers are negotiating for purchase of the property.

A proposal to buy the building for approximately $275,000 will be acted on at a meeting of the United Mine Workers here Monday, it was learned.

Proctor L. Dougherty, president of the University Club Building Co., which owns the property, admitted negotiations are under way but refused to reveal any details.

The University Club recently merged with the Racquet Club and agreed to establish its quarters in the Racquet Club Building at 1135 Sixteenth street northwest. It is expected the merger will be completed sometime this month.

The five-story University Club Building, it was pointed out, would provide adequate accommodations for headquarters of both the United Mine Workers and the C. I. O. The lower floor of the club building, it was pointed out, could be remodeled to provide two floors of office suites.

The U. M. W. now occupy almost all of the seventh floor of the Tower Building. The C. I. O. has headquarters in the Rust Building, Fifteenth and K streets northwest. John L. Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O., is also president of the U. M. W.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, has charged that the C. I. O. is planning to set itself up as a rival to the A. F. of L. in the labor field.

The dispute between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. will be brought to a head next week when the latter holds its annual convention at Tampa, Fla.

"Name Censorship."

Hollywood, Nov. 13.

Studios, like insurance companies and public utility corporations, are prey for unscrupulous persons who stoop to legal trickery to get something for nothing. I forget how many thousands of damage and libel suits have been filed against film companies, but piled one on another I am sure they would reach nearly to the moon.

GRACIE ALLEN.

To avoid many such suits, studios have established "name censorship" bureaus. It is the duty of these offices to make sure pictures contain no infringements on persons, places, or things. For example, if a script character is named John Smithoski, of St. Louis, the "name censor" consults St. Louis city and telephone directories for a real John Smithoski. If there is one, the name of the screen character is changed. Thus is avoided the possibility of a libel suit should the real Smithoski take offense at his: fictitious namesake.

• • • • •

"Murder in Sing Sing" was switched to "Murder in the Big House" because Sing Sing is real, and in the picture a guard committed murder. A guard might have sued the studio. Dozens of picture titles have been changed for similar reasons.

• • • •

I sometimes wonder if Gracie Allen's radio characterization is such a pose, after all. No kidding, she kens less about what she is doing—and she admits it—than any actress I know. George Burns does everything for Gracie. He examines her scripts, accepts or rejects or rewrites her dialogue, and rehearses Miss Allen in her lines. Each afternoon he delivers to her a few pages of script on which are typed next day's dialougue. Each night he instructs her how to recite her lines and next day she repeats them with about the originality employed by a parrot. Gracie trusts George so implicity that, to save her soul, she can seldom tell you the story of the picture in which she is working, and often she does not know the title.

"Tarzan Escapes" Is Best of Films Based on the Burroughs Jungle Tales

Is on Screen at Capitol; Ted Lewis at Earle; Other Programs.

"TARZAN ESCAPES." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story suggested by the characters created by Edgar Rice Burroughs, adapted to the screen by Cyril Hume, costarring Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan, with Benita Hume, John Buckler, Herbert Mundin, E. E. Clive, Darby Jones and William Henry. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

Probably the best—certainly the longest in process of production—of any of the "Tarzan" films based on the Edgar Rice Burroughs fictions, "Tarzan Escapes," sets new standards for this sort of semi-civilized carnival of adventurous humans, wild beasts and a primitive man's ability to summon the forces of Nature and the wild life in which he has been reared to his aid in times of desperate need.

BELL.

The story follows the usual formula that has been pressed into service in the earlier films derived from the same source material, but here the legend of the elephants' burying ground, Tarzan's complete camaraderie with the denizens of the jungles and the rivers of his native Africa and his devotion to Jane, the English girl, who has chosen to share his life in the open, have been put to rather better advantage than usual, it seems to me.

A Thrilling Climax.

There is a cumulative forcefulness in the developments of this strictly fantastic figment that has been lacking from the earlier releases in which Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan have been seen. The summoning of the trumpeting elephant herd to prevent physical violence to Capt. Fry, who "brings 'em back alive," is a climacteric stroke that would thrill any audience.

There is, too, a productional value apparent in this film that its predecessors have lacked—a photographic and directorial excellence that stamp it as a picture with which great care was taken in the making.

The thing is alive with jungle beasts and the picturesque denizens of the African veldts and rivers. As a natural history exhibit, "Tarzan Escapes" almost would do for a classroom exercise. Basically, however, the narrative clings closely to the concept of a unique series of adventure tales originally inspired in the mind of Edgar Rice Burroughs. Not only will the pictured fable arouse the acute interest and excitement of juvenile audiences, but there is about it a touch of sanity that will appeal equally to adult amusement-seekers who do not insist upon too relentless a degree of plausibility in their entertainment.

Is Perfectly Cast.

Johnny Weissmuller, with his blood-curdling jungle cry, to my mind, still remains the ideal selection for the title role of any Tarzan story—the husky and bludgeoning Mr. Lou Gehrig to the contrary, notwithstanding. Maureen O'Sullivan, of course, remains an ideal Jane and able support is contributed on this occasion by the inimitable Herbert Mundin, who seems particularly futile and pathetic, lost in the endless morasses of the far places of the earth—he was that way in "A Message to Garcia," you will recall, and that was only a baby jungle!—John Buckler, as the "villain" of the piece, and Benita Hume, so close an image of Mary Astor as to give the impression of being a twin.

It would be the part of gross ingratitude upon the part of one who always is thrilled by such things, not to pay tribute to the animal and reptilian actors who take part in this subject. They add immeasurably to its excitement and realism.

Ray Perkins on Stage.

On the stage at the Capitol this week, Ray Perkins heads a Columbia Radio Revue that includes a number of interesting and diverting talents, his own not the least of the lot. Some of Mr. Perkins' jests fell a little flat yesterday afternoon, but when he sang and exchanged badinage with "Swingtime Tony"—who is by way of being Vic Laurie—things began to look up.

Patti Chapin, "the melody girl," and Emery Deutsch, with his gypsy violin, are the musical bulwarks of the revue, ably seconded by that excellent double male quartet known as the Buccaneers, whose close harmonies are in the best barber shop manner and vaudeville tradition. Richard Stuart and Claire Lea, from the famous Rainbow Room in Radio City, New York, supply a distinctly effective touch of dance to the proceedings.

With the orchestra on stage this week, Phil Lampkin contributes generously to the spectacular as well as auricular effectiveness of the bill. The Fox Movietone News is the major auxiliary of a feature that has been deferred so long in release that the appetite seems to have been whetted for exactly that sort of thing on the screen.

In Latest Fable of the Jungle

Accentuating the eerie and exotic qualities of the earlier "Tarzan" stories, "Tarzan Escapes," on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater this week, offers a study in primitive life and adventure that must thrill even the most jaded taste The principal feminine role, opposite Johnny Weissmuller, as usual, is played by Maureen O'Sullivan, who here is pictured with Tarzana, the baby chimpanzee that was a recent Washington visitor and this department's latest "crush"!

Presenting the most brilliantly diversified bill of playlets of the three that have distinguished his first week at the National Theater, Noel Coward and his associate artists last night won a complete and warming ovation at the hands of one of the largest and most representative audiences of the engagement—including in a third-row, aisle, orchestra chair that cherubic commentator and recumbent comedian, Mr. Alexander Woollcott, the "town crier," who seemed immensely taken with his oceanic companion's latest essay, in abbreviated form, at the subtle art of Thespis.

Mr. Woollcott was not alone in his enthusiasm over his friend's facile dramalets. The applause at the fall of the final curtain was so voluminous and so sustained as to compel Mr. Coward to make another of his brief speeches of thanks on behalf of himself and his wholly admirable company.

It has been a cumulative course that the three bills of the week have pursued. The second seemed to these eyes and ears to be, in several important respects, superior to the first and, in the substantial fiber of its trilogy of works, the third now seems to me to be the best of them all.

Opens With Comedy.

The first offering of the evening, as seems to be Mr. Coward's fixed purpose in presenting his plays, struck a comedy note and struck it resoundingly. "Ways and Means" relates the amusing tale of two young wayfarers, house guests on the Riviera, who have not the means to depart, although their sumptuous quarters have been pledged to other guests. A burglar, who turns out to have been a former chauffeur of theirs, bobs into the apartment one night and by a judicious application of the rudiments of his new trade acquires sufficient funds to carry them all over the emergency.

A spicy, pungent and staccato recital that permits Miss Lawrence and Mr. Coward to cavort engagingly in pajamas and night gowns, take their hair down and altogether have a cozy and belligerent evening!

Second on the third of the bills was "Still Life," an attenuated story of clandestine love that could have been told with greater economy of time and tea, had the author exercised his usual penchant for conciseness and brevity. Done in five scenes, in a railroad station lunchroom, it seemed to me that this item dragged itself out a bit too thinly, despite its wealth of characterization, brittle humor, by-play and atmospheric integrity.

The gem of the evening was "Family Album," in which the hypocrisy of bogus mourning for an unlamented, philandering and close-fisted father finally was torn to tatters by his rebellious children and toasts were drunk, in his finest rare old Madeira, to the ancient butler who, in company with his eldest daughter, had burned the new will in favor of the old gentleman's latest loves and left valid the one of ten years' earlier, bequeathing his earthly goods to his children.

Here is an example of the Coward flair for satire, deft humor, helpful music and adroit stage business that must be written down as a cameo masterpiece. Quaintly staged and costumed in the period of 1860, this playlet is irresistibly charming and picturesque.

As in all of the bills that have gone before, Mr. Coward, Miss Lawrence, Joyce Carey and their associate players were unbelievably fine last night.

As one surveys the sum total of the week's work by these gifted artists the wonder becomes greater that they are able to do so well so many different things as their assignments demand. Especial mention ought to be made of Alan Webb's work in "Still Life" and as the aged butler in "Family Album."

If time and space permitted, every member of every cast should have a modest accolade bestowed upon him. Mr. Coward has every right to be as proud of his company as he professed to be in a friendly visit on Thursday night. N. B. B.

"CARNIVAL IN FLANDERS," otherwise "LA KERMESSE HEROIQUE." Films Sonores Tobis Espinay picturization of a story by Charles Spaak, adapted to the screen by Bernard Zimmer, with music by Louis Beydts, featuring Francoise Rosay, Alerme, Jean Murat, Louis Jouvet, Lynne Clevers, Micheline Cheirel, Maryse Wending, Ginette Gaubert, Alfred Adam, Claude Saint Val and Delphin, the dwarf. Directed by Jacques Feyder. Reviewed Friday night, second week, by Sally Stroud.

"Carnival in Flanders" ("La Kermesse Heroique" to you, if you passed second-year French) must be good to warrant the praises of such widely differing dramatic critics as Peter Ellis, of the New Masses, and Howard Barnes, of the Herald-Triune. It found favor with both of them. And the chances are that it will likewise win your approval.

Laid in the early part of the seventeenth century, the plot concerns itself with exciting incidents in the litle Flemish village, Boom, incidents which transpire within the limits of 24 hours.

A duke attached to the court of Philippe of Spain sojourns in the town one night. Hoping to avert possile devastation of Boom by the troops, the burgomaster plays dead, the all-night wake is supposed to cause the duke to respect the grieving village and prevent pillage.

Women Take a Hand.

Resenting such submissive cowardice, the women of the village, led by Mme. Burgomaster, receive the retainers' hospitality. And win tax exemptions for the village for one year—among other concessions.

Gaily refreshing, filled with Gallic wit and double entendre, it is a show of which you will find yourself thinking later. A fine characterization is given by Mme. Burgomaster (Francoise Rosay), who shifts from maternal anxiety to seductive femininity quick as a wink. The Padre (Louis Jouvet) is a skillful satire.

Byrd Lauds Y. M. C. A. As Foe of Propaganda

Activities of organizations such as the Y. M. C. A. are necessary today to combat the spread of propaganda directed against the Government, the church and the family among college students, Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, declared last night at a meeting in the "Y" gymnasium here.

"I hope schools and colleges will emulate the work you are doing," Byrd said.

Crisp Picture And Ted Lewis Win Audiences

Earle Bill Wins Favor of Reviewer Who Missed Out on Peanuts.

"ADVENTURE IN MANHATTAN." Columbia Pictures Similation of a story by Joseph Krumgold, adapted to the screen by Sidney Buchanan, Harry Sauber and Jack Kirkland, featuring Jean Arthur and Joel McCrea, with Reginald Owen, Thomas Mitchell, Herman Bing, Victor Killian, George Cooper and Robert Warwick. Directed by Edward Ludwig. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

Ted Lewis, that pint-sized master showman of them all, has found a new way to get a big "Yes!" to his "Is Everybody Happy?"

Ted tosses peanuts (and nice, hot peanuts, at that) out to the Earle audiences this week. The effect is to turn the front part of the audience into one big party. Not to give tricks away, but an enterprising collegiate in back of this critic tossed his hat on the stage during the peanut riot and Ted filled it brimming full of hot goobers and tossed it back. The peanut-laden lad passed handfuls of nerts out to everybody within reaching distance. So here's the tip on how to get a hatful of peanuts—if you don't mind taking chances with your hat—and if the peanuts hold out.

But I can hear an irate editor saying: "Nuts to this sort of nutsy review. What was the show about?"

Lewis in Top Form.

Ted Lewis, who is an inimitable fellow, after all, offers one of his best revues, sprinkled with both new numbers and those old ones that his public demands, also finely garnished with specialty performers.

Among the newer numbers, "There's Always a Happy Ending" seems almost as ideally designed for Lewis delivery as his famed "When My Baby Smiles at Me." Also extra-extra was a trick version of "Me and My Shadow," with a cullud lad following Ted about and mimicking his every motion. This same brown boy, one "Snowball" Whittier, almost stops the show with his stepping whenever he goes into high.

Nasha and Edna Strong, charming and smart, also contribute amusing specialty dances. The radio aces and the rest of the big orchestra provide splendid numbers, including a muted interpretation of "Star Dust" (so muted that Maestro Lewis tiptoed about and murmured "Sh-h-h, sweetheart," to the beneficiaries of his peanut hospitality); also a properly maniacal "St. Louis Blues."

And On the Screen.

"Adventure in Manhattan" is a crackling and light-hearted crime picture, with undertones of the newspaper and theatrical businesses. Played throughout with crispness and flippancy, it offers a properly tasty entertainment item.

Jean Arthur and Joel McCrea should both gain considerably by their performances in this frothy bit of celluloid. This Arthur girl is one that grows on you at every performance. Her work has a finish and sharpness that puts her a mile ahead of the merely pretty-pretty ladies of the movies, although she is plenty pretty, too.

That engaging gawkiness of Mr. McCrea's is supplemented in his writer-criminologist role by his equally engaging conception of an all-right fellow with an inflated ego.

Criminal Forecasting.

The general idea of "Adventure in Manhattan" is that a smart young criminologist, by studying a sequence of crimes, can tell what the next crime will be and where and when it will take place.

The stars, by sheer merit, dominate the film and there is not much picture-stealing. But Reginald Owen, as the criminal master mind, and Herman Bing, in one of his waiter roles, grab quite a few scenes for their very own.

Leon Errol in a short comedy, is still the one and only Errol. There is also a highly interesting scientific short in color and the newsreel gives glimpses of those new car models that are intriguing all our minds, now that "happy days are here again."

"LIBELED LADY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Wallace Sullivan, adapted to the screen by Maurine Watkins, Howard Rogers and George Oppenheimer, starring Myrna Loy, Jean Harlow, William Powell and Spencer Tracy, supported by Walter Connolly. Directed by Jack Conway. Reviewed second week by Dorothea Lewis.

Less than a two weeks' run of this nice nonsense would have been libel against Washington's sense of humor.

The principal word of warning is do, do read your time tables and get in at the beginning of the picture or you'll be somewhat lost in the mazes of the mad adventures of four merry people. You'll laugh no matter where and when in the plot you arrive, but you won't laugh half as hard as if you knew what it was all about.

First, there is a newspaper editor who takes a day off and on that day his embattled staff prints a nice, juicy, phony story about a playgirl heiress. After that, the editor can't even take enough time off to marry his dear Gladys because the aforesaid heiress sues for five million dollars cash—no installments accepted.

Everything It Takes.

There you have a trio—the editor, his Gladys, and his libeled lady. To this is added a fourth and unique character, the ace libel-suit buster of the world all ready to prove that the libel wasn't libel after all. Mix these four up, throw in a marriage of convenience here, a love affair there, a fishing expedition in a very cold creek, and add Spencer Tracy, Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy and Bill Powell and you have a heady combination. It's fun all the way, though the end is a bit weak-kneed.

The acting quartet is tops all round and all are in fine fettle with Miss Harlow particularly brisk. Myrna lovelier than ever and Powell and Tracy exactly right. Walter Connolly does his usual excellent part in helping affairs. It's a good show.

The subsidiaries include a very amusing and unusually colorful colored cartoon featuring a turtle, a rabbit, three young lady bunnies, a barnyard Mae West and plenty of fireworks. There is also an interesting Pete Smith short showing how newspapers get pictures in no time at all. The newsreel completes the bill.

Bride-to-Be By Vida Hurst

SYNOPSIS.

Becky Stern is the pretty young secretary of Francis Rhodes, elderly owner of a prosperous paper manufacturing company. Because of her employer's illness, Becky has been working in his home, where she has had to repulse the attentions of Francis, Junior, a madcap youth of her own age. Here also she has met Philip, handsome, embittered architect nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes, who has just returned after eight years from Mexico City. Philip is an orphan and self-made. He is the object of the envious hatred of Francis Junior, to whom he has been held up as a model.

Regina, Philip's married cousin, and her mother are convinced he has returned from Mexico City to win Leila Meade, beautiful young widow, who had jilted him eight years before. They do everything in their power to further the romance, as does Leila herself. Within two weeks of Philip's return, Becky is forced to admit to herself that she is in love with him, and that her love is hopeless. As she lies on the sofa in the library while her employer goes for his afternoon ride, she is awakened by a kiss.

Francis Junior had felt the factory, knowing his parents would be driving, and he wisses her a second time as she—waking—sees Philip over her shoulder. Philip seems amused, Becky is furious and Francis Junior accuses Philip of monopolising Becky's time with his "dictation." Later he apologizes, and Becky, in an effort to save his father worry, half promises him a date if he will abandon a spree on which he had already started.

Now go on with the story:

CHAPTER V.

Becky had hoped that Francis, jr., would not remember her promise of the night before but he was reminding her of it before he left the house the next morning.

He stopped in the library looking pleased with himself as he said in a low voice, "You haven't forgotten your promise?"

"I said perhaps," she began, but he interrupted, "I've kept my part of the bargain. The least you can do is keep yours."

"Shall I come to your house tonight? he asked eagerly.

"No!" she said hastily. "But you may take me home if you like. Only don't leave the factory any earlier. I'll wait here until you come."

The triumph in his face was disheartening. Why was he so determined to talk to her?

Far From Happy.

"I've done nothing but discourage him," she mused. "He wouldn't be nearly so interested if I wanted him."

She was far from happy that morning as she sat in the pleasant, comfortable room but at least she had her own feelings well in hand. The way she felt about Philip was something which could not be helped, but she had tied a stone of utter hopelessness about it and cast it overboard. It should not be allowed to sink her ship. She was the captain of her own ship of fate, and unrequited love should be no part of its cargo.

Secure in this knowledge, she was able to meet Philip with a calmness which was not assumed.

"You're looking more like yourself this morning," he approved. "Would it be possible for you to do some work for me this afternoon?"

"Any time after lunch," she agreed.

"I wish you'd let me pay for it, Becky!"

"I can't do that under the circumstances. Mr. Rhodes hasn't nearly enough for me to do but he is paying me for all my time. You know they are taking care of everything they possibly can at the factory. My being here at all is mostly a gesture to make him feel that he is better."

Indignant.

"He looks very tired," Philip said. "I'm afraid he's far from well yet. And he worries a lot, too. Why don't you use your influence to persuade Francis, jr., to quit playing around and get down to business?"

She colored with indignation.

"What makes you think I have any?"

"You're the only one who has," he insisted. "I happened to overhear his telephone call to you last night. Aunt Molly was worried when he didn't come home for dinner."

"But he promised me he would," she said, forgetting to be cautious.

"It's none of my business," Philip admitted as he had the day before. "But I think for your own sake you shouldn't ride with him when he's been drinking. He's reckless enough at any time."

"But I wasn't with him. I hadn't been . . . Oh," she cried, exasperated. "Why must you think such things about me?"

"But you just said he had promised you to go home," Philip reminded her.

"Over the telephone," she explained. "It was Stubby Vinton who was with him."

She fancied that Philop looked relieved.

"The fact remains that you are the only one I know of who has any influence with him," he continued. "I hope for Uncle Francis' sake you'll use that influence in the best possible way."

Do What I Can.

"I'll do what I can," she rejoined stiffly.

"Thank you," he said and left the room.

He returned later in the afternoon with a sheaf of specifications under his arm. Some of them were to be copied in Spanish, he explained. His tone was abrupt and business like. After an hour and a half, he telephoned Lelia that he would meet her in the circus room.

It was all right it seemed for them to have cocktails together but wrong for Becky to accept the same invitation from Francis, jr. She wondered what Philip would think if she should suddenly appear there with his cousin. Francis, jr., would like nothing better but she had no desire to do it. No desire except the rather childish one of showing Philip that she resented his dictatorial attitude.

Francis was waiting for her when she left the house. Slouched at the wheel of his car, smoking a cigaret, the picture of bored indifference, until she opened the door. Then his handsome face brightened with a boyish pleasure which made him infinitely more attractive.

"Stubby telephoned," Becky said, settling down into the seat beside him. "She wants you to call her just as soon as you get home."

"To hell with her!" he replied. "I wish she'd let me alone. Where to, Becky? Some place where we can talk and be alone?"

"I have to be home for dinner at 6:30."

Won't Go.

"But I shan't. I've no intention of going any place with you, Francis. I only suggested your bringing me home because you said you wanted to talk to me."

"I do. But why won't you go to dinner with me? We can spend a nice, quiet evening. I won't even take a drink."

"I can't afford to do it. I work for your father and, as I've told you before, I refuse to carry on a secret flirtation with his son."

"And as I've told you before it's no flirtation," he protested. "I'm crazy about you and you know it. You couldn't possibly be as dumb as you've pretended. That's why I kissed you yesterday. I'm so beastly unhappy, Becky! Life simply isn't worth living. Why don't you be sweet to me?"

"Why must you be unhappy?" she countered. "You have everything in the world that most boys want. A car of your own, a beautiful home, grand parents and a chance for a good education. Even a business waiting for you."

"That's just it," he complained "Everything all cut and dried. I've no choice in the matter. It's been that way all my life. My future was all decided for me before I was born. I must do this and that because it is expected of me. My God! Why can't they let me alone?"

"Just another poor little rich boy! Who wants to blame everyone but himself for the fact that he's deliberately making a mess of things."

"I wouldn't," he argued. "If you would take an interest in me. I'd feel that I had someone to work for. Someone who cared."

"But, Francis, you have your mother and father. Why don't you want to make good for them?"

He shrugged.

"I don't know. It just isn't the same."

They had reached her flat and he surveyed it with interest.

"Is this where you live? I've often wondered about it. May I come in?"

"Not tonight. You see it's just dinner time."

"You might invite me to dinner," he suggested.

"I can't even do that," she smiled. "You see, Francis, my parents are very conservative. They don't approve of my mixing business and friendship."

"You're of age," he reminded her. "And you support yourself. What do you care what they think?"

"I love them too much to hurt them," she answered. "And I must go in now. Thank you for bringing me home."

As he drove away she felt that some of his dissatisfaction had penetrated her own serenity. Wearily she climbed the stairs and opened the door.

"Guess what, Becky!" Jinny cried "There's a big box of flowers for you. Roses! There must be at least two dozen of them."

"THE SMARTEST GIRL IN TOWN." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Muriel Scheck and H. S. Kraft, with screen play by Viola Brothers Shore, featuring Gene Raymond and Ann Sothern, supported by Erik Rhodes, Eric Blore and Helen Broderick. Directed by Joseph M. Santley. Reviewed Friday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

If one is seeking among the town's quota of new pictures this week one which is sheer entertainment, with no pretenses at profound narrative, magnificent acting or awe-inspiring investiture, let him at once consider "The Smartest Girl in Town."

Here is delightful froth, with a bit of drama thrown in. After his earlier "Love On a Bet," and "Walking On Air," one would expect just this sort of thing from Gene Raymond, and the way he tossed off the ribtickling lines of those pieces is even topped in the current work.

It is the quite frayed yarn about a professional model who wants to marry money so that she may have for her own the beautiful clothes in which she poses. But she falls in love with a male model (so she thinks), but he turns out to be, after all, one of the town's richer and most desirable bachelors.

Is Delightfully Played.

Yes, most assuredly, it is nil from the standpoint of story novelty, but with Ann Sothern as the girl in question and Mr. Raymond, the boy, together with the estimable Eric Blore as the gentleman's gentleman, and Helen Broderick as essential passer of side remarks, it does not particularly matter about the story.

What is more important is the lines and how they are read, and you can rest assured that there is nothing to worry about on those scores. And everything that might be expected, especially from the Raymond-Blore-Broderick combine, is fully realized. Although you will not long remember the story, the memory of a pleasant period of relaxation will surely linger.

"Lalapaloosa," a pleasing comedy with Buddy Doyle, Eddie Gribbon and Lois Lindsay; a fascinating issue in Universal's "Stranger Than Fiction" series; "In My Gondola," an interesting color cartoon, and a release of Pathe News round out a program which, while it may not be truly great, is, nevertheless, thoroughly entertaining.

Pennsylvania Orders 100,000 Tons of Rails

Anticipating further track improvements in 1937 in the light of the increased volume of traffic moving and in preparation for continued advances in the speed and comfort of its service, the Pennsylvania Railroad yesterday announced purchase of 100,000 tons of new steel rail, involving an expenditure of approximately $4,000,000.

The new tonnage will include approximately 36,000 tons of rail weighing 152 pounds to the yard, the heaviest used in the railroad's main high-speed running tracks. Rail weighing 131 pounds to the yard will complete the purchases now authorized.

Hilltop Faces Manhattan in New York

Gotham Eleven Choice to Take Game From Unbeaten Hoyas.

Capital Team Seeking 3d Straight Victory 'for Father Mac.'

By Lewis F. Atchison.

New York, Nov. 13.—Friday, the thirteenth, a dreaded day of superstitions and possible bad fortune, held little fear for Georgetown's football squad as the Hoya Huskies halted here tonight, preparatory to marching on Brooklyn, where they tangle with Manhattan tomorrow in one of the East's topnotch attractions.

The alleged evil spell supposedly cast over anybody unfortunate enough to crack a mirror, walk under a ladder, or permit a black cat to cross his path met with derision. The boys pooh-poohed such Middle Age drivel and laughed it off. The day, in fact, was uneventful and slipped peacefully away.

But Georgetown, especially with the undefeated record clutched in its collective grasp, found itself unable to laugh off the menace of Saturday, the fourteenth, bringing with it Manhattan's young men of mayhem. The Hilltoppers are fully aware of the fact that the Jaspers constitute the sternest test they have been put to this season.

Cast in the familiar role of underdog with the experts voting almost unanimously against them, and the odds 6-5 on Manhattan, the District men have only one thing in their favor, that this is "Father Mac's game." This is the victory they annually try to win for the Rev. Vincent A. McDonough, S. J., student counselor. Two years ago Coach Hagerty, in a moment of inspiration, asked his players to "Take this one home to Father Mac."

Georgetown was the rank underdog that brisk, autumn afternoon, last year, just as it will be tomorrow, but the final figures were 9-0 in its favor. Last year Hagerty asked them to make it two in a row for "Fther Mac," and they did, 13-0. But tomorrow it may be asking a little too much to match that score. Hagerty will be satisfied with a win by any margin.

Manhattan, on the upgrade as its 13-7 victory over Kentucky last week attests, will start virtually an all-rookie team against the Hoyas.

Perfect Season Wildcats' Aim

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—The Wildcats of Northwestern, short-priced favorites, but fearing that an upset is lurking just around the corner, tackle once-mighty Michigan tomorrow in their final battle of the Western Conference championship campaign.

A defeat at the hands of the Wolverines couldn't take the Big Ten title away from Northwestern, for that question was settled last week when the wildcats skinned past Wisconsin. But a Michigan victory would wreck Northwestern's rosy dreams of a first perfect season in its gridiron history.

Coach Lynn Waldorf's eleven figures to have too much of everything at its disposal to give Michigan much of a chance of gladdening a crowd of 40,000. The Wildcats, however, will be crippled for the first time of the season. Red Fuller, 6-foot, 5-inch center of the famous Northwestern line, will be on the bench, the result of an accumulation of injuries.

Duke Declines Offer To Play Havana Game

Durham, N. C., Nov. 13. (AP).—Wallace Wade, director of athletics at Duke University, today cabled Cuban government authorities his Blue Devil football team would be unable to accept, if offered, an invitation to play a New Year's game in Havana.

The message was in reply to one from Carlos Henriquez, Cuban commissioner of sports, which asked:

"Would Duke University consider playing first class Southern or Eastern opponent football game in Havana New Year's day?"

GEORGE DIFFENBAUGH

Diffenbaugh's 145 Wins D. C. Open Title

By Dave Herman.

The District open golf championship, which diminutive George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring Country Club, captured last season, is still in his possession following a repetition of his victory yesterday at Bannockburn Golf Club's course.

Consistency from tee to green had its reward for the methodical little professional, who finished with a 36-hole total of 145, fashioned from rounds of 72 and 73.

Diffenbaugh, five over par for this ancient, hilly layout, finished two shots in front of Al Houghton, Bannockburn's promotion manager, creator of the District open, the big reason why the tournament wasn't relegated this year to the limbo of forgotten championships.

Houghton, who appeared to be the big favorite after he matched par in the morning with a brilliant 37-33—70, had to contend with rebellious irons and an uncertain putting stroke in the afternoon, and ruined his chances by taking 40 shots on the outgoing nine. He tried to revive his fast tottering game on

Tigers to Seek Revenge Today

By the Associated Press.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 13.—The Princeton football team counted tonight on settling a two-year grievance tomorrow, when it will clash with the Yale eleven in the sixtieth renewal of the longest continuous football rivalry in the nation.

In their last game at Palmer Stadium, a determined band of Elis outfought a highly favored Tiger team to win, 7 to 0. It was Princeton's first defeat in two years. Now, Yale is challenging a two-year string of victories at home.

With an expected 57,000 persons filling the stadium, Larry Kelley, the end who caught a pass for that memorable 1934 touchdown, will lead the Eli assault. Princeton has been credited with superior manpower, even as it was two years ago.

Yale has a decided edge in the series, having won 31 games to 18 for the Tigers. Ten ended in ties,

Old Line Host To V. M. I. Huskies

Home-Coming Interest at Peak; Series Is Led by Terrapins.

Guckeyson Factor That May Put the Old Line in 2d Place.

Needing a victory over V. M. I. to take second place in the Southern Conference, the University of Maryland meets the Cadets at College Park today only a slight favorite to win. Assuming Duke turns back North Carolina, the Terps could shoot into second place in the conference by beating the Soldiers.

Chances of performing that feat rest largely on Bill Guckeyson, its great backfield star, who has paced the Old Liners to most of their victories this season. Coach Frank Dobson, taking no chances against the aggressive Virginians, is starting the Bethesda Bronco in the opening line-up.

It will be home-coming day at College Park and the Terps are all set to brighten the occasion for the hundreds of returning alumni. In conference games, Maryland has beaten Richmond, V. P. I. and Virginia, but lost to North Carolina.

High Scores Loom.

When the teams take the field in Byrd Stadium at 2:30 p. m., it will mark the fifteenth game between the two schools over a stretch of 30 years. Maryland has won eight of the 14 and two were ties. The crowd on hand is likely to see a duel between two crack backfields and a high-scoring game is highly possible.

Guckeyson leads a ball-carrying corps which includes Jumbo Jim Meade, Charlie Ellinger, John Goroley, Coleman Headley, Charlie Weldinger, Bud Hewitt, Waverly Wheeler and others, all of whom rate well as backfield men go.

V. M. I., on the other hand, has a bunch of backs headed by one of the outstanding ball-carriers in the South, Andy Trzeciak, who not only plays quarterback but runs, passes and also kicks.

Both Beaten Twice.

Both teams have been beaten twice this season, Maryland by North Carolina and Florida, and V. M. I. by Columbia and Kentucky. The Cadets beat Virginia, only 12-6, whereas the Old Liners handed a 20-0 defeat to the Cavaliers. However, V. M. I. tripped Richmond, 20-0, while the best Terps could do against Richmond last week was 12-0.

The Cadets are fresh from a 21-0 victory over William and Mary last week.

G. W. Cubs Tie Temple; Star Is Injured

George Washington University's powerful freshman football team outplayed the Temple University freshmen under the floodlights of Griffith Stadium last night, but a 40-yard Temple pass held the Colonial Cubs to a 6-6 tie. It was a costly game, however, for G. W. since Billy Richardson, the former Central all-high star, was carried off the field with what appeared to be a broken ankle.

The little halfback whose 23-yard run had contributed largely toward giving G. W. its touchdown, returned a punt in the third period and was buried beneath a swarm of Temple tacklers. When they unpiled, Richardson was at the bottom of the heap. He was carried off the field to the locker room and rushed to the George Washington Hospital, where an X-ray was to be made later. The coaching staff believed a bone in his right ankle had been broken.

The game marked the first time in six years a Temple freshman team failed to win. Unbeaten and untied over that period, Temple yearlings had trampled under foot every opponent until this 1936 edition, riding the crest of four straight victories, met the G. W. youngsters.

Score in First Period.

The local boys scored in the first period after an exchange of punts. Richardson opened the 48-yard touchdown drive by ripping 23 yards off tackle. A 19-yard run shortly afterward by Right End Bob Nowaskey, of Scottdale, Pa., on an end-around-end play put the ball on the one-foot line where Ralph Zelaska hit the line for the touchdown. Nowaski's placekick was blocked.

'Jimmy' LaFontaine Backs Braddock Bout

James LaFontaine, retired Washington sportsman, is underwriting the projected nontitle bout between Heavyweight Champion Jimmy Braddock and Joe Louis for the sum of $100,000, it was learned yesterday.

Herman Taylor, Philadelphia promoter, has obtained that sum from LaFontaine to post as evidence of good faith in attempting to arrange the bout, which has been planned for February in Atlantic City.

According to the Associated Press, Joe Gould, manager of Braddock, had said in New York that he would sign for the 12-round exhibition as soon as Taylor posted $100,000 of the $400,000 purse guaranteed the two fighters.

Devotee of Boxing.

LaFontaine, long identified with "Jimmy's Place," Bladensburg road gambling establishment, has a two-fold interest in the fight. He is a long-time friend of Taylor, whose promotion of the recent Louis-Ettore fight in Philadelphia stamped him as one of the country's outstanding arrangers of fistic fusses.

LaFontaine also has been a devotee of boxing for a number of years. Numerous times in the past he has lent financial assistance to local promoters which has kept the game alive here during dull periods. He was particularly active financially in boxing in this vicinity before the legalization of the game here, when Washington received its fisticuffing in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Louis' managers already have signified their intentions of accepting the bout and thus it is that the

G. W. May Find Catawba Team Tough Foe

Fresh from a two-touchdown victory over Appalachian, the Indians offer somewhat of an obstacle in the way of George Washington's finishing the season with its best record.

The Colonials have only to surmount Catawba and then West Virginia to finish the season with a record of only one defeat, and that a very close one at the hands of the powerful Rice Institute eleven.

Although outweighed in both line and back field, the Indians will find that no novelty. In six of the seven games they have played this season, the Tribe has been outweighed, especially in the front ranks, but that hasn't prevented them from gaining recognition as one of the better of the small college teams in the South.

Versatile Charles Clark will head the set of Catawba ball carriers going after the Indians' first touchdown against George Washington. The Colonials have shut out the invaders four times in the past and the Tribe is making quite a point of winding up today's game without a goose egg in its side of the scoreboard.

The invaders will start the same combination that put the Appalachians to rout last week.

Cards Tackle N. C. State Gridmen

Catholic Eleven May Pull Through if Squad Starts Blocking.

Faced with the task of outfoxing Hunk Anderson's Wolfpack of North Carolina State, Catholic U.'s Flying Cardinals take the field in C. U. Stadium today in their tenth annual home-coming game. The kick-off is slated for 2 p. m.

Intent on giving returning alumni a victory to halt a three-game losing streak, the Cardinals nevertheless are entering the game on the short end of the odds. On the basis of its first-class showing against powerful Boston College last week, Carolina State rates a slight choice to win.

Only a last-minute touchdown beat the Wolfpack, 7-3, while the Cards were losing to West Virginia Wesleyan in a thriller which it should have won. Hence, it will be two much-beaten teams taking the field. North Carolina State has lost five games in eight starts and C. U., three in six starts.

C. U. Needs Blocking.

In meeting defeat, however, the Wolfpack was severely crippled for the entire season until meeting Boston College. Davidson, strong Wake Forest and Manhattan barely beat the Staters. North Carolina State took a 21-6 decision.

Providing the Cardinals can give Maurice (Irish) Carroll, some blocking today, C. U. should pull out a victory. The C. U. blocking has left much to be desired much of the season. With such able backs as Bill Adamaitis, Carroll, Bob Makofske, Bud Munhall, Howard Walker and Specs Foley, the Cards' running attack has not reached full potentiality.

Among the standouts for the Wolfpack will be Alex Regdon, an outstanding candidate for all-Southern selection at guard. Three of the best linemen Boston College faced all season were Mason Bugg, left tackle, Louie Mark, center, and Captain McCara, left end.

Ryneska Is State Ace.

Chief ground-gainer for the Wolfpack is Joe Ryneska, rugged fullback, who has averaged three yards every time he has taken the ball. The Wolfpack also has an ace up its sleeve in the able placekicking of Charlie Gadd. With today's game promising to border on a tie decision, Gadd's portents for field goals could prove troublesome for the Cards. Gadd booted a 35-yard field goal against Boston College.

The game will continue a home-coming custom started in 1927 during which the Cards have won five games, tied one and lost three. In its series with North Carolina State, C. U. copped a 12-7 win in 1931 and an 8-0 victory last year.

80,000 to See Irish, 'Underdog That Is Favorite,' Battle Army

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 13.—The Irish and the United States Army took over the island of Manhattan tonight.

The question tonight was not "Who'll win?" but "Where can I get a ticket?" The answer to that one was tough. One week ago tickets were gone for Yankee Stadium's 77,000 regular football seats. Three thousand extra seats were erected. These too were gone tonight. A few tickets were available. They were in the hands of the brokers, and the brokers were asking and getting up to $50 a pair for them.

Notre Dame, holding a 15-to-5 advantage in the historic series, was on the short end of the betting. Coach Elmer Layden of the Ramblers welcomed this with:

Both coaches were careful to keep their men away from the hysteria. Layden took his men to the Westchester Country Club in Rye this morning, sent them off to church before breakfast and whirled them through a short fast drill this afternoon.

Coach Gar Davidson, eager to win what probably will be his last Notre Dame game, took his squad to the Knollwood Country Club, not far from the Irish. Davidson, whose four-year appointment at the Military Academy ends this year, has never beaten the Irish. He lost 12-13 in 1933, 6-12 in 1934 and tied last year 6-6.

Layden would make no prediction about the outcome. "We have a good team," he said. "They've played good football all year," his scouting reports on Army told him "Army has no weakness. Their guards, tackles, ends and backs are strong."

Three men are injured on the Notre Dame squad and two on the Army. Fullbacks Larry Danbom and Steve Miller and Halfback Vic Wojcihovski, of the Irish, are bothered with leg injuries. Maury Preston, end and Jim Isbell, tackle, are the Army casualties. None was expected to be kept out entirely, however.

Angus, Last at Start, Wins Bowie Feature at $36.50 Mutuel

Stretch Rush Decides for 17-1 Shot

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 13.—Mrs. John Bosley, jr., who believed she had lost her racing luck when Chase Me., the sensational gelding, broke his leg in New York two years ago, added another purse to her fast growing list when her Angus, a son of Ladkin, won the Blackiston Handicap, a Class C claiming race, that featured the Friday, the thirteenth, program at this track.

Angus, a recent graduate from the maiden ranks, was excellently handled by Jockey Ira Hanford, who won the 1936 Kentucky Derby with Bold Venture, and brought a scattered backing at a $36.50 mutual. Angus came through with a stretch drive that brought a neck decision over Furfiber. Scatter Brain was third in the group of eight competing at a mile and a sixteenth.

Perfect racing weather prevailed and a crowd of 8,000 was in attendance.

Angus was last out of the stall gates and last at the quarter pole. Teddy Haslam was first to show in front. He was followed by Furfiber and Mama's Choice. Along the backstretch, Furfiber went up with a rush to take the lead and then drew out to what appeared to be a commanding advantage.

It was on the swing for the stretch that Angus began to gather momentum. The gelding had to circle wide entering the stretch, but once straightened, he went after the leaders with good energy. Hanford went to the whip and slowly, but surely, the Bosley gelding wore down Furfiber. Scatter Brain saved ground entering the stretch to close well, but too late for better than third money.

Blue King Noses Out Marfeu.

Jockey Jackie Westrope went to sleep in the stretch and Sammy Renick came pounding along the rail with Blue King in time to take a photographic decision. Westrope had the mount on Marfeu and after that one had disposed of Clarion Call in the stretch the boy evidently believed he was home, for he let up on his riding. Clarion Call was third in the field of ten. Blue King paid an $8 mutuel.

Golden Bein won his fourth race in a row and his fifth in eight starts by taking the second race. The Golden Spire horse was allowed to be a price because he was operating at a spring distance. However, Apprentice Morris brought him home in hand two and a half lengths ahead of Jim John, with Balcony third. Twelve horses saw action. Golden Vein paid a $13.70 mutuel.

Ironbound, at a $7.40 mutuel, took the third race from 11 other cheap platers, competing over the one and one-sixteenth mile course. Jockey L. Coffman gave the winner a good ride, not hurrying him at the start and bringing him along with a rush in the final half. Sandy Belle was second, beaten a length. Moon Penny came from far back to be third. Bromide and Hard Chase ran each other into submission while setting the pace.

Careful Miss Beats Favorite.

Careful Miss, an hour the best, toyed with her opposition in the fourth race for fillies at 6 furlongs. Jockey Joe Wagner had her under wraps until the swing for the stretch and then turned her loose. She rushed to the front with a bold move and easily held sway to the end. Clamorous was second in the role of an odds-on favorite. Third money went to My Elsie. The winner was a paddock tip and paid $16.90.

Jockey Eddie De Camillis rode Petard to victory at a $13.80 mutuel in the sixth race. The Petee Wrack gelding took the verdict by a margin of a head from Tiempo. Albuquerque, the heavily weighted pacesetter, was third in the field of a dozen operating over the mile and a sixteenth course.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLUE KING, $8.00, $3.70, $2.70; MARFEU, $3.60, $2.60; CLARION CALL, $3.30.

BLUE KING, slow to get under way, saved ground at the stretch turn, came up on the rail for the final test, and under energetic handling, was up in the concluding strides. MARFEU came to the outside for the final drive, disposed of CLARION CALL and Westrope appeared to finish overconfidently. CLARION CALL was away alertly, was rushed to the top, but tired gradually through the stretch. MAHOGANY gained sharply swinging for the stretch and showed a good effort. MATELOT was allowed to drop out of it at the start. MATCH PLATE went evenly.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRON BOUND, $7.40, $3.40, $3.10; SANDY BELLE, $2.60, $2.40; MOON PENNY, $4.60.

IRON BOUND, allowed to settle into best stride, went to the leaders with a bold rush on the outside approaching the stretch, disposed of BROMIDE and was drawing out at the end. SANDY BELLE, rated along close to the pace setters, closed willingly, but unable to resist the winner. MOON PENNY improved her position steadily from a slow beginning and closed resolutely. BROMIDE tired from setting and pressing the pace. ITALIAN HARRY had speed in spots. STAR SPECIAL could not reach contention. HARD CHASE was used up running with BROMIDE. EBON ZE showed an improved race. RHYTHMICAL was kept on the outside all the way and could do better. OBVIOUS ran wide at the turns.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $42.50.

CAREFUL MISS, much the best, was under stout restraint to the far turn, came up with a bold rush when put to a drive, and easily was opening a gap at the finish. CLAMOROUS went around leaders to take command approaching the stretch and was poorly handled through the stretch. MY ELSIE ran RITORNO into defeat, came again under punishment after being displaced by CLAMOROUS and was tiring at the end. RITORNO had good early speed. MARY KEEN stopped.

ANGUS, allowed to settle into best stride, began to improve position leaving the back stretch, came to the outside for the final drive and under pressure wore down FURFIBER to win going away. FURFIBER, off poorly, was rushed to the front along the back stretch, opened a long lead, but was faltering through the stretch. SCATTER BRAIN saved much ground on Aul'nan Leaves entering the stretch, moved up menacingly and then hung. TEDDY HASLAM was a forward factor all the way and closed willingly. MAMA'S CHOICE dropped out of it after a quarter.

PETARD, within striking distance of the leaders from the start, was steered wide into the stretch for racing room, and under a punishing ride was up in the final strides. TIEMPO, close to the pace throughout, fought it out willingly to the end. ALBUQUERQUE, rated along while setting the pace, closed with good courage. CANPRA came along the rail at the far turn to reach the thick of contention and closed with good courage along the rail. WISE WILL, a trailer for a half-mile, came with a belated rush. GOGGLES went in the air at the break.

SLEEK, rushed to the front at once, shook off SPEED to take command, was rated along to the stretch and drew out when placed to drive. MINTON, steadied along within striking distance of the leaders, came willingly for the final test. MISS TIPTOE, forwardly placed throughout, took command in the stretch, but faltered suddenly approaching the finish. DROLL STORY closed gamely from a slow beginning. MARK ME tired. QUIET PLEASE moved up with a rush entering the stretch, but swerved repeatedly.

By John R. Vosburgh.

A Tech High team which has scored 13 points in three inter-high games all but clinched the 1936 inter-high championship yesterday although it was held to a 0-0 tie by a scrappy Eastern eleven before 3,000 fans at Eastern Field. Only Roosevelt remains in the path of the Techmen and it would be close to a miracle if the Rough Riders should upset the only unbeaten team in the series.

Bearing out its rating as one of the most mysterious outfits that ever neared the championship, Tech evidenced a distinct letdown from the heights it reached last week in beating Central. Eastern, on the other hand, was clicking effectively and in the last few minutes of play reached the Tech 22-yard line in the most serious scoring threat of the game.

But Friday the 13th meant bad luck for nobody but Central and Western so far as Tech was concerned and it fought off this invasion which threatened to throw it into a three-way tie with the Mt. Pleasanters and the Georgetowners. With about 5 minutes to play, Eastern's blonde Russ Kendrick, newly inserted in the game, intercepted a long pass by Jack Belote, Tech quarterback, and raced 47 yards to the Tech 28-yard line.

Belote Brings Him Down.

Kendrick was in the clear when he loomed up and snatched the pigskin almost out of the arms of Jimmy King, Tech left end, and it appeared as if he might go for a touchdown. He shot down the sideline, but Belote, set and waiting, knocked him out of bounds.

Gene Davis, whose great punting kept Tech shackled all afternoon, picked up 2 yards, but Kidwell was thrown for no gain, and a pass from Kidwell to Kendrick was good for only 4. On fourth down, Jack Shugrue shot a long pass in the direction of Right End Dick Wade, who was cutting along the goal line, but Belote soared high in the air to knock it down and the threat was ended. Tech taking the ball on downs.

Davis intercepted a pass by Belote on the Tech 45 shortly afterward and Eastern started off again, a pass from Kidwell to Davis picking up 9 yards and one from Shugrue to Davis taking the ball to the Tech 26-yard line, where Eastern had the ball as the game ended.

Tech Threat in Vain.

Tech's biggest threat came in the first five minutes of play when Johnny Williamson, hero of the Central victory, raced 16 yards to the Eastern 32, where Belote fumbled and Joe Spigone recovered for Eastern.

A beautiful 70-yard punt by Davis set Tech back to its own 15 in the second period and Eastern gained 27 yards on the punting exchange. A pass from Kidwell to Davis for 14 yards took Eastern to the 33, but Tech braced and took the ball on downs on its 29 as Shugrue's pass to Davis grounded.

Eastern kept pressing the Gray gridmen to the finish, but the final whistle cut short one of its most promising drives with a first down on the Tech 26. Tech thus virtually ascended to the championship with a scoreless tie.

Police Boys' Club Team To Meet Silver Spring

One of the feature sandlot grid attractions of the year will take place on Sunday in Silver Spring when the Police Boys Club No. 3 eleven clashes with the strong Silver Spring Merchants on the field adjacent to the District Line at 2:30 p. m.

The Merchants, at full strength for the second time this season, hold a 6 to 2 victory over the Seamen Gunners, a team that defeated the Boys Club, 6 to 0, but despite this fact the visitors will be slight favorites.

Middies Battle An Improved Harvard

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 13.—Hoping to squelch the brilliant scoring attack shown last week by the Harvard Sophmores and at the same time find a sadly lacking one of their own, the Middies of Annapolis will take the field here today slight pregame favorites against a team which rolled up 65 points against Virginia—the same team that Navy whipped, 35 to 14.

Depending largely on their impregnable air defense which stopped Notre Dame cold time and again Saturday, the Midshipmen will be asked to stop a team which gained 198 yards in the air as well as 444 yards on the ground against Virginia. Navy, should they be as tight with yards given within their own 20-yard stripe as they were against the Ramblers of Notre Dame last week, stand a plausible chance of doing just that.

With each team only one week away from their big game of the year, Harvard scheduled to meet Yale next, and Navy due to tangle with the other service school on the 28th of the month, a keen perspective on just what each will really have to offer should be gained by today's game. A defeat for the Army today at the hands of the same Notre Dame team which was beaten, 3 to 0, by Navy and a Navy win over the Crimson will tend to establish the Sailors as favorites of the Soldiers, who so soundly trounced them last year, 26 to 0.

Gun Club to Hold Handicap Today

Numbered among the most important of the Washington Gun Club's annual events is the Club Handicap Championship, scheduled today at the Club range. From scores compiled in the club's weekly shoots, each contestant is allotted a yardage handicap at which to compete, with the proportionate skill allotment ranging from 16 to 22 yards. Three trophies will be given to the three high guns.

The race is staged over the club traps near Benning and is scheduled to begin at 1 p. m. Visitors are welcome to see the match, as well as to try their luck at smashing the flying disks.

Landon Preps Rout St. Alban's

Scoring four touchdowns in the last three quarters, a strong Landon Prep football trounced the St. Alban's eleven on the Landon field yesterday, 26 to 6.

Paced by Huck Hughes, asteroid quarterback, the Bethesda lads ran rampant over the game, but outclassed, Episcopalian gridmen. With Hughes scoring three touchdowns and instrumental in the fourth, the winners easily overcame a six-to-nothing lead in the second period and went on to add a touchdown in the third and another in the final period.

After Russell had scored the Saints' only touchdown in the second period to put them in the lead, they were never in the ball game, Hughes and his aide-de-romp, Elwood Berkley, taking complete charge of the game. It was a clever lateral, thrown by Hughes to Berkley, as he was being hurled to the ground, that provided the thrill of the game, Berkley dashing 40 yards for the second touchdown.

American U. Student Body Demands More Grid Support

A buffetted and battered American University football team next week will issue an ultimatum to the faculty, demanding either added support from the administration or complete abolishment of the grid-iron game at the local college.

The demand, endorsed by 60 per cent of the student body, will be presented to Dr. M. M. Gray, chancellor, by Joe Carlo, captain of the 1936 American University varsity.

Members of the team who are endorsing the ultimatum, have completely absolved Coach Walter H. Young of all blame for the conditions they find unsatisfactory and have pledged their support to the football mentor.

In a statement clearing Young of any blame for the conditions to which they object, the players said they "are willing to co-operate with and support" Young and that they felt "any criticism of him to the effect that he does not maintain the loyalty of the team, that he cannot and does not maintain the loyalty of the team, that he has played boys because they have threatened to quit, or that he has been too hard on the boys, is unfair to him and to us as college students."

The athletes' demand to the Chancellor will ask that there be at least 30 men available at American for football. The athletes feel that lack of substitute players results in serious injuries to those boys who do play on the small squads.

It also will be asked that more jobs and scholarships be given football players, to make possible enlargement of the squad. At the present time there are only 14 jobs being held at the school by athletes.

The Eagles have won but one game this season. They defeated Bridgewater, 7 to 6. Many of their best players are either so badly injured they cannot play against Johns Hopkins today or will enter the game with less severe injuries.

G. W. Freshmen Tie Temple, 6-6

which Pop Warner, the Temple head coach is noted, the Temple Cubs proved somewhat troublesome in the second period, but failed to score until the third period. Battles fell on a fumble by Hockenberry, who had relieved Richardson, and Temple had the ball on the G. W. 49. A pass from Nichols to Scrivner gave the visitors a first down on the 33, and then Quarterback Bowles fell back to the 40 and fired a long pass to Battles, who took it on the 5-yard line near the sideline and ran over for the tying touchdown. Bowles' placekick was wide.

Hockenberry Kicks Well.

The great kicking of Hockenberry, who lifted three punts for 60 yards and one for 70 yards, held Temple in check and helped give G. W. a scoring chance in the last period after it had marched to the Temple 18-yard line, where Nowaskey tried a field goal. The placekick—a beauty—went about 3 feet wide.

The Colonials had threatened in the third period when they went to the Temple 25-yard line, but Hockenberry's fourth down pass to the goal line was intercepted by Bowles, who ran it out to the 30. The Temple team opened up an offensive after the attempted G. W. field goal, but it ended when Bowles passed over the goal line without a receiver near.

Wake Forest Defeats Erskine Eleven, 19-6

Wake Forest, N. C., Nov. 13. (U.P.)—The Wake Forest football eleven scored on two running plays and a pass to defeat Erskine, 19 to 6, here today.

Outplayed through most of the game, Erskine showed its best resistance in the first period by holding the Deacons for downs within a foot of the goal.

'Y' Swim Team Faces Hagerstown in Debut

The Central Y. M. C. A. Junior Swimming Team will open its competitive season today in a dual meet with the Hagerstown Y. M. C. A. at Hagerstown.

A large squad of boys has been reporting for regular workouts every Tuesday and Thursday at 4 p. m. in the local pool at 1732 G street northwest.

Future meets are: Tome School, Baltimore, Md.; Central High School, Mercersburg Academy, York Y. M. C. A., Wilmington Y. M. C. A., and Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A.

Last season the team won both the indoor and outdoor D. C. A. A. U. Junior Swimming Championships and the Inter-State Y. M. C. A. Junior Championships.

Roosevelt "B" Winner.

Led by Fine, Ladtbush and Overby, who scored a touchdown apiece, the Roosevelt High "B" team defeated the Rooters Club, 20 to 7, yesterday at Roosevelt. Katz scored the marker for the losers.

Game for Boys Club?

Crippled A. U. Host Today To Hopkins

Eagles Hope to Stave Off Invaders in Clash at Central Stadium.

An injury-riddled American University football team will take the field against Johns Hopkins in a home-coming game this afternoon at the Central High School Stadium.

Captain Joe Carlo and two star ends—Brown and Rogers—have injured knees. Sheebo Shoop and Hinky Schneider are on the sidelines with possible fractured ribs. Dusty Rhodes has a bad ankle. Hal Toner, upon whim the Eagles depend for most of their passing and punting, and John Struble, who was largely responsible for American University's lone victory of the season—over Bridgewater—have injured shoulders. Outside of that, the Eagles are in fine fettle.

Through Captain Carlo, the team yesterday insisted their fight for more administration support of athletics would not affect the morale of the American University team in today's engagement.

Fight for Cause.

"We're out to win, to show the school what crippled men can do and let them draw their own conclusions as to what a large squad of men in good condition could consistently do," Carlo said.

The only direct comparison on the respective merits of the two teams is provided by their performances against Randolph-Macon. Randolph-Macon defeated Johns Hopkins, 25 to 7, and American U., 48 to 7.

Four bands, those of the two schools and the boys' organizations of the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs and Loew's Capitol Theater, will provide musical accompaniment for the game. A procession of floats and gymnastic exhibitions will wind up the afternoon's program.

Marquette Ready For Mississippi

Milwaukee, Nov. 13 (AP).—Marquette University's Golden Avalanche was keyed to defend its undefeated and untied record in an intersectional football battle tomorrow with the University of Mississippi.

Wilson Novices Trip Western, 13 to 12

'Breather' Team Wins Well Earned Victory in First Public School Tilt.

By Bob Garrison.

Defying superstition and throwing tradition to the winds, Woodrow Wilson's scrappy football team upset a powerful Western High School eleven in the Western Stadium yesterday before 2,500 spectators by scoring 13 points to win, 13-12. Johnny Stevens, who wore No. 13 jersey, scored both goals on Friday, the 13th.

It was no freak victory the Tigers registered over the highly touted Georgetown club, which was outplayed and outsmarted as well as outscored by the boys who were hardly expected to offer more than an afternoon of leisure for the Westerners. With Dave Tate, George Barbee, and Stevens leading the offensive, the winners, who were playing their first public school foe, scored on the third play of the game on an end-around play which sent Stevens over from the 13-yard stripe. Cokinas' try for point was wide.

Western fought back, however, and was in scoring position as the quarter ended, and a pass, Lynham to G. Smith, registered on the second play of the next period. The kick was in the dirt and the score was tied at 6-6.

Wilson Scores.

Wilson was clicking now, and when Tate propelled a 60-yard punt which was fallen upon by a host of Tigers after it had bounded off of Safety Man Weinstein's leg, it was Wilson's ball on the Western 5. Western held this time and Snead punted out of danger to his own 40-yard line. But Tate dropped back and hurled a beautiful 35-yard pass to Stevens, who scored unmolested. This time Knight converted to send the green-clad gridsters ahead, 13 to 6.

It was not long before Western again opened its aerial attack to draw within a point of the leaders, shortly before the half ended, when Weinstein hurled to Brewer from his own 45, Brewer taking it on the 15 and tearing to the 2. On the following play Brewer scored through right guard, making the score 13 to 12. Here, try for the big point failed when a line plunge was short.

Western Pushed Back.

The third period saw Western move down the field and fail to score only when Brewer dropped an easy catch in the end zone. After this it was all Wilson, who shoved the losers deep into their own territory and held them there for the remainder of the game, even threatening several times to score in the final period.

If this is to be an accurate comparison between Wilson's team, even now in its first year of existence, and the other local public high schools, then welcome addition, from the point of competition, is to be made next fall when it is admitted into the inter-high series.

Howard U. Host To Virginia State

The Bisons of Howard University are scheduled to clash this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the university stadium with Virginia Union, of Richmond. The Virginians have lost to Virginia State, of Petersburg, and to Morgan College, and otherwise have a record none too impressive, but better than that of the Bisons, who have not scored a point this year.

We Willie Parker, captain and halfback, and George Coleburn are expected to give the Bisons the most trouble. Plummer will be back in the game following injuries, as will Edmonds, who has not been in action for a month.

Central High Juniors Down Woodward, 12-6

The Central High Junior varsity football team defeated Woodward Prep's strong varsity team, 12-6, yesterday in Central Stadium. The Mount Pleasanters won in the last 20 seconds of play after a 70-yard aerial march climaxed by a toss from McCormick to Plakas.

Army vs. Notre Dame—Flip that coin, and if it stands on end, this will be a bad football game. Otherwise it figures to top 'em all in thrills. But, getting down to business, Army's power was debunked a bit by Colgate two weeks ago. And Notre Dame was handed a jolt by Navy. But, on the theory that the Irish are always a good bet, one wavering vote for Notre Dame.

POVICH.

Georgetown vs. Manhattan—The Hoyas reach their peak against Manhattan each year and came through in '34 and '35 against even bigger odds than they face today. With due regard for Manhattan's victory over Kentucky last week, three cheers and a confident vote for Georgetown.

Catholic U. vs. North Carolina State—On paper, the Tarheels figure to win this one, but on the turf of Brookland stadium where they have lost only one game in recent years, C. U. always has a swell chance. On the theory that C. U. is on the rebound and Irish Carroll is due to break loose—C. U.

Maryland vs. V. M. I.—The Flying Cadets from Lexington are the proverbial good little team, but they appear overmatched today. Behind Bill Guckeyson the Old Liners are gathering power as the season wears on and there never has been any complaint with the Maryland defense which has yielded only three touchdowns. Maryland it is.

George Washington vs. Catawba—If this were a prize fight they'd probably stop it in the first quarter. Even without Joey Kaufman in the lineup the Colonials should trample their playmates from North Carolina. By any score that's lying around handy—George Washington.

Yale vs. Princeton—At first glance, that narrow escape against Brown last week entitles Yale to little consideration today. But the Elis were saving themselves for Princeton, no doubt. The Tigers, after being held to a tie by Harvard, staged a splendid 41-13 comeback against Cornell. Because of that, one timid vote for Princeton.

Harvard vs. Navy—Up at Cambridge Dick Harlow is beginning to get somewhere with his Harvard team. But down at Annapolis, Tom Hamilton has come up with a super threat in this fellow Bill Ingram. Perhaps by the power of Ingram's toe, perhaps with its clever passing game—but in any event—Navy to win.

Duquesne vs. Carnegie Tech—This is the battle between the conquerors of Pitt and the conquerors of Temple. And it is a game that dots the football pool lists, which is the tip-off. A tie may be the right prediction, but leading with the chin—Carnegie.

Nebraska vs. Pitt—The Panthers vs. the Cornhuskers, always a battle of Titans. Only one defeat mars the record of each this season. But Pitt has been almost uniformly successful against even the best Nebraska teams. Thus, leading up to it, one vote for Pitt.

Northwestern vs. Michigan—The Wildcats won't be trifling in this game with a victory virtually assuring 'em their first undefeated season in history. Off that 27-7 beating by Penn last week, Michigan appears to have little chance. That's what I think. So, a resolute vote for Northwestern.

Minnesota vs. Texas—After that beating by Northwestern, the Gophers are in no mood to trifle with the remainder of their foes as that 52-0 win over Iowa indicates. But these Southwest teams are troublesome and Minnesota may be forced to shoot the works. In any event, Minnesota.

Illinois vs. Ohio State—The Illini are on the improve and Ohio State long ago established itself as no great football team. But methinks the Buckeyes are still powerful enough to take Illinois by, say, a couple of touchdowns.

Alabama vs. Georgia Tech—Still clinging to their unbeaten record and a slender chance to win the Rose Bowl invitation, the Crimson Tide will be out to make an impression today. In that case, Alabama.

Louisiana State vs. Auburn—L. S. U. is another with its eyes on the Rose Bowl, but the invitation may not be among their worries today. This Auburn team is tough. So is L. S. U. In the event of no tie—L. S. U.

North Carolina vs. Duke—When Tarheels get together on the football field, it's a rip snorter. North Carolina can make it tough for Duke, but hardly figure to beat the Blue Devils.

Marquette vs. Mississippi—Here's where another unbeaten team can, conceivably, bite the dust. Marquette's proud record may be no more at a late hour this afternoon, and then again—one vote for Marquette.

Duckpin Aces Awaiting Dixie

Arcadia, Convention and Lucky Strike Scenes.

Close to 50 of the Nation's foremost duckpin experts, representing States along the Eastern seaboard from Connecticut to Florida, will assemble here today at the Arcadia at 11 a. m. for the sixth annual Dixie Sweepstakes tournament.

The event, held under the auspices of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, is the start of Washington's long list of major bowling classics, and with a rich purse attached, some topnotch maple shooting is in prospect.

Capital stars have not fared badly in the Dixie, Ollie Pacini winning the inaugural in 1931; Astor Clarke taking the purse in 1933, with a stake record set of 2,003, and Joe Freschi topping the field in 1935. Ray Barnes, Baltimore star, and Bill Arnold, of Annapolis, were the victors in 1932 and 1934, respectively. Arnold gaining his win over a field of 61, the stakes largest entry.

Headed by Astor Clarke, the country's first ranking bowler, the field will include the first 12 ranking stars selected by the National Congress for the 1935-36 season.

The event consists of 15 games, starting at the Arcadia alleys at 11 a. m. The contestants will adjourn to the Convention Hall for the second block, which gets under way at 3 p. m., and thence to the Lucky Strike for the finale at 7:30.

Blue Ribbon Bowlers Win From Dixie Pigs

The Unied States champion Seagram Blue Ribbons duckpin team, of Willimantic, Conn., tuned up for its entry in the Dixie Sweepstakes by humbling Hugh Waldrop's Dixie Pigs last night at Mount Rainier, 1,930 to 1,872.

The local team gained some satisfaction in the encounter, shooting a 709 set in the last game to nose out the Nutmeggers by 19 pins.

Present Upswing Is Not Founded on Inflation, Survey Says.

New York, Nov. 13.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"Although there are artificial and abnormal factors in the present business situation—heavy relief expenditures and the prospective social security taxes are examples—the recovery which we are now experiencing is founded on a solid basis, not on inflationary grounds.

"Inflation means all things to all men. To some it is merely the rise in credit volumes which accompanies cyclical business improvement. That type of inflation is now in progress—a rise in the business demand for credit is virtually assured for 1937. There is nothing inherently harmful in such expansion. It becomes dangerous only when credits pyramid upon themselves and no longer foster actual expansion of business. The United States is still far from the stage which requires the application of powerful brakes to this type of inflation.

"To others inflation means a breakdown of Government credit, created by excessive expansion of its debt and leading to the uncontrolled issuance of paper money. Such inflation leads to a distrust of all but tangible assets, it disrupts business and spirals commodity prices to ridiculous levels. Ultimately, the whole financial structure of a country which undergoes this type of inflation that time is in the too remote future for the prospect to enter into the present calculations of business men and investors.

"The cyclical recovery now being experienced in the United States bears every evidence of the normal advance which follows a protracted period of deflation and depression. Such an advance brings with it rising business volumes and earnings, greater governmental revenues and, therewith, a balanced Federal budget."

Federal Outlay 12.8% of U. S. Income in 1935

New York, Nov. 13.—Expenditures of the Federal Government in the fiscal year 1935 amounted to 12.8 per cent of the national income as compared with 13.6 per cent in 1934, according to the National Industrial Conference Board.

The decline in the percentage figure was due entirely to the increase in the national income during the period, not to reduction in Government spending. Federal expenditures increased slightly, rising from $6,800,000,000 in 1934 to $6,900,000,000 in 1935. The national income, however, advanced from $50,300,000,000 in 1934 to $53,800,000,000 in 1935.

The conference board's study of the ratio of Federal expenditures to national income covers the 15-year period from 1921 to 1935. In 1921 Government expenditures amounted to 9.3 per cent of the national income. Thereafter the ratio was reduced each year, due both to rising income and a decline in expenditures, and reached a post-war low of 3.8 per cent in 1927 and 1928. From 1929 to 1933 the ratio increased uninterruptedly. The decline in the ratio in 1935 as compared with 1934 was the first that has taken place since 1927.

1921	9.3%	1929	3.9%
1922	5.7%	1930	4.6%
1923	4.8%	1931	6.1%
1924	4.3%	1932	10.2%
1925	4.0%	1933	10.8%

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Majority of Stock Groups Decline in Moderately Active Trading; Government Bonds Lower.

New York, Nov. 13.—The stock trading horse was led to water, but he couldn't be made to drink much, possibly because he thought he saw foreign matter in the trough. At any rate the whoopla supplied by the Federal Reserve Board and the Treasury Department on the condition of business and stocks was toned down by the hint given by President Roosevelt that something might be done to check foreign purchases of American securities.

All that added to the feeling already existing that bullishness had become a little topheavy and consequently stocks went through a mixed day, closing lower on a last-hour selling rush that sent the ticker behind. Government bonds weakened in spite of belief that the Treasury is buying for sinking fund and other purposes and the statistics showing additions to New York bank holdings.

Had the stock market been in the first stages of a strong upward movement, instead of going through a profit-taking sweat, its reaction might have been more enthusiastic to the hints given by Chairman Marriner Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board that the breathing spell for stocks would continue indefinitely. The array of facts and predictions drawn up for newspaper circulation by the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board (who had just come from a consultation with the President) and by "high Treasury officials" certainly was calculated to rejuvenaote the bulls. While few would question the statements made, some might well wonder just why the Government felt the need at this time of reminding the country of how prosperous it is becoming and of how sound the rise in stock market prices has been.

Little Inflation.

Any suspicion that the administration had reason to believe, from information not available to the public, that the boomlet in business and stocks is in danger of collapsing will have rough going under examination of known facts. No one can deny Chairman Eccles's reminder that the rise in stocks has not involved much cerdit inflation, although more may have taken place indirectly than appears on the surface. Few will question the Treasury predictions that corporate income this year may total eight billions and that dividend distributions may surpass three and a half billions.

Neither Eccles nor any other high Government official has said directly that present stock prices are too high or too low in view of earnings and dividends, but the inference is plain that the Government thinks the stock market sound. It is also reasonable to assume that no corrective measures are now contemplated by the Federal Reserve board, which could halt the rise for a while at least by jacking up margin requirements. The market, in other words, has been given a ticket to go ahead.

Store Stocks.

Bull traders hadn't much to their credit beyond gains in the mercantile and amusement shares. Numerous store stocks were pushed up 1 to 4 points to new high prices for the year. On the prominent side were Kresge, Montgomery Ward, Macy, Arnold Constable, McLellan, Associated Dry Goods and Allied Stores. Spiegel was an exception, falling from its advanced post of yesterday.

Picture stocks were led by Warner, the most active stock on the board. Warner rose more than a point to a new high price. Dealings in a few low-priced stocks—notably Paramount, United Stores A (well tipped), Electrical & Musical Industries, Walworth and R.-K.-O. made up a good portion of sales volume. Copper and silver shares continued to droop, as did the motors. Steels had a firm tone, but were neglected. Rails were quiet.

Stocks to rise 3 to 10 points were Baldwin preferred, on an excellent earnings statement, which also pushed the bonds forward; Federal Mining preferred, General Printing Ink, International Business Machines, Kreske Department common and preferred, New York Air Brake, Paramount first preferred, Pittsburgh Steel peferred, and White Sewing Machine preferred. Losses of 2 to 8 points were taken in Franklin Simon preferred, Nickel Plate preferred and Ruberoid. Most stocks sold at their poorest prices in the last hour. December wheat closed half a cent higher at 115⅝ cents a bushel.

Reserve Bank Policy.

In view of the rise in the price of all Government securities and the increasing difficulty which confronts the Reserve banks in replacing at maturity issues which they hold, it would seem high time for the system to quit making a fetish of maintaining unchanged its aggregate portfolio. The maturity distribution of the Reserve system's portfolio shows that $156,000,000 of the $2,430,000,000 total holdings of Government obligations mature within 60 days. Probably a large block falls due for payment December 15, and, if the Government securities market is then as it is now, the Reserve banks probably would boost to fantastic prices any short-term issues they might try to buy in the open market for replacement purposes. They cannot under r the 1935 banking law, buy securities directly from the Treasury. December 15 would provide an excellent opportunity to let some Government issues they hold run off naturally without replacement, and authority may be given for such action by the Federal Open Market Committee when it meets next week. The sharp rise in excess reserves which should come around the first of next year gives ample reason for such a move.

Divorce of Bank Trust...

The consensus among high executives of banks here is that the fear of legislation at the coming session of Congress to carry out recommendations of a SEC committee which reported last June on trustee and fiscal agency operations may have something to do with depressing bank stocks. That committee, it will be recalled, recommended divorcing fiscal agency from trustee functions and, if necessary, preventing banks from serving corporations in both a debtor and creditor relation. It hinted even at preventing the same agent from acting as trustee for different issues of securities, on the ground that the interests of, say, first and second mortgage holders would conflict and that the same trustee could not properly act for both. It requires no effort to see that, if imitations are put upon trustee and agency functions to such a degree, either banks would be forced out of corporate trust work, or costs would rise so that corporations or outside non-banking concerns would do the work instead of banks.

Eccles Holds Key.

It is believed that Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Bank will determine whether any such legislation will be enacted this coming session and, so far as Wall Street ears have heard, he has not even looked into the question thoroughly. To divorce corporate trust activities from banks would be a blow mainly at large city institutions, although many moderate sized banks have built up quite a business. The splitting of the trust business from banking is not a new subject. So far as its application to all banking trust functions is concerned, there is no imminent danger of that happening because would ruin small banks and end trust activities in small towns and cities.

Directors of Michigan Steel Tube Products Co., Detroit, have declared a dividend of 40 cents per share, payable December 10, 1936, to stockholders of record November 30, 1936. This compares with 25 cents per share paid in the previous quarter.

Boston Wool Market.

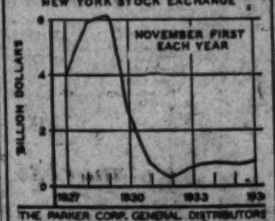
The minimum price on short French combing fine territory wools in original bags was around 92 cents scoured basis, and original fine territory wools running bulk good French combing and staple combing lengths were bringing around 95 cents. Fully 32 to 94 cents was being realized on staple combing ½-blood graded territory wool.

Brokers' Loans Only 1.7% of Stock Values



Boston, Mass., Nov. 13.—Investment, not speculative, buying has been supporting the stock market—at least when speculation is measured by brokers' loans. In 1929 brokers' loans were 9¾ per cent of the value of stocks listed on the big board. Today brokers' loans are under $1,000,000 and only 1.7 per cent of stock values.

Wheat Prices Gain Over Cent a Bushel

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP).—Wheat rose 1⅛ cents a bushel maximum today, and held most of the gain. Indications were that Australia's exportable surplus of wheat this season, approximately 80,000,000 bushels, will be the smallest in six years, and that Italy's takings of Argentine wheat will be much enlarged.

Chicago's wheat futures closed firm, ⅜-¾ above yesterday's finish, December 115⅝-116, May 113⅛, July 99⅞-1.00. Corn unchanged to ⅛ higher, December 102¾-½, May new 95⅞-96, July new 92⅝-¾, and rye unchanged to 1½ up, December 89. The provisions outcome was 5 to 10 cents bulge.

Holiday Cuts Freight Traffic 6.7% in Week

But Total of 759,318 Cars Is 15.9% More Than Year Ago.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended November 7 totaled 759,318 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 104,371 cars or 15.9 per cent compared with the corresponding week in 1935, and an increase of 164,528 cars or 27.7 per cent above the corresponding week in 1934, but a decrease of 69,705 cars or 8.4 per cent below the corresponding week in 1930. Loading of revenue freight for the week of November 7 was a decrease of 54,857 cars or 6.7 per cent below the preceding week due in part to the seasonal decline in traffic and in part to Election Day.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 168,551 cars, a decrease of 4,039 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 4,188 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 6,537 cars above the same week in 1934.

Coal loading amounted to 151,184 cars, a decrease of 13,414 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 26,714 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 24,840 cars above the same week in 1934.

Grain Loadings Lower.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 29,327 cars, a decrease of 4,288 cars below the preceding week, and 1,262 cars below the corresponding week in 1935, but an increase of 2,061 cars above the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended November 7 totaled 18,058 cars, a decrease of 2,975 cars below the preceding week this year, and 1,835 cars below the same week in 1935.

Livestock loading amounted to 19,077 cars, a decrease of 2,889 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 147 cars above the same week in 1935. It was, however, a decrease of 4,008 cars below the same week in 1934. Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 13.—New buying entered the stock market today and prices closed generally firm. Tin and diamond shares were in demand and moved higher, while industrials had a tendency to droop early in the day. German bonds, oil issues and some of the rubbers were also unsettled. The gilt-edged division and transatlantic shares remained quiet but steady.

Paris—Coal issues and banking stocks were weak at the close of the bourse. Bank of France declining 190 francs. Rentes lost as much as one franc and international shares moved irregularly.

Liverpool—English millers purchased Australian wheat and futures steadied and closed fractionally higher after early easiness. Cotton futures finished 3 to 5 points lower. Bombay and trade buying absorbed hedging. Operators remained cautious pending American developments.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press

Movements in the foreign exchange market yesterday were too narrow to suggest other than perfunctory trading operations.

The French franc yielded another small fraction in terms of the dollar. It was quoted in New York dealings at 4.64⅛ cents off .00⅛ of a cent. In Paris the dollar closed at the equivalent of 4.639 cents to the franc as compared with the overnight rate of 4.643 cents.

The pound remained even with the previous closing level at 4.88. In London the dollar improved slightly, closing at 4.87⅞ against an overnight New York rate of 4.88.

On the Air Today

Much attention tonight will center on the return of Ed Wynn to radio for the second time this year. That will be at 8 o'clock, WMAL.

Wynn's new show will be fashioned over the patterns of his first network program and his last. He's taking a little from each in an effort to click with a listening public that is more sophisticated than when he first took the air some four years or so ago.

There'll be guest stars for one thing. Tonight he presents Lenore Ulric, just returned from Hollywood where she filmed "Camille." This device has been taken from his preceding series. Graham McNamee will be present as the "perfect foil," and that as a successful and shrewd piece of casting goes back to his first air show.

For music, there will be Don Voorhees with Wynn for more than 100 consecutive weeks, then.

Of course, there must be something new. We're promised a new technique in the presentation of the guest performers. Instead of leaving his guests alone at the microphone, the "Perfect Fool" will actually assist them in their performances—be they piccolo players, Shakespearean actors, opera stars or trained seals. Comedy will not be written in through burlesque; it is expected to develop naturally from the absurdity of Wynn playing Hamlet, for example, opposite a famous Ophelia.

Vivian Della Chiesa—Chicago lyric soprano and Noble Cain's Capella Choir present special tenth anniversary program in "National Farm and Home Hour," WMAL, at 12:30.

"Girls' Dormitoreador"—A Walter O'Keefe burlesque features "Saturday Night Party." Also "Hands Across the Stable," a wild West "drammer" with help from the audience, WRC, at 8.

Chicago Symphony Orchestra—Under direction of Dr. Frederick Stock, WOL, at 8:15. A Mutual network presentation.

Elmer Layden—Notre Dame coach in interview with Ed Thorgersen, in "Football Revue," WJSV, at 8:30.

Staff employes of San Francisco studios of N. B. C. present special anniversary program, WMAL, at 8:30. With Meredith Willson's orchestra.

Today's football schedule: Yale-Princeton, WRC, at 1:45; Army-Notre Dame, WOL and WMAL, at 1:45 and 1:15, respectively; Catholic-North Carolina State, WJSV, at 1:45.

• • • •

Here and there: Kate Smith and Ted Collins, her announcer-manager, are being honored today by students of the University of North Carolina and city officials of Greensboro when they attend the Duke-North Carolina football game. . . . Colonel Stoopnagle has taken residence at Norwalk, Conn., already sprinkled with radio artists, including Andre Kostelanetz, Don Wilson, Gus Haenschen, Lawrence Tibbett, Lily Pons and Elizabeth Lennox . . . Richard (Sherlock Holmes) Gordon has refused a movie offer.

• • • •

More here and there: Tony Martin, of the flickers, is expected to replace Jimmy Newell as featured singer in the Burns and Allen show effective next Wednesday. . . . Since Isham Jones has retired, his band has been taken over by Woody Herman, ace saxophonist and vocalist at one time with the Jones band. He will lead with clarinet, a la Art Shaw. . . . Ray Noble has been busy refusing various offers and now is expected to fill theater engagements from New York to Chicago in which city he will open an exclusive nightery. . . . The Mills Brothers, just back from a season in Europe, plan personal appearances for a while.

• • • •

That mid-west governor who was heard so much last month and early this month on the radio—Landon was the name—will be heard again tomorrow night; "Mobilization for Human Needs," WJSV and WMAL, at 7. He "will speak from Topeka, Kansas," says the notice. Those words seem to sound familiar.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 13.—New buying entered the stock market today and prices closed generally firm. Tin and diamond shares were in demand as a result of the move. While industrials had a tendency to droop early in the day. German bonds, oil issues and some of the rubbers were also unsettled. The gilt-edged division and transatlantic shares remained quiet but steady.

Paris—Coal issues and banking stocks were weak at the close of the bourse. Bank of France declining 190 francs. Rentes lost as much as one franc and international shares moved irregularly.

Liverpool—English millers purchased Australian wheat and futures steadied and closed fractionally higher after early easiness. Cotton futures finished 3 to 5 points lower. Bombay and trade buying absorbed hedging. Operators remained cautious pending American developments.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press

Movements in the foreign exchange market yesterday were too narrow to suggest other than perfunctory trading operations.

The French franc yielded another small fraction in terms of the dollar. It was quoted in New York dealings at 4.64⅛ cents off .00⅛ of a cent. In Paris the dollar closed at the equivalent of 4.639 cents to the franc as compared with the overnight rate of 4.643 cents.

The pound remained even with the previous closing level at 4.85. In London the dollar improved slightly, closing at 4.87⅛ against an overnight New York rate of 4.88.

On the Air Today

Much attention tonight will center on the return of Ed Wynn to radio for the second time this year. That will be at 8 o'clock, WMAL.

Wynn's new show will be fashioned over the patterns of his first network program and his last. He's taking a little from each in an effort to click with a listening public that is more sophisticated than when he first took the air some four years or so ago.

There'll be guest stars for one thing. Tonight he presents Leanore Ulric, just returned from Hollywood where she filmed "Camille." This device has been taken from his preceding series. Graham McNamee will be present as the "perfect foil," and that as a successful and shrewd piece of casting goes back to his first air show.

For music, there will be Don Voorhees with Wynn for more than 100 consecutive weeks, then.

Of course, there must be something new. We're promised a new technique in the presentation of the guest performers. Instead of leaving his guests alone at the microphone, the "Perfect Fool" will actually assist them in their performances—be they piccolo players, Shakespearean actors, opera stars or trained seals. Comedy will not be written in through burlesque; it is expected to develop naturally from the absurdity of Wynn playing Hamlet, for example, opposite a famous Ophelia.

• • • •

Vivian Della Chiesa—Chicago lyric soprano and Noble Cain's Capella Choir present special tenth anniversary program in "National Farm and Home Hour," WMAL, at 12:30.

"Girls' Dormitoreador"—A Walter O'Keefe burlesque features "Saturday Night Party." Also "Hands Across the Stable," a wild West "drammer" with help from the audience, WRC, at 8.

Chicago Symphony Orchestra—Under direction of Dr. Frederick Stock, WOL, at 8:15. A Mutual network presentation.

Elmer Layden—Notre Dame coach in interview with Ed Thorgersen, in "Football Revue," WJSV, at 8:30.

Staff employes of San Francisco studios of N. B. C. present special anniversary program, WMAL, at 8:30. With Meredith Willson's orchestra.

• • • •

Today's football schedule: Yale-Princeton, WRC, at 1:45; Army-Notre Dame, WOL and WMAL, at 1:45 and 1:15, respectively; Catholic-North Carolina State, WOL, at 1:45.

• • • •

Here and there: Kate Smith and Ted Collins, her announcer-manager, are being honored today by students of the University of North Carolina and city officials of Greensboro when they attend the Duke-North Carolina football game. . . . Colonel Stoopnagle has taken residence at Norwalk, Conn., already sprinkled with radio artists, including Andre Kostelanetz, Don Wilson, Gus Haenschen, Lawrence Tibbett, Lily Pons and Elizabeth Lennox . . . Richard (Sherlock Holmes) Gordon has refused a movie offer.

• • • •

More here and there: Tony Martin, of the flickers, is expected to replace Jimmy Newell as featured singer in the Burns and Allen show effective next Wednesday. . . . Since Isham Jones has retired, his band has been taken over by Woody Herman, ace saxophonist and vocalist at one time with the Jones band. He will lead with clarinet, a la Art Shaw. . . . Ray Noble has been busy refusing various offers and now is expected to fill theater engagements from New York to Chicago in which city he will open an exclusive nightery. . . . The Mills Brothers, just back from a season in Europe, plan personal appearances for a while.

• • • •

That mid-west governor who was heard so much last month and early this month on the radio—Landon was the name—will be heard again tomorrow night; "Mobilization for Human Needs," WJSV and WMAL, at 7. He "will speak from Topeka, Kansas," says the notice. Those words seem to sound familiar.

IT WAS ALL MY FAULT, SIR
YES, YES - THAT'S FINE, BOYS - BUT AT ANOTHER TIME — CARTER HAS A FINE CHANCE TO SCORE HERE!

APPLE MARY AND DENNIE

By Martha Orr

I'M WORRIED, DAD. BILL'S OUT DELIVERING "MAGIC APPLES," AND I WON'T REST EASY 'TIL HE COMES BACK.
ARE YUH FEELIN' ALL RIGHT, MARY? YUH LOOK SORTA PUNY.
HUH, SEEMS TO ME BILL'S OLD ENOUGH TO HANDLE A LITTLE JOB LIKE THAT.
I KNOW, BUT WE RECEIVED SOME THREATENING LETTERS, AND—
WHY NOT CALL THE POLICE?
BUT IF BILL ISN'T BACK HERE WHEN HE SHOULD BE, I'LL CALL 'EM.
YEAH, WHEN IT'S TOO LATE, AS USUAL.

Woman Cashier Gets 3-Year Term

Salisbury, Md., Nov. 13 (AP).—The Circuit Court sentenced Mrs. Sadie T. Larmore to serve three years in the house of correction on her plea of guilty to charges she made false statements to bank examiners.

Mrs. Larmore, who is 56, is assistant cashier of the Savings Bank of Nanticoke, where she has been employed since 1915. Two charges of larceny, one of $50 and one of $54, were passed over after she pleaded guilty to the false statment charge.

Judge James M. Crockett said the sentence was in line with similar cases n Maryland recently, and that he had considered the woman's age and length of service. The false statment indictment charged that she withheld 15 ledger sheets from the examiners and that she understated the amount du to deporitors by $3,860.

Woman Cashier Gets 3-Year Term

Salisbury, Md., Nov. 13 (AP).—The Circuit Court sentenced Mrs. Sadie T. Larmore to serve three years in the house of correction on her plea of guilty to charges she made false statements to bank examiners.

Mrs. Larmore, who is 56, is assistant cashier of the Savings Bank of Nanticoke, where she has been employed since 1915. Two charges of larceny, one of $50 and one of $54, were passed over after she pleaded guilty to the false statment charge.

Judge James M. Crockett said the sentence was in line with similar cases n Maryland recently, and that he had considered the woman's age and length of service. The false statment indictment charged that she withheld 15 ledger sheets from the examiners and that she understated the amount du to deporitors by $3,860.

Fugitive Is Shot By U. S. Agents In Ohio Battle

By the Associated Press.

Jackson, Ohio, Nov. 13.—Federal agents shot and captured a long-sought desperado today in a spectacular raid on a little poultry farm—his refuge for a year with his wife and three children.

The prisoner, Reese Bailey, 30, was wounded three times when he attempted to shoot his way out of a trap laid at his home 9 miles northwest of here.

He had been sought since he escaped from the State Penitentiary at Raleigh, N. C., on March 22, 1934. He is under indictment for violation of the national motor vehicle theft act, and for the murder of Town Marshal Bert Lemley during a bank robbery at Rosalia, Wash.

Sheriff, Police Aided.

A squad of G-men, backed by Sheriff W. P. Turner, of Jackson County, and Police Chief Ben W. Rout, of Chillicothe, surrounded the farm Bailey purchased a year ago under the name of Byrd.

E. J. Connelley, dapper G-man who helped round up remnants of the Dillinger and Karpis Gang, trained an automatic rifle on the man, and ordered him to "throw up your hands."

"Bailey's answer was louder than that," said Chief Rout. "He opened fire without warning."

Whole Group Fired.

Chief Rout said Connelley and "at least five or six of us fired back."

Bailey, described in a Department of Justice folder as " a desperate criminal, armed at all times, and expert with both pistol and rifle," turned to run, but fell with bullets in his leg and side.

The Federal agents hurried their prisoner to a Chillicothe hospital, where doctors said his condition was not serious, then transferred him to the hospital of the Federal Reformatory near Chillicothe. He denied his identity until fingerprinted. Then he dropped into a sullen silence, the officers said.

Called Desperado.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 13. (AP).—Reese Bailey, reported captured by Federal agents in Ohio today, was described by Oscar Pitts, acting director of the North Carolina Penal Division, as "North Carolina's Number One desperado."

Bailey, his brother Ray and a group of associates are alleged by officers to have perpetrated a series of bank robberies in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, as well as numerous holdups and other crimes.

Spanish War Affects Champagne CorkSupply

Reims, France, Nov. 13 (AP).—Champagne vintners today bemoaned a corking bad result of the Spanish civil war. Most champagne corks are imported from Catalonia and the Spanish Basque country. As the civil war progresses, the Spaniards are demanding cash payment for their corks, a procedure frowned upon by the French finance ministry.

The champagne makers appealed to the French government to do something about this situation so that they will not be placed in the unmistakable position of having champagne everywhere with not a cork to pop.

Wedding Plans Shifted When Pastor Is Jailed

Moscow, Nov. 13 (AP).—American Embassy officials were advised tonight that the scheduled marriage of U. S. Vice Consul George Minor and Mildred Wright, both of Charlestown, W. Va., would be performed tomorrow by a Leningrad pastor substituting for the Rev. Mr. Steck, reported jailed on undisclosed charges.

Steck, a Russian-born German Lutheran clergyman, was said to have been one of the dozen persons arrested Wednesday in an alleged anti-Soviet plot.

Mother of 3 Accused As Slayer of Husband

Nebraska City, Nebr., Nov. 13 (AP). Mrs. Mary Taylor, 25, pleaded innocent today to a charge of first degree murder in connection with the death of her husband, Otha Taylor, 33, garage mechanic. Taylor's nude body, with a bullet in the head and bound with wire, rope and blankets, was found in a ravine near here Tuesday night.

Mrs. Taylor, mother of three children, was returned to the city jail, held without bond, pending a preliminary hearing November 18.

Brazil Resents Coffee Slurs, Adventist Missionary Asserts

Coffee holds such an important place in the economic development of Brazil that anyone assuming to say anything against it healthwise is not only looked upon with disfavor, but would be considered the subject of a law suit, according to the Rev. A. W. Hagen, Seventh-Day Adventist missionary in that South American land, who is now spending a few days conferring with officials of the denomination in Takoma Park in connection with his furlough.

Mr. Hagen said: "Coffee is such a tremendous factor in the production of wealth, employment and the increase in population through the ever-increasing acreage on which the coffee bean is planted, that only words of praise for its virtue are welcome there. I know of an instance where the head of the Biological Institute in Sao Paulo threatened to bring a law suit against a publishing house for publishing scientific findings concerning the effects of coffee on the human organism. The people there feel that coffee has done more toward developing the nation, and favorably advertising it in all parts of the world, than any single industry."

As superintendent of the Goyaz Mission, Mr. Hagen travels extensively into the States of Minas Geraes and Goyaz, and "finds a wave of nationalism sweeping over the country, as in all parts where the Wilsonian theory of self-determination of peoples is being taken seriously by the masses.

In speaking of political conditions in Brazil, Mr. Hagen said:

"The country has been in a state of war for a year, due to a Communistic uprising, and the government, under President Vargas, has its hands full fighting against both communism and integralism, which are trying to overturn the present government by force."

Mr. Hagen said he has penetrated into the jungles of Brazil for many hundreds of miles beyond civilization, where he has inspected the educational work among the Caraja Indians, where Adventists are conducting an educational and civilizing work. These Indians live in the nude. He said "there is another tribe, known as the Chavantes, living along the Araguaya river, for whom the Adventists would like to carry on a work of uplift, but they are absolutely unconquered, and are not only savage, but have become suspicious of white men because of having been betrayed by them in the distant past, and they will not allow a white man to even visit them."

Crash Kills Woman, D.C. Driver Held

A Washington man was held by Maryland State police yesterday after the car he was driving crashed into a tree off the Washington-Baltimore highway near Waterloo, Md., killing Mrs. Sarah Brooks, 35, of Baltimore.

The driver, Paul Ward, 42, a painter, of 1553 Wisconsin avenue northwest, suffered lacerations. Police said he told them he struck the tree when he turned out of the highway to let a truck pass.

Mrs. Brooks died in a Baltimore hospital of a fractured skull.

Trooper Names Ohio Fugitives As Abductors

U. S. Agents Help Jersey Hunt Escaped Bandits, Woman in Kidnaping.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 13 (AP).—Federal agents and New Jersey State police pressed tonight a vigorous hunt for two escaped convicts and bank robbers who had been identified as kidnapers of State Trooper William A. Turnbull.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Col. Mark O. Kimberling, superintendent of State police, in simultaneous announcements at Washington and Trenton, identified the men as Harry Brunette, 23, and Merle Vandenbush, 29, of Green Bay, Wis.

Both are fugitives from Ohio State Penitentiary and are wanted for bank hold-ups in Wisconsin, the officials said. They added that the woman companion of the convicts remained unidentified.

Clews Lacking.

Hoover said a "vigorous investigation looking to the apprehension of these fugitives" had been started. Kimberling said there were no clews to the whereabouts of the trio.

Turnbull identified Brunette and Vandenbush from police photographs. He was kidnaped when he stopped a car near Somerville Wednesday for speeding. His abductors threatened to "bump him off" before dumping him in a ditch near Freemansburg, Pa., 50 miles away.

Kimberling and Hoover said an automobile salesman in Detroit had identified Brunette by a photograph as the purchaser of the second hand sedan used in the kidnaping.

Bought After Holdup.

The car was purchased August 22, three days after the $5,628 robbery of the Seymour (Wis.) State Bank. The $4,641 robbery of the Ripon State Bank occured October 2.

The State police head expressed belief the third person in the kidnapers' car, dressed as a woman but at first believed a man, was in reality a woman. The police alarm today described her as about 28, about 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighing 130 pounds, with dark, bobbed hair cut close in back, prominent nose, and wearing a black cloth coat with caracul fur collar.

Department of Justice agents here said the two fugitives escaped last July 12 from the Ohio penitentiary farm at London, where they were serving terms of 5 to 15 years for robbery and assault to rob. They had been arrested in Toledo April 25, 1931.

Grange Resolution Hits Trade Policies

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 13 (AP).—Dissatisfaction with the Government's reciprocal trade agreements was expressed in resolutions submitted today to the seventieth annual session of the National Grange.

Leaders said the organization undoubtedly would go on record urging revision of the agreements when it announces its "platform" for agriculture next week.

One of the resolutions by W. W. Deal, master of the Idaho State Grange, said: "Under present treaties with foreign countries many agricultural products are admitted into the United States free and others at reduced rates, while American manufactured products enjoy the protection of a protective tariff."

"Such treaties place farmers at a disadvantage," said Deal. "I am asking the National Grange to insist upon agreements more equitable to farmers."

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace is to address the Grange tomorrow. It will be his first speech since the election.

Mrs. Roosevelt Talks To Two Communists

Kansas City, Nov. 13 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt invited two avowed Communists to attend a press conference today after her secretary questioned their credentials and requested them to leave.

The two entered the First Lady's hotel room and during a lull in questioning said they were Communists and asserted they "had been beaten by the police" on the University of Kansas City campus and held in jail.

"I believe it would be unbecoming of me to pass judgment when I am an outsider," she replied.

The men said they were Allen L. Randolph and Robert Scott.

Transfer Here For Hoeppels Again Blocked

Pollard Denies U. S. Plea; Remands Father and Son to Jail Cell.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Nov. 13.—Legal complications again balked removal today of Representative John H. Hoeppel and his son, Charles, to Washington, where they are under sentences of four months to a year for conspiring to sell an appointment to the United States Military Academy.

Judge Robert N. Pollard, of the United States District Court, denied the Government's petition for an order of removal and remanded the Hoeppels to Henrico (Richmond) County Jail, where they have been held since Department of Justice agents seized them here on fugitive warrants on November 7.

In denying the removal petition, the judge ruled he did not feel the court here should relinquish custody of the prisoners while their appeal from his dismissal of a writ of habeas corpus was pending. He continued proceedings until November 18, when a petition of the Hoeppels' bondsman, asking custody of the 56-year-old legislator and his son, will be argued. An appeal for release in bail was denied.

Garnett Argues for U. S.

District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, of Washington, who headed Government counsel, argued the case for the Government and said the court could order removal on any of three grounds.

"First," he said, "they are the personal chattels of their bondsman, who, under the law, may seize them in any section of the United States, may even break and enter their homes to seize them. They are fugitive prisoners of the United States Government and we have papers ordering their commitment to jail."

Garnett said his main concern is getting the prisoners out of the custody of Judge Pollard's court.

"All we ask your honor to do is to turn them loose on the streets, even on writ of habeas corpus, and we'll pick them up and return them to Washington," he said. "Their bondsman is entitled to them and has a perfect legal right to them."

Judge Pollard assured Garnett he had no intention of "turning them loose."

Says He's Embarrassed.

The Washington district attorney told the court he was placed in an "embarrassing position" by the delay in the proceedings.

"The U. S. Government has been put to a great expense to return these fugitives—tried and convicted by due processes of law—to begin serving their sentences. Under the law the court is entitled to forfeiture of the bond, which I may have to request.

Judge Pollard, however, ruled he was only concerned with the strict legal phase of section 45 of the United States Supreme Curt as applied to removal proceedings while an appeal from a dismissal of habeas corpus is pending.
